A conversation with Regents' Lecturer, Michelle Krusiec and TFT Dean Brian Kite

Actress and filmmaker Michelle Krusiec has sustained a 25-year career working as a woman of color in an industry that has both tokenized her and given her visibility. In this frank, funny and transparent discussion, Dean Brian Kite speaks with Krusiec about the lessons of invisibility and how it forces us to delve deeper into our work as storytellers.

Streaming live from the UCLA Darren Star Screening Room before a small studio audience.

Michelle Krusiec is an actress and filmmaker. She is presently a director in the 2021 AFI Directing Workshop for Women. Her work as an API artist has been recognized by The White House, the State of California and the Museum of Chinese in America. She recently penned an op-ed for The Washington Post about playing Anna May Wong in Ryan Murphy's Netflix series Hollywood.

Sponsored by UCLA School of Theater, Film and Television, with support from the Center for Asian American Studies, Department of Asian American Studies, Center for the Study of Women
