I. MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR, GRACE KYUNGWON HONG

Looking back on the 2021–2022 academic year is at once a sobering and inspiring endeavor. On February 22 of this year, Texas Governor Greg Abbott instructed state health agencies to classify gender-affirming medical care for transgender children a form of “child abuse,” ordering them to begin investigating parents who provide such care to their children. While this particular incident captured national attention, it is only one of hundreds of policies, bills, laws, and regulations currently being proposed and passed that criminalize and vilify transgender people and that police—often quite literally—gender binarism and gender conformity.

Four months later, the US Supreme Court delivered the Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization decision which overturned Roe v. Wade, leaving it to individual states to determine the legality of abortion. As of August of 2022, twelve states have banned abortion altogether and another two have instituted a six-week cutoff. As before the Dobbs decision, Black, Brown, Indigenous, and Asian American communities are those rendered most precarious by the criminalization of reproduction.

As a social justice feminist research unit, we know that the work we do must attend to these and other pressing struggles. This coming year and thereafter, we will continue to, as our mission statement proclaims, work towards a world in which education and scholarship are tools for social justice feminism, improving the lives of people of all genders.

It has not escaped my notice that my role as CSW’s director thus far has run on a timeline parallel to that of the pandemic; we are both two years in. With that, it is also apparent that the activities of the center during my tenure have been, and are likely to continue to be, strongly influenced, if not determined, by the vicissitudes of virus variants and our attempts to mitigate their damaging effect on our lives. Our research streams, programming, and how we gather as a community have changed as we have sought creative ways to adapt to our pandemic reality. I am proud to say that we have succeeded in doing so for yet another year, and I am excited to share our accomplishments in this report.

The 2021–2022 academic year was our first year as the Center for the Study of Women|Barbra Streisand Center. The Streisand Center has supported a host of initiatives this year, including the inaugural Streisand Fellowship supporting research on “Truth in the Public Sphere.” I encourage you to read more about this and other Streisand Center activities in section III.

We hosted our annual Thinking Gender Graduate Student Conference on April 6–8, 2022, once again as a virtual event. This year’s theme, “Transgender Studies at the Intersections,” brought together scholars, activists, and community members for three days of history-making discourses and collaborations. Section IX of this report details the exciting programming of the conference.
And our research programs continued to thrive:

- In our Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies research stream we made great progress with the UC Sentencing Project, a multicampus initiative to map and analyze long-term sentencing in California. The project was awarded several grants and team members drafted an initial report of their research findings (to be finalized in fall 2022). We also hosted the launch of “Defending Self-Defense,” a community-based, survivor-centered research report created in collaboration with Survived & Punished and Project NIA.

- Graduate student members of the Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) met regularly during the academic year undertaking a process of revising and reimagining the structure and function of the group while several associated faculty members were on leave.

- For the Gender and Water research stream, Professor Jessica Cattelino and a research team of PhD students submitted an article for publication and conducted a small follow-up study on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on household water use.

- CSW|Streisand Center also launched a new research initiative, Just Research? Trans Futures in Health and Scientific Knowledge, that seeks to increase access to public research university resources for transgender, two-spirit, gender-expansive, and intersex communities (TGI) and to align these resources with the needs of these communities. The project is already well underway and has received significant funding in support of its mission.

As always, I wish to give my heartfelt thanks to the center’s amazing staff, graduate and undergraduate student workers, and this year’s faculty leadership—Mishuana Goeman (Associate Director) and Jasmine Nadua Trice (CSW Advisory Committee Chair)—for their hard work and endless support of CSW|Streisand Center’s mission and activities.

I also want to thank everyone who supported the center and our work in so many ways over the past year, from faculty and students to organizers and community members both local and from afar. It takes all of us to create the moving, dynamic, and powerful work that CSW| Streisand Center is known for. Here’s to another year!

II. ABOUT CSW

Established in 1984, the UCLA Center for the Study of Women is the first organized research unit of its kind in the University of California system and an internationally recognized center that creates and sustains a productive intellectual community dedicated to research on gender, sexuality, and women’s issues. Though CSW is housed under the Division of Social Sciences, it is directly supported by the Office of the Chancellor and serves the entire university.

CSW's mission is to work towards a world in which education and scholarship are tools for social justice feminism, improving the lives of people of all genders. It is committed to gender equity and research parity at UCLA, and develops and fosters research, facilitates productive scholarly relationships, and aids in recruitment and retention efforts. It draws on a plethora of departments and professional schools for their expertise. CSW produces original, innovative, and interdisciplinary research; administers research grants for faculty and students; organizes research projects, conferences, seminars, working groups, and public lectures; trains undergraduates and graduate students in best practices of collaborative research; and publishes policy briefs, special journal editions, articles, and blogs that feature research updates, conference reports, faculty profiles, bibliographies, field reports, book reviews, and announcements.

In October 2021, CSW became the administrative home for the UCLA Barbra Streisand Center thanks to a generous gift from the Streisand Foundation. As part of the stewardship, CSW will facilitate research and programming at the Streisand Center that focuses on truth in the public sphere, the impact of art and culture, gendered power dynamics, and the impact of climate change.

III. BARBRA STREISAND CENTER

The UCLA Barbra Streisand Center (Streisand Center) was established in October 2021. The center is housed in the Division of Social Sciences in the College of Letters and Science and administered by CSW. The center will eventually become the Barbra Streisand Institute and the home of four research centers.

A. Truth in the Public Sphere

The Barbra Streisand Fellowship

The Barbra Streisand Fellowship was created in 2022 to provide UCLA scholars with the opportunity to further explore, define, question and critique concepts of “truth” and “public sphere” while exploring the connection to the study of feminism, gender, sexuality, and women. We encouraged applicants to define this topic as broadly and expansively as possible, including questioning, critiquing, and examining the concepts of “truth” and “the public sphere.” An explicit connection to the study of feminism, gender, sexuality, and/or women was required. Projects that also centered analyses of race, settler colonialism, and/or empire were given priority. This year, eight inaugural Barbra Streisand Fellowships were awarded to outstanding faculty and will support their research with grants of up to $20,000. Thirty-four proposals were received from faculty across the university working in disciplines ranging from film to women’s health.

The following eight faculty were awarded:

- Jessica Cattelino, Professor, Anthropology, Gender Studies, and American Indian Studies
  Title of project: “The Truth About LA’s Indigenous Waters”

- Erin Debenport, Associate Professor, Anthropology
  Title of project: “Gender, Revelation, and the Public Sphere: (Un)Reliable Narrators, (Un)Responsive Audiences, and the Power of Online Disclosures”

- Ju Hui Judy Han, Assistant Professor, Gender Studies
  Title of project: “Transforming Feminist Activisms in Korea and the Korean Diaspora”

- Gina Kim, Professor; Film, Television and Digital Media
  Title of project: “America Town”

- Thu-Huong Nguyen-Vo, Associate Professor, Asian Languages and Cultures, and Asian American Studies
  Title of project: “Almost Futures: Vietnamese and Refugee Elusion of Humanist Sovereignty”

- Ellen Scott, Associate Professor; Theater, Film, and Television
  Title of project: “Bitter Ironies, Tender Hopes: Black Women’s Film Criticism, Television Reflections and Media Activism”

- Paula Tavrow, Adjunct Professor, Community Health Sciences
  Title of project: “Crisis Pregnancy Centers in the United States: Effects of Gender and Race/Ethnicity on (Mis)Information and Advice Given”

- Jasmine Nadua Trice, Associate Professor, Cinema and Media Studies
  Title of project: “Parallel Practices: Southeast Asian Film in the Capitalocene”

B. The Impact of Art on the Culture

- Programming

  Thinking Gender 2022: Trans Day of Visibility Storytelling Workshop
As part of the graduate conference, “Thinking Gender 2022: Transgender Studies at the Intersections,” the Streisand Center sponsored the creative workshop, “Trans Day of Visibility Storytelling.” Led by Jensen Reyes, a nonbinary multidisciplinary artist based in Los Angeles, whose work draws from their experiences growing up as a queer, working class, Filipinx American in Southern California, this workshop provided a space for gender diverse, non-conforming, trans and intersex people to engage in expansive conversations through storytelling rooted in their lived experiences.

Partnerships
The Streisand Center cosponsored the following events that thematically engaged with the impact of art on the culture.

Conference: Permanence and Decay
Organized by the Graduate Students Association in European Languages and Transcultural Studies, this conference examined how periods during which cultural and political conventions appeared as though they would endure have alternated with periods of crisis and widespread instability. The conference explored how changing (or unshakeable) beliefs on sexuality, gender, birth, death, memory, and truth have influenced each other and shaped European culture, literature, and politics.

Panel: Representing Disability after CODA
In recognition of the importance of thinking intersectionally and with respect to the feminist and gendered aspects of current disability and representation theories this panel was hosted by Dr. Victoria Lewis, a long-time television and theater actor with a physical disability, UCLA Ph.D. graduate, and professor emerita of Redlands University. This event was in partnership with the UCLA School of Theater, Film and Television.

C. The Dynamics of Intimacy and Power Between Women and Men

Programming

Defending Self-Defense: A Call to Action by Survived & Punished
The Streisand Center contributed to the launch of this groundbreaking report at a much-lauded virtual event. For more details, see section VI on Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies.

Faculty Research Grants

- Molly Fox, Assistant Professor, Anthropology
  Title of project: “Impact of Socio-Cultural Stressors on Gestational Physiology and their Associations with Pregnancy Complications in a Cohort of Latinas”
• Jessica Gibson, Professor, Community Health Services
  Title of project: “Meeting the Needs of Abortion Refugees in Los Angeles in the Post-Roe Era”

Partnerships
The Streisand Center cosponsored the following events that thematically engaged with the dynamics of intimacy and power between women and men:

9th Annual UCLA Children’s Discovery and Innovation Institute Symposium: The Science of Gender
The symposium, focused on “The Science of Gender,” generated cross-campus collaborations to advance translational child health research. The Children’s Discovery and Innovation Institute encourages multidisciplinary child health research and training at UCLA across the spectrum of basic, translational, clinical and health services research. The topic was highlighted by speakers from across campus and across the globe with thoughtful presentations and discussions about gender. This event was in collaboration with the UCLA David Geffen School of Medicine.

Student Opportunities
During the 2021–2022 academic year, the Streisand Center provided graduate student Stephanie Lumsden and undergraduate student Leah Savage with the resources to travel to the National Conference for Physician Scholars in the Social Sciences and Humanities. They presented their research with the UC Sentencing Project, a team of faculty and students from three University of California campuses and the University of Southern California. The team is conducting the first largescale study on the specific effects of sentencing and incarceration on women, transgender, and non-binary people in the criminal legal system, including how gender, race, sexuality, socioeconomic status, and region influence the length of sentences.

D. The Impact of Climate Change

Research
In addition to support from the Streisand Fellowship, the Streisand Center supported an earlier phase of the interdisciplinary research collaboration, “Gender and Water,” led by Jessica Cattelino, professor of anthropology, and Rachel Lee, former director of the UCLA Center for the Study of Women. Together with a team of researchers, including a graduate student whose position was funded by the Streisand Center, they investigated the important but understudied role of gender—as it intersects with race and class—in residential water use in Los Angeles. The results of the study are expected to yield recommendations for legislators and policymakers on how to reduce water use, increase use of greywater, and encourage other sustainable indoor and outdoor residential... practices. For more information see section VII on Gender and Everyday Water Use in Los Angeles Households.

IV. SEXUAL VIOLENCE AND INTERSECTIONALITY

A. What is Sexual Violence and Intersectionality?
Led by CSW/Streisand Center Director Grace Hong, this research stream seeks to bring insights from gender studies scholarship to bear on sexual assault policy on campus and beyond. A key intervention of CSW/Streisand Center’s work on this issue is advocacy for anti-carceral approaches to sexual violence; that is, approaches that understand sexual violence as a feature of policing and the carceral state and propose ways of achieving justice that look to non-punitve and anti-carceral alternatives. Doing so means understanding sexual violence as a function of race, nationalism, and empire, as well as gender and sexual inequity. Moreover, this stream seeks to harness the wealth of expertise on sexual power and politics generated by feminist scholars who are rarely consulted in the establishment and implementation of policies to address sexual misconduct on university campuses. This research stream was dormant in 2021–2022. This research stream often overlaps in part with our Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies stream, and we encourage you to read that section (section VI) for related events and projects.

V. BLACK FEMINISM INITIATIVE

A. What is the Black Feminism Initiative?
The CSW Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) was established in fall 2019 to honor and encourage Black feminist thought and visions for political transformation. Initiated and led by inaugural BFI Director Sarah Haley (Associate Professor, Gender Studies and African American Studies), BFI supports interdisciplinary research and social engagements that are grounded in Black feminist and Black queer frameworks of analysis. It highlights Black feminist work in a myriad of forms, with a particular focus on projects that challenge state and interpersonal violence, consider intramural forms of relation and refusal, and engage Black feminist assembly and collective organizing practice. BFI is also especially invested in questions of social reproduction and reproductive justice, contemporary and historical regimes of captivity and carcerality, and Black feminist art and expressive culture.

BFI supports a faculty/graduate student working group, graduate research, and public talks and events on subjects of pressing political and social concerns. BFI also cosponsors thematically related campus events, provides funding for graduate students as resources permit, and actively promotes a university and society where all Black lives flourish.

B. Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group
BFI organizes a monthly workshop for faculty and graduate students to discuss topics in Black feminism and to workshop in-progress writing and ideas. In 2021–2022, graduate student members met on their own, as most of the faculty members were on leave. The graduate students worked to revise and determine the structure and function of the group. The members of the organizing committee for the group were: Ariel Hart (PhD student in Sociology and MD student in the Charles R. Drew/UCLA Medical Education Program and UCLA Medical Scientist Training Program), Ebony Oldham (PhD student in Gender Studies), Rosie Stockton (PhD student in Gender Studies), and Jennifer Uribe (PhD student in Sociology). The working group met virtually two to three times per quarter during the academic year. Each meeting was attended by 5 to 11 members.

The 2021–2022 BFI graduate cohort included:

- Alea Adigweme, Interdisciplinary Studio Art
- Akua Agyen, Anthropology and Social Welfare
- Blair Black, Ethnomusicology

C. Black Feminism Initiative Graduate Fellowships

Open to current UCLA graduate students, BFI established two fellowships to support intellectual work that centers Black feminist frameworks of analysis. In the tradition of abolitionist feminist activism and labor, BFI Graduate Fellowships seek to advance Black feminist work on any topic with a focus on scholarship that interrogates historical and ongoing regimes of violence, enclosure, and captivity and offers original insights for conceiving of freedom, redress, abolition, and refusal. Each $1,000 fellowship supports graduate research, conference travel, or the acquisition of necessary materials for in-progress dissertation or thesis projects.

Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research

This fellowship honors and continues the work of Alisa Bierria, whose writing explores race, intentionality, intimate organizing, anti-Black racism, carceral culture, gendered violence, and anti-carceral approaches to justice. At UC Berkeley, she founded the Feminist Anti-Carceral Policy and Research Initiative. With organizations such as Communities Against Rape and Abuse (CARA), the Free Marissa Now Mobilization Campaign, and Incite! Women of Color Against Violence, Bierria has meaningfully challenged sexual violence and the carceral state. Her activism has been instrumental in securing the freedom of criminalized survivors of gender violence.

The 2021–2022 Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research recipients is:

- Sonya Brooks, Urban Schooling

Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research

This fellowship honors and continues the work of Mariame Kaba, whose writing examines policing, abolition, gendered state violence, youth activism, organizing and leadership, interpersonal violence, and anti-carceral approaches to justice. She has been at the helm of numerous grassroots organizations that have educated the public, mobilized against racial terror, and challenged gender violence: Project NIA, the Chicago Freedom School, the Chicago Alliance to Free Marissa Alexander, Incite! Women of Color Against Violence, and We Charge Genocide, to name a few. She runs the social media account Prison Culture, which has reshaped public understandings of the carceral state and abolition.
Along with Ayanna Banks Harris, Sumayya Coleman, Colby Lenz, Hyejin Shim, and Stacy Suh, Bierria and Kaba cofounded Survived & Punished (S&P), a national project that develops policy and research strategies to challenge the criminalization of survivors of domestic and sexual violence. S&P organizes defense campaigns on behalf of criminalized survivors of gender violence, advocates for commutations, and produces training materials. Among the leading activists and thinkers working in abolitionist feminism, their respective lectures, scholarly and popular essays, books, educational curricula, institutional leadership, curatorial projects, and organizing have had an expansive and profound impact on scholars, public audiences, and community organizers alike.

The 2021–2022 Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research recipients are as follows:

- Jeanette Charles, History
- Dominique Montgomery, Social Welfare

D. CSW Postdoctoral Scholar
This year, CSW hosted postdoctoral scholar, Dr. Eve Lorane Brown, sponsored by Sarah Haley. Brown was a Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow and UCLA Postdoctoral Scholar. Her project was titled, "Still They Rise! Exploring the impact of stigma, discrimination, and violence in the lives of African American transgender women.” Dr. Brown received her PhD in Psychology at UC Santa Cruz and was a University of California President's Postdoctoral Scholar in African American Studies at UC Berkeley. Brown has accepted a position as assistant professor in Black Studies at UC Santa Barbara starting July 1, 2022.

E. CSW and Campus Support of the Black Feminism Initiative
Along with providing administrative support, CSW is committed to providing financial support to BFI programming and students. In academic year 2020–2021, BFI returned unused mutual-aid funds (from 2019–2020) to CSW. CSW used $2,500 from the returned funds to support the BFI Graduate Fellowships for 2021–2022. In spring 2022, BFI provided $16,000 total in research funding to five graduate students to support their research in Black Feminism. This research funding was separate from the BFI graduate fellowships.

Financial Support
Professor Sarah Haley (inaugural BFI director) contributes $15,000 per year from research funds she received from the Social Sciences Division to support BFI, and the funds are housed at CSW. BFI also receives donor and cosponsor support. The following UCLA organizations and donors provided financial support in academic year 2021–2022 for BFI’s graduate student fellowships and stipends, as well as a postdoctoral scholar.

F. Future Goals
For the 2022–2023 academic year, the BFI Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group will continue to meet as closed workshops for members only.

VI. FEMINIST ANTI-CARCERAL STUDIES

A. What is Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies?
Initiated and led by inaugural Black Feminism Initiative Director Sarah Haley and CSW|Streisand Center Director Grace Hong, this research stream combines research, dissemination of scholarship, engagement with social justice feminist organizations, and institution-building through an anti-carceral feminist framework of analysis. Anti-carceral feminism contests the use of gender as a justification for prison expansion and works against the increasing incarceration of women, queer, and transgender people. This is especially critical in California, where legislators have employed the language of gender-responsiveness to fund prison expansion. This project attends to specific forms of gendered and racial violence in prisons and jails, including sexual violence and retaliation, and to the disproportionate impact of prisons on LGBTQ communities. The project also examines the relationship of incarceration to reproductive and economic justice, and highlights movements to oppose the carceral state as critical to social justice feminism.

B. UC Sentencing Project
Since spring 2021, the UC Sentencing Project serves as the umbrella for the collaboration between the original UC Sentencing Project and CSW|Streisand Center's Special Circumstances Conviction Project (SCCP).
The UC Sentencing Project gathers, analyzes, and disseminates data on long-term prison sentences in California. The data allows community members and policymakers to understand how long-term incarceration affects Los Angeles and other California communities. Working with community partner organization California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP), the project tracks how gender, race, socioeconomic status, region/county, and other factors influence the length of sentences and parole decisions.

SCCP analyzes the prevalence and impact of the use of special circumstances in criminal sentencing in California. Under California law, “special circumstances” delineate the conditions under which people can be sentenced to life without the possibility of parole (LWOP). Despite the severity of the sentence and its impact on California’s communities, there has thus far not been a comprehensive collection or analysis of what specific convictions have led to over 5,000 people serving LWOP, nor how race, age, gender, and other factors may affect the sentences they receive. SCCP collects and analyzes data gleaned through Public Records Act requests and disseminates findings to legislators, policymakers, nongovernmental organizations, scholars, and impacted communities.

By uniting the projects, we are able to bring the qualitative data collected by the UC Sentencing Project to bear on SCCP’s quantitative data and vice versa. The collaboration allows for a more comprehensive and rigorous analysis of California sentencing practices and the effect of these practices on the incarcerated population, by framing the information garnered from large data sets in lived experience. Information on incarcerated trans and non-binary populations, in particular, is absent from government statistics, and the analysis of the conditions of incarceration for this population would therefore rely more heavily on qualitative data. This collaboration, then, serves the objectives of both projects and strengthens their potential for substantially impacting public policy.

The UC Sentencing Project’s team members are:

- Alisa Bierrria, Assistant Professor, Gender Studies, UCLA; Co-Founder, Survived & Punished
- Joseph Hankins, Assistant Professor, Anthropology; Vice Chair, Graduate Studies of Anthropology; Associate Director, Critical Gender Studies, University of California San Diego
- Grace Hong, Director, CSW|Streisand Center; Professor, Gender Studies and Asian American Studies, UCLA
- Sid Jordan, PhD Student, Social Welfare, UCLA; JD, University of Victoria
- Colby Lenz, Deputy Director of Policy and Community Research, CSW|Streisand Center, Co-Founder, Survived & Punished; Legal Advocate and Organizer, California Coalition for Women Prisoners
• Stephanie Lumsden, PhD Student, Gender Studies, UCLA; Legal Advocate and Organizer, California Coalition for Women Prisoners

• Laura Santos, Legal Advocate and Organizer, California Coalition for Women Prisoners

• Emily Thuma, Assistant Professor, Politics and Law, University of Washington, Tacoma

The SCCP team members are:

• Randall Akee, Associate Professor Public Policy; Chair, American Indian Studies Program, UCLA

• Grace Hong, Director, CSW|Streisand Center; Professor, Gender Studies and Asian American Studies, UCLA

• Angela Lee, MA Student, Public Health and Public Policy, UCLA

• Joanne Scheer, Founder, Felony Murder Elimination Project

• Daniel Trautfield, Project Director, Felony Murder Elimination Project, Organizer, Drop LWOP Coordinating and Legislative teams

During the year, research team members transcribed and coded over 20 hours of interviews and focus group data. Team members drafted a report of the findings from focus group interviews conducted in 2019. The report is expected to be completed in fall 2022.

Grant Funding

The project was awarded several grants:

UCLA Transdisciplinary Research Acceleration Grant (TRAG)

PI: Grace Hong
Co-PI: Randall Akee
Title: “Special Circumstances Conviction Project”
Award Amount: $25,000
Award Period: 7/1/2021–6/30/2022

The grant supported the collection, management, and analysis of data.

UC San Diego Advancing Racial Justice (ARJ) Grant

PI: Joe Hankins
Award Amount: $30,000
Award Period: 7/1/2022–6/30/2023

Starting July 1, 2022, the ARJ and RSJ grants will fund research via surveys and, where possible, peer interviews and focus groups, with currently incarcerated people. The survey instruments and interview protocol will be developed in consultation with our community advisory board, made up of formerly incarcerated members of our partner organization, the California Coalition for Women Prisoners.

In addition, team member Daniel Trautfield received a Microsoft Catalyst grant through the Felony Murder Elimination Project. He will be producing reports, fact sheets, and other documents for the Drop LWOP Coalition and other organizations based on SCCP data.

In collaboration with Survived & Punished (a national prison abolition organization working to end the criminalization of survivors of gender violence) and Project NIA (a grassroots organization that works to end the arrest, detention, and incarceration of children and young adults by promoting restorative and transformative justice practices), CSW|Streisand Center launched the research report “Defending Self-Defense: A Call to Action by Survived & Punished.” “Defending Self-Defense” is a community-based, survivor-centered research initiative that identifies key patterns in the criminalization of self-defense and recommendations to transform the conditions of criminalized survival.

On March 31, 2022, CSW|Streisand Center hosted a virtual launch event where the project’s research team and survivor advisory council presented the findings and recommendations of the report. The event was held in honor of the late Tewkunzi Green, a member of the survivor advisory council. Event participants included the following project team members:

• Mariame Kaba, Co-Founder, Survived & Punished; Founder, Project NIA

The virtual event was attended by 380 individuals and was cosponsored by the Criminal Justice Program, the Critical Race Studies Program, and the Williams Institute, all at UCLA School of Law, and Gender Studies.

Attendees lauded the event in their feedback. This comment echoed the sentiments of many: “I so deeply appreciated hearing all the survivors’ experiences. The event felt safe, and welcoming, and genuine.” Many also described the event as “powerful,” “honest,” “open,” and “vulnerable.” Others expressed their appreciation for the collaborative methods and forms of presentation, “I really appreciated hearing from survivors of domestic violence and [the] prison industrial complex. Their testimonies and narratives highlighted the key themes of the report and helped anchor it for the audience. It was a wonderful collaborative project, and I appreciated the methodological model they offered to the audience.”

D. Trans Behind Bars Podcast

The Trans Behind Bars podcast was created by community organizers from the Transgender Advocacy Group (TAG). Supported by a $5,000 grant from the University of California Humanities Research Institute (UCHRI), the Trans Behind Bars podcast profiles members from our incarcerated transgender/gender-variant/intersex (TGI) community and expose the systemic policing and imprisonment of TGI people. Trans Behind Bars is one of the first podcasts focusing exclusively on oral histories of resistance and survival by trans people behind bars.

TAG is an abolitionist grassroots coalition supporting transgender individuals incarcerated by the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitations.

The podcast team members are:

• Jasmine LaShay Jones, Legal assistant, Transgender, Gender-Variant, and Intersex Justice Project; Organizer, Transgender Advocacy Group
- Freddie Francis, Organizer, Transgender Advocacy Group; Communications consultant; Alum, Women’s Policy Institute’s Leadership & Public Policy Training Program
- Ren-yo Hwang, Assistant Professor, Gender Studies and the Program of Critical Social Thought, Mount Holyoke College
- Grace Hong, Director, CSW|Streisand Center; Professor, Gender Studies and Asian American Studies, UCLA

E. Research and Policy Hub

CSW|Streisand Center has become a statewide hub for research and policy expertise at the intersections of gender violence and criminalization. A go-to resource for gendered analysis of criminalization policies, this year Colby Lenz consulted state legislators, legislative staff, and officials from state agencies on policies related to resentencing, parole, clemency, and immigration, as well as conditions in California prisons, jails, and ICE detention centers. Lenz also analyzed the implementation of related policy reforms for numerous public agencies, including the Governor’s Office and the Attorney General’s Office. Additionally, Lenz advised The Sentencing Project’s national report on felony murder, the California Committee on the Revision of the Penal Code on sentencing statutes related to gender violence and criminalization, and research teams across California developing studies on the treatment of survivors of gender violence in criminalization processes.

F. Future Goals

CSW|Streisand Center will continue its collaboration with community stakeholders of its feminist anti-carceral research platform and abolitionist advocacy. In 2022–2023, this will include programming in response to the US Supreme Court’s assault on reproductive rights and criminalization of abortion in its decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization overturning Roe v. Wade.

As a next step for the Defending Self-Defense research initiative, CSW|Streisand Center Deputy Director of Policy and Community Research Colby Lenz plans to develop an attorney network that focuses on the practice of survivor legal defense. We will also continue to reorganize the research stream to focus on transformative justice approaches to gender and sexual violence and draw on our networks to create a transformative training and research program for the UCLA community.

VII. GENDER AND EVERYDAY WATER USE IN LOS ANGELES HOUSEHOLDS

A. What is Gender and Water?

The Gender and Everyday Water Use in Los Angeles Households research stream (Gender and Water), led by Professor of Anthropology Jessica Cattelino, is now in its sixth year. Funded by a grant from UCLA’s Sustainable Los Angeles Grand Challenge Program in 2016, this research stream is primarily focused on a study that investigates the important but understudied role of gender—as it intersects with race and class—in residential water use in Los Angeles. Many much-needed Los Angeles water conservation efforts take place within households, where research has shown that divisions of labor and decision-making often are gendered. The Gender and Water research team incorporates mixed methods—particularly ethnographic interviewing and water diaries—to identify patterns in water perceptions and practices that are vital to efforts of change.

B. Accomplishments
During the 2021–2022 academic year, Jessica Cattelino and a research team of PhD students drafted an article manuscript and submitted for publication (pending), and they conducted a small follow-up study to determine whether the COVID-19 pandemic had altered patterns in household water use (data suggest it exacerbated gender inequities). Previously, they had published five working papers as part of the Gender and Everyday Water Use in Los Angeles Households Working Paper Series.

The 2021–2022 research team members were:

- Nikhit Agrawal, Graduate Student, Anthropology, UCLA
- Megan Baker, Graduate Student, Anthropology, UCLA
- Jessica Cattelino, Principal Investigator, Anthropology, UCLA
- Courtney Cecale, Assistant Professor, Anthropology, University of North Texas
- Thalia Gomez-Quintana, Graduate Student, Gender Studies, UCLA
- Kelsey Kim, Graduate Student, Anthropology, UCLA

C. Future Goals
Future goals include publishing additional peer-reviewed journal articles and public outreach.

VIII. JUST RESEARCH? TRANS FUTURES IN HEALTH AND SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE

A. What is Just Research?
Started in 2021, Just Research? Trans Futures in Health and Scientific Knowledge (Just Research?) is a trans- and two-spirit-led team of community organizers, university faculty, and students in California working at the intersections of gender, racial, economic, and disability justice. The group’s goal is to increase access to public research university resources for transgender, two-spirit, gender-expansive, and intersex communities’ (TGI) and to align these resources with the needs of these communities.

This initiative stands in recognition of an ongoing history of harm enacted against TGI people in pursuit of health and scientific knowledge in the academy, and that TGI people and community organizations have developed research and knowledge-making practices outside of universities. It aims to cultivate a network of scholars and community leaders interested in strengthening the interdisciplinary field of transgender studies and in building capacities for community-driven and justice-centered research in alignment with the fight for TGI liberation.
The team envisions a more ethical and justice-oriented role for public research universities in the pursuit of TGI-related scholarship and works for a future in which research about TGI people is relevant to and rooted in the knowledge, priorities, and practices of TGI people and communities and in which community researchers are valued, well resourced, and credited.

The Just Research? team members are:

- Cydney Brown, Community Advocate
- Dannie Ceseña, Transgender Health Equity Manager, California LGBTQ Health and Human Services Network
- Mel Y. Chen, Associate Professor, Gender & Women’s Studies, UC Berkeley
- Christoph Hanssmann, Assistant Professor, Women and Gender Studies, San Francisco State University
- Grace Hong, Director, CSW|Streisand Center; Professor, Gender Studies and Asian American Studies, UCLA
- Sid Jordan, PhD student, Social Welfare, UCLA
- Ezak Perez, Executive Director, Gender Justice LA
- Vanessa Warri, PhD Student, Social Welfare, UCLA

B. Tooth and Nail: A Trans Critique of the University
   Members of Just Research? participated in a panel workshop titled “Tooth and Nail: A Trans Critique of the University” that concluded the three-day 2022 Thinking Gender graduate student conference (TG22). TG22 keynote speaker Jules Gill-Peterson (Associate Professor, History, Johns Hopkins University) presented a critique of academia from a trans perspective, followed by a conversation with Christoph Hanssmann, Sid Jordan, and Vanessa Warri. The virtual event was open to the public and 83 individuals attended. See section IX for additional details.

C. Research Initiative
   As its first initiative, the Just Research? team started the first part of a multi-stage research project: open-ended qualitative interviews and oral histories with key TGI community organizers to collect their expertise on definitions of research and knowledge production; research priorities and needs; and experiences of collaboration with university-based researchers.

D. Funding Sources
   In its first year of operation, the Just Research? initiative received the following funding in support of its work.

The Center for HIV Identification, Prevention, and Treatment Services (CHIPTS)
Award Amount: $2,000
Award Period: 7/1/2021 – 1/31/2022
This grant supported compensating team members for their work.
Office for Research and Creative Activities (ORCA)
Award Amount: $30,000
Award Period: 7/1/2021 – 6/30/2022

This grant supported compensating team members for their work, as well as research participant incentives.

Hub for Health Intervention, Policy and Practice (HHIPP)
Award Amount: $15,000
Award Period: 7/1/2021 – 6/30/2023

This grant has and will support analysis of data and compensating team members for their work.

UC Humanities Research Institute (UCHRI) Endowed Humanities Grant
Award Amount: $5,000
Award Period: 7/1/2022 – 12/31/2023

This grant will fund the second stage of the research initiative listed above: a day and a half convening that will bring together community- and university-based organizers, researchers, and scholars from across all disciplines to collaboratively identify research priorities and methodological framings for knowledge production in service of TGI communities

E. Future Goals
The Just Research? team members are currently conducting the first stage of the research project, which is expected to conclude in August 2022. Following part one, they will proceed with the second stage of the project as described above.

IX. Thinking Gender 2022: “Transgender Studies at the Intersections”

For the second year in a row, the Thinking Gender Graduate Student Research Conference was held virtually as a result of the ongoing pandemic. We decided to center the Thinking Gender 2022 around the theme of “Transgender Studies at the Intersections.” The theme was a response to the continuous, pervasive threat to transgender people’s lives and well-being in our society, including in academia. Scholars at UCLA, specifically, have been highly criticized for engaging in damaging and exploitative research involving transgender subjects in the past couple of years. This problematic work stands against a background of historical persecution and oppression of transgender people. The conference theme, then, sought to capture both the history and present moment of transgender studies, and to bring together a community of transgender scholars and activists for dialogue and connecting.
Now in its 32nd year, Thinking Gender 2022 (as well as Thinking Gender 2021) had a different format from previous in-person conferences. In lieu of public paper presentations, we invited 23 selected applicants to participate in small, closed virtual workshops for works-in-progress. We concluded the conference with a public virtual keynote event. The conference took place April 6–8, 2022.

Thinking Gender is coordinated by a UCLA graduate student researcher, and our 2022 Thinking Gender Coordinator was Angel De Luna Escobedo, MA student in social welfare. Escobedo collaborated closely with Thinking Gender Faculty Director Rana Marie Jaleel, CSW|Streisand Center Director Grace Hong, and CSW|Streisand Center staff in refining the conference theme and planning the program.

The keynote address was presented by renowned scholar and author Jules Gill-Peterson (Associate Professor, Johns Hopkins University), followed by a dialogue between Gill-Peterson and scholar and artist Mel Y Chen (Associate Professor, UC Berkeley), both with long expertise in the field of transgender studies.

Thinking Gender 2022 was a resounding success. Gill-Peterson called it “historic.” The virtual keynote event attracted 220 attendees. One attendee said the talk was “incredible!” and that “I think this was the most engaging, enlightening, interesting talk I’ve ever participated in (either in person or virtually).” Another attendee remarked that, “This was a dynamic and generous way to offer a keynote—Professor Gill-Peterson’s presentation was ambitious, deeply ethical, brilliant and provocative. Hearing Professor Chen respond to the presentation both emotionally and intellectually felt like a way of respecting the labor that Professor Gill-Peterson put into the presentation. And it is always exciting to hear from graduate students as their questions and concerns are indicative of the future horizons of our shared fields.” “Fantastic,” “honest,” and “vulnerable” were among the many other accolades we received as feedback.

A. Pre-Conference Workshop: “Trans Day of Visibility Storytelling Workshop”
   On March 31, 2022, the International Transgender Day of Visibility (TDOV), Angel De Luna Escobedo organized a creative workshop for gender diverse, non-conforming, trans, and intersex people to engage in expansive and ambivalent conversations through storytelling rooted in their lived experiences. The workshop was facilitated by Filipinx American artist Jensen Reyes. Ten participants engaged with questions of invisibility and hypervisibility, privately and publicly. One participant said that it was “A gentle and generative space to connect with other queer and trans folks on TDOV. The day is so important and always feels peculiar and bittersweet. The workshop served as a really nice cap to my day.”

B. Closed Workshops
   This year, as in 2021, we replaced traditional paper presentations with six workshops of up to four participants each, for a total of 22 graduate students who had submitted a paper, article, chapter, or mixed media in progress. The works-in-progress were circulated a month in advance to the attendees and moderator for each workshop. Each workshop was moderated by an invited faculty member and provided participants with a unique opportunity to receive in-depth feedback and recommendations on their work. The two-hour workshops allowed a 20-minute discussion of each participant’s work. Participants were also able to attend two of the other workshops as observers if they chose. Continuing the policy initiated at Thinking Gender 2019, CSW|Streisand Center offered an honorarium to moderators, compensating them for their expertise, time, and contributions. Moderators came from San Francisco State University, Trent University (Ontario, Canada), UC Santa Cruz, University of Chicago, University of Southern California, and Yale University.

Workshop participants expressed great enthusiasm and appreciation for the workshop format and the opportunity it presented to receive meaningful feedback from the expert moderator and their peers. Here is a selection of their comments:

• “This was my first time being on a workshop panel and I found it immensely generative. Panelists and participants were so generous with feedback. Everyone commented on everyone else’s work, which I found very helpful. There was substantial resonance across papers which I wish I could experience more!

• “Not only was it an incredible experience to present with [name redacted] moderating our conversation, the sense of trans people engaged in each other’s scholarly work at an academic conference being normalized through these workshops makes my heart tender and provides me with so much hope as I continue to build my career. Providing spaces in which transgender grad students can share and discuss work is so incredibly important to our ability to do our work through transgender studies and learn from each other as "trans" is not able to describe the vastness of individual experiences.”

• “I have never been a part of a panel that felt so tender and helpful. I loved that we were in community, got a chance to look at the papers ahead of time, and spend the workshop with each other while commenting on our pieces.”

The workshop participants were chosen by a selection committee consisting of:

• Angel De Luna Escobedo, Thinking Gender 2022 Conference Coordinator, MA Student, Social Welfare, UCLA
• Grace Hong, CSW|Streisand Center Director; Professor, Asian American Studies and Gender Studies, UCLA
• Rana Marie Jaleel, Thinking Gender Faculty Director, Associate Professor; Gender, Sexuality, and Women’s Studies; UC Davis

---

1 One of the 23 applicants we invited did not submit their final work-in-progress, hence the total of 22 accepted students. Of these, two were unable to attend their workshop resulting in 20 students who participated in the workshops.
C. Keynote Event: “Street Queens and the Promise of Intersectional Trans Studies”

For the keynote event held on April 6, 2022, the keynote speaker gave an opening presentation, followed by a dialogue with the discussant. Dr. Jules Gill-Peterson spoke on the topic of “Street Queens and the Promise of Intersectional Trans Studies.” Gill-Peterson is the author of Histories of the Transgender Child (Minnesota, 2018), winner of a Lambda Literary Award and the Children’s Literature Association book prize. She also serves as General Co-Editor of TSQ: Transgender Studies Quarterly. The Thinking Gender coordinator and the Thinking Gender consultant then posed questions to the keynote speaker and discussant, and facilitated a concluding audience Q&A.

Keynote speaker:

- Jules Gill-Peterson, Associate Professor, History, Johns Hopkins University

Discussant:

- Mel Y Chen, Associate Professor, Gender & Women’s Studies, UC Berkeley; Director for the Center for the Study of Sexual Culture, UC Berkeley

Moderators:

- Angel De Luna Escobedo, Thinking Gender 2022 Conference Coordinator; MA Student, Social Welfare, UCLA
- Sid Jordan, PhD Student, Social Welfare, UCLA

Publications

The Thinking Gender 2022 keynote event was recorded, and the video is available on CSW|Streisand Center’s YouTube channel. We also published a blog promoting the event on CSW|Streisand Center’s website, as well as an interview with Escobedo. For a list of all CSW|Streisand Center’s blog posts and links, see Appendix 10.

D. Public Workshop: “Tooth and Nail: A Trans Critique of the University”

On the final day of the conference, a virtual workshop open to the public titled “Tooth and Nail: A Trans Critique of the University” brought Thinking Gender 2022 to a close. Jules Gill-Peterson was in roundtable discussion with members of statewide community-university initiative Just Research? Trans Futures in Health and Scientific Knowledge. The conversation centered on how trans studies—and trans people in academia—can confront the painful reality and history of the university’s effects on both. They asked, what does it look like to be trans and do trans work from a critical perspective on the university as an institution? And, how can thinking through UCLA’s history, in particular, inform how we imagine a more ethical and justice-centered vision for the public university’s relationship to transgender people?
Roundtable discussants:

- Christoph Hanssmann, Assistant Professor, Women and Gender Studies, San Francisco State University
- Sid Jordan, PhD Student, Social Welfare, UCLA
- Jules Gill-Peterson, Associate Professor, History, Johns Hopkins University
- Vanessa Warri, PhD Student, Social Welfare, UCLA

The workshop was attended by 83 enthusiastic participants. One person noted that it was a “lively, inspiring, informative discussion.” Another said, “The panelists were ‘excellent’ and the orientation to what we can do was important and felt hopeful.” And a third participant said they “enjoyed hearing about the current state of research in the trans community and also the details about where there still needs to be progress.”

E. Artwork by Rommy Torrico

CSW|Streisand Center commissioned a conference poster from artist Rommy Torrico for the visual design of Thinking Gender 2022. For a copy of the Thinking Gender flyer, see Appendix 1.

B. Research Excellence Award for UCLA Associate Professors

Now in its sixth year, the Research Excellence Award for UCLA Associate Professors was offered once again by CSW/Streisand Center and the Institute of American Cultures (IAC). This award consists of a monograph manuscript (or equivalent) workshop to promote continuing excellence in scholarship that addresses questions important to the fields of critical race and postcolonial studies and/or gender, sexuality, and ethnic studies by UCLA professors at the associate level. Award recipients are nominated by a fellow faculty member, within or outside of UCLA. If selected, the recipient’s nominator also co-organizes the workshop. Each workshop organizer invites a distinguished external reader from the recipient's field, as well as a select group of local colleagues and intellectual interlocutors to read the manuscript and provide detailed feedback. The workshop’s goal is to provide awardees an extended and detailed discussion of their manuscript to develop a pragmatic plan of action for revisions.

2020–2021 Award Recipient

- Jessica Schwartz (Musicology) postponed her workshop to the 2022–2023 academic year due to the impact of COVID-19 on her research.
2021–2022 Award Recipients

- Jennifer Chun (Asian American Studies) postponed her workshop to the 2022–2023 academic year due to the impact of COVID-19 on her research.

- Stella Nair (Art History) completed her workshop for a manuscript titled The Gendered Landscapes of Inca Architecture on June 10, 2022.

C. Faculty Research Grants

Every year, CSW|Streisand Center offers grants to UCLA faculty for research development, new project development that may lead to external funding opportunities, and project completion that could be considered for CSW|Streisand Center publications (policy briefs and research reports).

2019–2020 Recipients

Due to COVID-19, the following 2019–2020 Faculty Research Grant recipients were granted a second extension to 2021–2022:

- Kian Goh, Assistant Professor, Urban Planning
  Project title: “Resilience from Below: Community Visions of Just Urban Futures in Post-Hurricane Sandy New York City”
  CSW|Streisand Center reached out for a project report but did not receive a response.

- Liz Koslov, Assistant Professor, Urban Planning
  Project title: “Retreat: Moving to Higher Ground in a Climate-Changed City”
Due to COVID-19, Koslov decided to pause her research and return the funds to CSW|Streisand Center.

- Norma Mendoza-Denton, Professor, Anthropology
  Project title: “Norteñas: Developing a graphic ethnography format for stories of Latina girls involved in gangs”
  CSW|Streisand Center reached out for a project report but did not receive a response.

2020–2021 Recipients

Due to COVID-19, the following 2020–2021 Faculty Research Grants recipients were automatically granted a one-year extension to spend their grants. Here are their reports:

- Cesar Favila, Assistant Professor, Musicology

  The CSW Faculty Research Grant was spent out paying for a research assistant to help me complete the transcriptions and translations of various seventeenth- and eighteenth-century music manuscripts from which I drew for examples in my book manuscript, Immaculate Sounds: The Musical Lives of Nuns in New Spain. The manuscript is complete and being reviewed by Oxford University Press. It will feature in the Currents in Latin American and Iberian Music Series. Thanks to the strength of some of the initially completed chapters, I managed to obtain an advanced book contract in April 2021. The book is expected to be published in January 2024.

- Jana Gallus, Assistant Professor, Management
  Project title: “Addressing the gender gap in STEM: How to mitigate self-stereotyping with recognition incentives”

  The CSW Faculty Research Grant allowed us to complete the data collection for a project studying how feedback and recognition can close gender gaps in speaking up and knowledge sharing. My previous work had shown that gender differences in the tendency to speak up play an important role for female participation in STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) and specifically in math (Gallus and Heikensten 2019, 2020). We studied the role of self-stereotyping as a mechanism behind these gender differences. We moreover showed that these differences can be eliminated by providing suitable forms of social recognition via awards. The new study helped us achieve two goals: (1) develop an experimental infrastructure that will spur future research into self-stereotyping by allowing studies using our paradigm to be conducted online (no longer requiring a physical lab); (2) further extend our contribution to the evidence-based literature on interventions that promote inclusion. Specifically, we were able to compare the effects of awards with those of pure feedback and study the role of emotions. With help from the CSW, the data-collection was finished in the summer of 2021. We have since analyzed the data and presented the preliminary results in different research settings around the world. The goal is to finish a new draft and resubmit the paper for publication by the end of the year.

- Kevan Harris, Assistant Professor, Sociology
  Project title: “Assessing Informal Economic Activities among Women with the Iran Social Survey”

  Funds provided by CSW are being used to support the Iran Social Survey Project, a multi-wave survey initiative to measure social and economic trends in Iran. A portion of the grant monies will go to support graduate student researcher Shiva Rouhani for a summer work-study for the purpose of designing survey questions measuring the economic activities of women in Iran who are officially out of the labor force. As similar surveys in Egypt and Jordan have hinted at, informal labor activity among women can be captured by careful survey questions. Ms. Rouhani is adapting existing surveys from well-regarded studies for the Iranian case. The remainder of the grant monies will go towards the cost of survey implementation, planned for this fall/winter. These data will be used by Ms. Rouhani and me in a set of publications for sociological journals, and later to be used in a monograph on Iran in combination with other data collection projects. The monograph will be submitted in 2024 to University of California Press, where I published my first book as well as a recent co-edited volume.

- Roya Ijadi-Maghsoodi, Assistant Professor-in-Residence, Psychiatry
  Project title: “Improving Outcomes for Homeless-Experienced Mothers with Histories of Substance Use and Trauma”

  The funding provided by the CSW Faculty Research Grant allowed us to conduct hour-long in-depth semi-structured interviews with homeless-experienced mothers in Los Angeles County after receiving a trauma-informed family resilience intervention adapted to the needs of families experiencing homelessness. The funding supported the time of a staff research assistant, who helped with recruitment and qualitative analysis of the interview data, and Dedoose licenses for our team. Our interviews explored the impact of the intervention on maternal and family wellbeing, in addition to understanding the stressors parents and families experiencing homelessness endured during the pandemic, barriers to services, and recommendations to improve care. Our interviews and the larger intervention study is continuing, however we found in our preliminary analysis that the pandemic exacerbated the crisis of family homelessness and amplified barriers to services across sectors. Families experienced abrupt shut-down of agencies and challenges contacting agencies, including housing agencies, and families were often left feeling in limbo about their housing. Mothers described unintended consequences of the pandemic including the loss of parks and public institutions that they relied on to care for their families, increased barriers speaking to child-welfare-involved children, and worry, uncertainty, and exacerbation of stressors. We submitted an abstract to the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Annual Meeting on these findings and a paper is currently in preparation.

- Katherine Marino, Associate Professor, History
  Project title: “Felicia Santizo, Anti-Imperialist Feminism and the US Military in Panama”

The funds from the CSW enabled me to make significant progress on a project that has evolved from a biography of Afro-Panamanian anti-fascist feminist Felicia Santizo to a project on global anti-fascist women’s activism from the 1930s to the 1940s (that includes Santizo as a key figure). I delayed use of my CSW research funds (with CSW’s gracious approval) because travel to archives was not possible for some time because of the pandemic. During that time, I found a digitized archive of the World Committee of Women against War and Fascism (CWAWF), a group founded in 1934 that connected with many women throughout Latin America, the US, Asia, and Africa, as well as in Europe. This digitized archive was rich and provided insight on a great deal of activism around women’s labor, feminism, and global anti-fascism, anti-racism, and anti-imperialism. These solidarities directly involved Santizo and connected large groups of women from different parts of the globe. I’ve thus shifted the framework of my next project to include a diverse group of women from around the world who connected with this group, and how global anti-fascism influenced their local activism at home, drawing in part from research I have already conducted in various parts of the US and Latin America. In May 2022, I used part of the CSW funds to do archival research in New York on a number of Black women who were connected with this global anti-fascist women’s group. This research was very productive. In June 2022, I will use the rest of the funds to travel to Paris (the international headquarters of the CWAWF) to do research in the archives of two of CWAWF’s leaders, Bernadette Cattâneo and Gabrielle Duchêne. After that trip I plan to formulate the book proposal and will be able to start writing my next book.

- Lauren Ng, Assistant Professor, Psychology
  Project title: “Health service disparities among youth who have experienced sexual violence: The role of intersectional identities”

The overarching goal of this project is to identify the rates of sexual abuse reported to health providers and identify the rates of sexual abuse health services referrals before and after January 1, 2020, which marks the date that the California Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) mandate was launched. A primary goal of this project is to use novel quantitative methodology to examine these rates by youths’ intersecting minority identities (i.e., age, gender identity, sex, race/ethnicity, education, country of origin, and socioeconomic status). Instead of examining the independent influence of singular identity factors, this project aims to identify unique and complex identity clusters that predict being identified as having experienced sexual violence and subsequently being referred to mental health services. With the CSW Faculty Research Grant, I supported Graduate Student Researcher Yesenia Aguilar Silvan, who has managed the IRB submissions for this project and worked directly with UCLA Clinical and Translational Science Institute (CTSI) to obtain access to the xDR database that contains medical record data from UCLA Health (e.g., Ronald Reagan hospital, Santa Monica Hospital, and UCLA Health clinics). A multitude of challenges impacted our ability to obtain access to this medical record data in a timely manner. First, due to our affiliation (i.e., the Psychology Department and not part of UCLA Health), CTSI staff changes, and COVID-19 mitigation protocols that changed healthcare visits and research collaborations, it took over 1.5 years to receive permission to obtain a MEDNET account and subsequently receive access to ULEAD, which is a cloud-based environment that houses medical record data and provides tools to analyze and visualize data. On March 3, 2022, CTSI notified us that UCLA Health pediatricians had not implemented the California ACEs mandate. This led to a major revision of our analytical plan and data pull protocol that required extensive meetings between our study team, IRB staff, and CTSI data programmers. On June 1, 2022, we were able to access our dataset for the first time. I have been overlooking data cleaning and management, and descriptive data analyses. Preliminary results show that from a random sample of 10,000 youth (ages 0 to 18) that received services from UCLA Health between January 1, 2019, and December 31, 2021, 12% (n = 1,205) were identified as having experienced trauma. From the youth that experienced trauma, 6% (n = 73) had experienced sexual violence. Most of the youth that the providers identified as having experienced trauma were White (n = 415; 34%) and from affluent neighborhoods (i.e., first percentile least disadvantaged neighborhoods, n = 205, 17%; neighborhoods with an income level greater than $100,000, n = 612, 51%). Identification and analysis of the effects of intersecting minority identities on identification and referral rates are underway with final analyses expected to be completed at the end of summer 2022.

Hyun Suk Park, Assistant Professor, Asian Languages and Cultures

The CSW Faculty Research Grant in academic year 2021–2022 supported my research for my first book project, The Government Courtesan: Status, Gender, and Performance in Late Chosŏn Korea, that explores the cultural production of government courtesans (kwan’gi 官妓) at the nexus of the studies of slavery, gender, and performance in Korean literature. I used the funds to purchase books and other research materials from South Korea. As a result of my research during 2021–2022, I completed two articles that will be included in my book. manuscript. The first article, “Temporarily for Your Majesty: The Debates on Abolishing Courtesan Slavery in Chosŏn Korea,” will be published in August 2022, in Harvard Journal of Asiatic Studies 81, vol. 1–2, and the second article, “Courtesans in Military Uniforms: Martial Spectacles by Cross-Dressing Courtesans of Ŭiju in the Late Chosŏn Period” is under review by the Journal of Korean Studies.

2021–2022 Recipients
CSW|Streisand Center awarded five 2021–2022 Faculty Research Grants to the following faculty:

• Stephanie Bosch Santana, Assistant Professor, Comparative Literature
  Project title: “Reading in Motion: Form, Language, and Media in African Literary Cultures”

  The faculty research grant that I received from the Center for the Study of Women continues to support the publication of my first book, Forms of Mobility: Genre, Language and Media in African Literary Cultures. Forms of Mobility examines the way that writers from Malawi, Zimbabwe, Zambia, and South Africa experiment with literary form in periodical media to chart new geographies of interconnection and belonging. In many African contexts, popular media serve as vital literary outlets, often the only ones for women, minoritized voices, and African-language fiction. Because these forms are current, iterative, and tend to circulate faster and farther than traditionally published books, they also generate affiliations that are local, national, regional, pan-African, global, and sometimes even interplanetary in scale—envisioning outer space as a refuge from racial oppression on Earth. Based on a corpus of texts in English and Chichewa/Nyanja, one of southern Africa’s most widely spoken indigenous languages, from publications such as African Parade, Africal, the Malawi News, the Chimurenga Chronic, Jungle Jim, and Facebook, I propose alternate categories to reassess the scope and range of southern African fiction: migrant forms, township tales, domestic (im)mobilities, pan African time-travel machines, and digital diaries. These categories correspond to forms of mobility, and they suggest complex ideas of movement, space and belonging in relation to Africanness and Blackness.

  I submitted a draft of the full manuscript to the FlashPoints series (published by Northwestern University Press) on December 31, 2021. Northwestern UP sent the manuscript out for review in May 2022, and I am expecting reviewer reports in August. Once these reports are in, I will be using the funds from CSW to hire a copyeditor to assist me with my final revisions of the manuscript.

• Gina Kim, Professor, Film, Television and Digital Media
  Project title: “The Extended Reality of Monkey House”
The funds provided by CSW allowed me to continue my AR project, “The Extended Reality of Monkey House.” “The Extended Reality of Monkey House” is an immersive media project on US military comfort women, who were offered to serve US soldiers in camp towns outside the US military bases in South Korea. Using immersive media technology and mobile technology, this project focuses on virtually archiving a detainment center called Monkey House—a medical prison established by the South Korean government and staffed by the US military in the 1970s to isolate and treat comfort women with STDs. With the support of the CSW grant, I was able to hire a GSR to build a 3D photogrammetry model of the prison. As a result, two AR projects are now nearing completion. One AR titled “The Augmented Reality of Monkey House” is completed and now available on Android and Apple app store. Anyone with a mobile device can download the app for free and see the augmented 3D model of the medical prison using their mobile device and QR code provided in the app. “The Augmented Reality of Monkey House” premiered at Jeonju International Film Festival conference (April 28 to May 7, 2022) before its wide distribution on app stores, accompanied by my keynote lecture on ethics of representation in immersive media. The other AR project, “The Extended Reality of Monkey House,” is also well underway. It is a user-participatory web-based project that offers the viewers opportunities to transform the space where they are situated into the site of Monkey House through AR technology. By downloading the AR app, the viewers can point their mobile phones to their real-world surroundings, summon and move through the actual interior corridor of Monkey House. “The Extended Reality of Monkey House” will premiere as an outdoor installation at the Seoul International Women’s Film Festival in Korea in August 2022, along with the “Augmented Reality of Monkey House” and a virtual reality film of the same topic titled Tearless.

- Lauren McCarthy, Associate Professor, Design Media Arts
  Project title: “Machine Unlearning: Surveillant Homes and the Intimacy of Automation”

The CSW Faculty Research Grant supported “Machine Unlearning,” an artistic research project that addresses Smart Home, Internet of Things devices, and artificial intelligence, and the surveillance, automation, and privacy concerns they present. The work questions the agency and control we willingly forgo for the convenience of smart devices and artificial systems, and our reliance on feminized virtual assistants. With this grant, I was able to focus on the voice aspect of the system. As most of the voices of digital assistants are female, the domestic and emotional labor performed by AI reinforces traditional gender roles and expectations. More recently, researchers have begun to experiment with creating gender neutral voices, and companies are asking users to pick the gender of their digital assistant voices.

The funding went toward supporting research assistants who worked on audio engineering, sound design, and fabrication of audio devices. I trained machine learning models on hours of my own speech to create a digital voice clone. These voice models were used in the development of two projects. In LAUREN, I attempt to become a human version of Amazon Alexa, a smart home intelligence for people in their own homes. The performance lasts up to a week. It begins with an installation of a series of custom-designed, networked smart devices (including cameras, microphones, switches, door locks, faucets, and other electronic devices). I then remotely watch over the person 24/7 and control all aspects of their home. In “What do you want me to say?” I offer the ownership and control of my voice to others. Upon visiting the work, you are asked by my voice, “What do you want me to say?” However you reply, my voice responds by speaking your own words back to you. Then it asks again, “What do you want me to say?”

- Natasha Quadlin, Assistant Professor, Sociology
  and S. Michael Gaddis, Assistant Professor, Sociology
  Project title: “Analyzing Gender Discrimination in Hiring Over Time Using Decades of Correspondence Audit Studies”

We used our CSW grant to fund a graduate student researcher during summer 2021 for work on a paper entitled, “Intersectional Discrimination: A Meta-Analysis of Gendered Racial Discrimination and Racialized Gender Discrimination using Correspondence Audits.” The graduate student helped to gather and code data for the paper, which is a meta-analysis of recent “audit studies” published in the social sciences. Audit studies are a method of data collection in which researchers send fictitious resumes, housing applications, etc., to gatekeepers in order to track what “types” of applicants (in terms of race, gender, etc.) are more and less discriminated against. In this paper, we specifically take an intersectional approach by examining gendered racial discrimination (i.e., gender gaps observed when the researcher is primarily intending to study racial discrimination) and racialized gender discrimination (i.e., racial gaps observed when the researcher is primarily intending to study gender discrimination), rather than focusing on only one axis of difference. The paper is currently in preparation for peer review, and we expect it to be published in the coming year.

- Tria Blu Wakpa, Assistant Professor, Worlds Arts and Cultures/Dance
  Project title: “Settler Colonial and Decolonial Choreographies: Native American Embodiment in Education and Carceral Contexts”

I am incredibly grateful to have received a Center for the Study of Women Faculty Research Grant at a crucial time in my pre-tenure career. With this grant, I was able to hire a graduate student researcher for one quarter, pay for an interview transcription service, and prepare a cover letter, prospectus, and two chapters of my book project to submit to a university press by the end of September 2023. My book project, Sovereign Movements: Native American Choreography in Confinement, historically and politically contextualizes dance, theatrical productions, athletic performances, and/or yoga at four sites of confinement located on Lakota lands, which have separated people according to binary gender norms: a former Indian boarding school, men and women’s prisons, and a tribal juvenile hall. I argue that while these diverse institutions of confinement have sought to control Indigenous bodies and movement modes, Native people have enacted practices to carry, generate, and transmit vital knowledge at these facilities. In examining the embodied and extracurricular activities that schools and prisons have offered from the late 19th century—the origin of Indian boarding schools in the US—to the contemporary moment, the book offers a critical analysis of an often-overlooked topic: Native bodies and mobilities. My book project is rooted in social justice feminism and aims to improve the lives of people of all genders.

2022–2023 Recipients
CSW|Streisand Center awarded two 2022–2023 Faculty Research Grants to the following faculty:

- Jessica Gipson, Associate Professor, Community Health Sciences
  Project title: “Meeting the Needs of Abortion Refugees in Los Angeles in the Post-Roe Era”

- Molly Fox, Assistant Professor, Anthropology
  Project title: “Impact of Socio-cultural Stressors on Gestational Physiology and their Associations with Pregnancy Complications in a Cohort of Latinas”

D. Research Affiliates Program
The Research Affiliates Program, which was established in 2015 and replaced the Research Scholars Program, continues to support selected engaged independent scholars, local to the Los Angeles area, who conduct research on women, sexuality, and/or gender and have limited access to a research community.

Affiliates receive various forms of support for their projects, including access to CSW|Streisand Center computer resources, grants, and UCLA parking passes. CSW|Streisand Center also continues to work with the UCLA Library in order to provide special book borrowing privileges to research affiliates. This arrangement has been in place since December 15, 2016, when CSW|Streisand Center and the UCLA Library signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU), which allows affiliates to borrow up to 50 books at a time, renewable remotely with no limit on renewals. Unfortunately, due to the pandemic, the elements of this support that required campus access had to be suspended as of March 17, 2020. We were, however, able to continue the quarterly Brown Bag talks over Zoom as well as the grants program for research affiliates. In 2021–2022, Research Affiliates were also eligible for “exemption” cards in order to access the libraries on campus without a UCLA ID card (a requirement post COVID).

This year, we supported and offered services to 11 research affiliates. For a complete list of research affiliates as well as their accomplishments and publications for the 2021–2022 academic year, see Appendix 5. In 2021–2022, CSW|Streisand Center published one blog posts by a research affiliate. For title and link, see Appendix 10.

Tillie Olsen Grants for Research Affiliates

Affiliates are eligible to apply for research funding through the Tillie Olsen Grants for Research Affiliates program, established by Research Affiliate Pat Zukow-Goldring to support work by independent scholars.

In 2022, CSW|Streisand Center awarded three Tillie Olsen Grants to support the work of the affiliates below:

- Hannah Holtzman
  Title of work: “Through a Nuclear Lens: French Visions of Japan from Hiroshima to Fukushima”

- Becky Nicolaides

- Kathleen Sheldon
  Title of work: “Graça Machel, a Biography”

Research Affiliates Brown Bags

CSW|Streisand Center research affiliates gathered three times during 2021–2022, once for a virtual social hour and twice for virtual Brown Bag research presentations. Research Affiliate Kristine Gunnell oversaw and organized the Brown Bag series in collaboration with CSW|Streisand Center’s Program and Research Developer Katja Antoine.

On November 5, 2022, research affiliates gathered for an informal virtual social hour in lieu of a Brown Bag presentation.

On March 18, 2022, Research Affiliate Carol Bensick presented “South Carolina Philosopher: Louisa Susannah McCord.” In this talk, Bensick discussed the role of Louisa McCord as a prolific representative of nineteenth century American women philosophers from the South, a demographic typically overlooked in the canon of US philosophers of that era. Seven people attended, including research affiliates and community members.

On May 20, 2022, Research Affiliate Lara K. Schubert presented “Glimpsing Structural Engineering Culture: Structural Engineering Equity Efforts from Within.” Schubert discussed retention efforts and equity initiatives within the engineering profession. Eleven people attended, including research affiliates and community members.
XI. CELEBRATING CSW AND CSW’S AWARD RECIPIENTS

A. Video: CSW Through the Years
In March 2022, CSW published a short video, “CSW Through the Years,” featuring CSW Director Grace Kyungwon Hong, former director Sandra Harding (1996–1999), and former director and co-founder Karen Rowe (1984–1988). The video reflects on CSW’s history and its future prospects as the Center for the Study of Women | Barbra Streisand Center. The video can be viewed on CSW’s YouTube channel. For the link, see Appendix 11.

B. 2022 Awards Celebration with Bamby Salcedo
On May 18, 2022, CSW hosted a virtual 2022 Awards Celebration that was attended by 54 people. President and CEO of the TransLatin@ Coalition Bamby Salcedo delivered the keynote address, “Trans Latina Resilience: Past, Present, and Future.” The TransLatin@ Coalition is a national organization that focuses on addressing the issues of transgender Latin@s in the US. Salcedo was awarded the 2022 CSW Distinguished Leader in Feminism Award and her keynote highlighted historical and intergenerational institutional violence against Trans, Gender Nonconforming and Intersex (TGI) people. She also addressed the current state of TGI people and how she envisions a better world for the TGI community. After the presentation, Salcedo engaged in a dialogue with Vanessa Warri, PhD student in Social Welfare, who also moderated the audience Q&A that followed. At this event, CSW also celebrated the 2021–2022 faculty and student award recipients. For a list of awardees, see Section X and Appendix 8 respectively. For a link to Salcedo’s keynote presentation, see Appendix 11.

XII. CSW|STREISAND CENTER NOW: IMPACT, ACTIVISM, SOCIAL JUSTICE, AND COLLABORATION

A. Supporting Social Justice Activism

_statement on Afghanistan_
In the wake of the abrupt and chaotic US military withdrawal from Afghanistan in August 2021, the Taliban regime swiftly reclaimed power over the country, posing a direct threat to the human rights of all Afghans but especially women, children, and LGBTQ+ people. On September 1, 2021, CSW|Streisand Center issued a statement of solidarity with the people of Afghanistan, noting that “Our commitment to an intersectional and transnational practice of feminist solidarity makes it particularly important to highlight the ways that women, children, and LGBTQ+ people have been cruelly used as hollow justification for the violence of war.”

_dsu protest support letter_
On February 11, 2022, CSW|Streisand Center Director Grace Hong and the UCLA Divest/Invest Faculty Collective sent a letter to UCLA leadership in response to UCPD activity during the sit-in protest in Murphy Hall. Student members of the Disabled Student Union, the Mother Organizations Coalition, the Black Student Athlete Alliance, and the Undergraduate Students Association Council, were surveilled and harassed, with students of color also being profiled and interrogated. The letter strongly objected to UCPD actions, calling them “unacceptable,” and demanded they stop immediately.

Statement on Reproductive Justice
In response to the US Supreme Court’s reversal of Roe v. Wade, removing women’s constitutional right to abortion held for the past 50 years, CSW|Streisand Center issued a statement on reproductive justice on June 24, 2022. Following the lead of organizations like SisterSong, a Black women-led reproductive rights organization, CSW|Streisand Center’s statement “recogniz[es] that communities already rendered vulnerable by poverty, racialized and carceral violence, and settler colonialism are most affected by the lack of access to safe, affordable abortion.” The statement also says that “This decision cements the control, criminalization, and abandonment of reproductive capacities that have already exacerbated premature death, constrained life chances, and devastated our most precarious communities. In response, we reaffirm our commitment to a broad and ambitious vision to protect and transform all the structural conditions required to ensure reproductive justice.”

For a full list of CSW|Streisand Center’s letters of support, see Appendix 6.

B. Supporting UCLA Students
With our commitment to social justice and equity, CSW|Streisand Center provided financial support to graduate students across campus whose research focuses on gender, women, and/or social justice.

International and Undocumented Graduate Student Emergency Fund
Recognizing that our international and undocumented graduate students had little means to receive financial support during the pandemic, CSW|Streisand Center initiated an emergency fund for this population in fall 2020. This year, with our Irving and Jean Stone endowment funds, we provided $20,000 in emergency relief to eleven international or undocumented graduate students.

Lending a Financial Hand to Gender Studies
CSW|Streisand Center maintains a long-standing collaborative relationship with Gender Studies. In order to support their high-achieving students, former CSW Director Rachel C. Lee established an annual graduate student emergency fund in the amount of $5,000 per year to be in effect for three years, with an option for renewal at the end of the term, to be used at Gender Studies’ discretion. Academic year 2021–2022 was year three of this commitment. Funds totaling $8,500 were distributed among nine graduate students. This includes the annual $5,000 plus a balance of $3,500 that was not disbursed in the 2020–2021 academic year.

In 2019–2020, CSW increased the financial commitment for the Irving & Jean Stone Recruitment Fellowship. The fellowship, awarded annually to an incoming PhD student in Gender Studies during their first year in the program, had consisted of a $25,000 stipend and standard in-state fees. Since nonresident and international students must pay an additional $15,102 per year, CSW added this amount to the annual fellowship for the out-of-state fees. By providing three years of nonresident supplemental tuition (NRST), this fellowship now allows the recipients to focus on their research and not have to work multiple jobs to cover the out-of-state fees. The recipient for this year’s Irving & Jean Stone Recruitment Fellowship is Naz Oktay, who will enter the PhD program in Gender Studies in 2022–2023.

Staff Accomplishments
CSW|Streisand Center prides itself on creating a positive working environment, which includes promoting and encouraging staff development. The
CSW|Streisand Center staff excelled in personal and professional development opportunities inside and outside of their job duties over the past year.

• Katja Antoine: Antoine completed UCLA's Professional Development Program (PDP); a one-year leadership development program offered by Campus Human Resources. For her capstone project, she researched and wrote a proposal for a CSW Faculty and Research Development Program. She also completed the UCLA Campus Human Resources Level I Supervisory Certificate and earned a badge in presentation skills. Academic year 2021–2022 was Antoine’s second year of a three-year commitment as panel member on the UCLA Student Conduct Committee. She also received a Staff Appreciation and Recognition Award. In her scholarly activities outside of CSW|Streisand Center, Antoine co-authored Human Sexuality: Biological, Psychological, and Cultural Perspectives, 2nd edition, which was published in fall 2021. She also had an article forthcoming in the Journal of Critical Mixed Race Studies.

• Arielle Bagood: Toward the end of the academic year, Bagood started a new career as an EMT and in children’s health. The faculty and staff are so very thankful for all her years of dedication, creativity, and leadership at CSW|Streisand Center. Though they will be sorely missed, we wish them the very best on their new career path.

• Rosa Chung: Chung completed nine out of 10 required courses in pursuit of the UCLA Campus Human Resources Level I Supervisory Certificate. She attended the annual UC Administrative Management Professional (UC AMP) conference in Santa Barbara in the spring. She was also elected to the UCLA Administrative Management Group (AMG) board as a member at large. One of AMG’s main campus missions is to provide opportunities for professional growth and development.

• Colby Lenz: Lenz started their staff position as CSW|Streisand Center’s first Deputy Director of Policy and Community Research in September 2021. In their first year, Lenz organized community-based research projects and completed multiple publications that advance research, documentation, and analysis about gender, race, and criminalization.

• LaShae Robinson: Robinson completed the UCLA I-9 Processing Procedures course and is well on her way to processing HR transactions. She also received a Staff Appreciation and Recognition Award. Personal enrichment included becoming a plant owner and learning how to properly care for her plants.

B. Events

CSW|Streisand Center showcases cutting-edge, interdisciplinary research through an array of events each year. As much as CSW|Streisand Center enjoys hosting lectures, fairs, round tables, meetings, panels, workshops, and conferences in-person, all of our events this year were virtual due to COVID-19. To help the UCLA community stay connected, CSW|Streisand Center also dedicated a portion of our annual budget to financially support other UCLA entities around campus through cosponsorship.

D. Publications
During 2021–2022, CSW|Streisand Center’s publications included blog posts, videocasts, and a weekly electronic newsletter.

Blog Posts
CSW|Streisand Center published 28 blog posts announcing CSW|Streisand Center news, upcoming events (including one post about Thinking Gender 2022), letters of support, and six CSWAC Corner posts highlighting the work of six members of the CSW Advisory Committee. We also published one blog written by a CSW Research Affiliate and one by a student award recipient from a previous year. For a list of blog posts, see Appendix 10.

Videocasts
Our 2021–2022 videocasts include the 2022 Awards Celebration keynote event featuring Bamby Salcedo, a launch of the report "Defending Self-Defense: A Call to Action by Survived and Punished," the Thinking Gender 2022 keynote event, and a CSW retrospective with CSW|Streisand Center Director Grace Hong. All videos are available on the CSW YouTube channel. For a list of videocasts with links, see Appendix 11.

Weekly Electronic Newsletter
CSW|Streisand Center publishes the Weekly Update, an electronic newsletter featuring announcements of upcoming CSW|Streisand Center, campus, and community events; announcements of new publications, awards, and other CSW|Streisand Center news; and other related material. Members of our community are invited to submit items for inclusion in the Weekly Update, and we view the newsletter as an important information-sharing service. Between July 1, 2021, and June 30, 2022, CSW|Streisand Center published 33 Weekly Updates (including a year-in-review compilation at the end of the academic year).

E. Outreach and Community Building
The ongoing pandemic has prevented some of our usual forms of outreach, such as in-class announcements, and lessened the efficacy of others, like posting physical posters in areas on campus where students congregate. As a result, we have expanded our virtual efforts through social media and email announcements.

Social Media Overview
CSW|Streisand Center maintains an active social media presence on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. We use social media to publicize our virtual events, programs, publications, and award opportunities.

Between July 1, 2021, and June 30, 2022, we published 121 Facebook posts, which our followers engaged with a total of 284 times. These engagements include 26 shares, 106 likes, and 6 comments.

CSW|Streisand Center is active on Twitter and Instagram, under the handle @UCLACSW. At the end of the academic year we had 947 followers on Twitter, which was a 15 percent increase from last year. We posted 157 original tweets (not including retweets) between July 1, 2021, and June 30, 2022, and received 2,531 engagements (likes, replies, retweets, and link clicks), an 11 percent increase from last year’s statistics.

In September 2021, CSW|Streisand Center began posting “complementary content” to our Instagram to further engage our audience members. Some posts expanded on existing CSW|Streisand Center events through a spotlight on speakers, award recipients, or related publications. Other posts promoted community leaders or resources to expand our reach and presence outside of our annual events. All content was cross promoted on our Twitter and Facebook accounts to drive more engagement towards Instagram.
Email List Circulation Numbers
CSW|Streisand Center maintains a Mailchimp account for digital mailings to categorized groups. As of June 30, 2022, our mailing list has 6,061 active subscribers, which is a 9.05 percent increase from this time last year.

Targeted Outreach
Through the Mailchimp account, CSW|Streisand Center conducts targeted mailings through audience filters such as UCLA affiliation, interest in CSW|Streisand Center’s opportunities or programs, title and department, or prior event attendance.

Additionally, CSW|Streisand Center compiles lists of contacts who are not on our mailing list but who may be interested in receiving information about specific events. For events that may specifically be of interest to students, like the 2022 Awards Celebration, we compiled a list of instructors with classes related to the keynote theme and provided a graphic to share during at the beginning of lecture. For special events, such as the Defending Self-Defense report launch, we invited attorneys at the Los Angeles County Public Defenders’ Office.

The South has been decidedly underrepresented in the growing canon of antebellum nineteenth century American women philosophers. Louisa McCord stands out as a promising candidate to correct this imbalance. In a period where the essay format was almost exclusively the province of men, McCord wrote and published numerous essays in respected Southern journals. These were identified, collected, and edited in the mid 1990s. Even so, the recovery of forgotten women philosophers was only getting underway at that time and many still went unnoticed. This talk will make a first step toward becoming acquainted with McCord and discovering the similarities and differences between her work and that of her already established contemporaries from the North.

Carol Bensick earned her PhD in American Literary and Intellectual History from 1620 to 1914 at Cornell University. As a Research Affiliate at the UCLA Center for the Study of Women, she has given conference papers and published blog posts on unknown and barely known women philosophers such as Nancy Kingsbury Wollstonecraft of New Hampshire and Julia Ward Howe of Massachusetts, as well as on John Dewey’s and William James’s interactions with women philosophical students and friends. Her chapters on philosophers Sarah Dorsey of Mississippi and Amalie Hathaway of Michigan are forthcoming in Springer and Oxford collections respectively. Her latest nineteenth-century philosophical interest is political essayist Louisa McCord of South Carolina.

“Glimpsing Structural Engineering Culture: Structural Engineering Equity Efforts from Within”

by Lara K. Schubert, PhD
Friday, May 20, 2022, 12:00–1:00 PM on Zoom

Register for FREE to get the Zoom link!

Structural engineers typically consider the profession to be a meritocracy, in which engineers are successful if they have technical skill required for engineering. While this is important, the culture of the profession also affects who is promoted and who stays to reach levels of leadership within their firms. The problem of retention has been identified within the profession, and in 2015 the professional organization created a committee to study and to address the issue. This presentation will give an account of the project, SE3: Structural Engineering, Equity and Engagement, following the trajectory of the efforts from within the profession and reflecting on the strategies used, how they have evolved, and how they are informed by the culture of engineering.

Lara K. Schubert is a Research Affiliate at the UCLA Center for the Study of Women, a PhD in religion, who has both practiced structural engineering and undertaken ethnographic research with women in religious communities in Cambodia. Her current research merges these areas of expertise. She teaches in feminist science studies and intends to complete a qualitative study of structural engineering to help make clear the culture and to ultimately strengthen structural engineering.

We Were There: The Third World Women's Alliance and the Second Wave (Feminist Press, 2021)

Book Talk With Dr. Patricia Romney in conversation with Dr. Maylei Blackwell

Tuesday, March 8, 2022

3pm (Pacific) Zoom Webinar

Dr. Romney's new book documents how the Alliance shaped and defined second wave feminism. From 1970 to 1980, the Alliance lived the dream of third world feminism. The small bicoastal organization was one of the earliest groups advocating for what came to be known as intersectional activism, arguing that women of color faced a “triple jeopardy” of race, gender, and class oppression. Widely recognized as the era’s primary voice for women of color, this alliance across ethnic and racial identities was unique then and now. To register for this free event, follow the link below:

The Stateless Diplomat: Diana Apcar’s Heroic Life

In celebration of International Women’s Day, the Promise Armenian Institute at UCLA presents a special screening of “The Stateless Diplomat,” featuring a conversation with director Mimi Malayan and historian Meline Mesropyan about the life and work of Diana Apcar, the Honorary Consul to Japan of the short-lived First Republic of Armenia (1918-1920).

This event is co-sponsored by the Terasaki Center for Japanese Studies and the UCLA Center for the Study of Women.

Author, businesswoman, activist, humanitarian and diplomat, Diana Apcar single-handedly rescued countless Armenian Genocide survivors, enabling them to start new lives thousands of miles from their homeland.

The film, The Stateless Diplomat, conveys the pivotal moments in Diana’s life: her awakening to the Armenian cause, her spiritual vision prompting her into activism, her mental collapse and frustration as she foresaw the Genocide, and her endless humanitarian work, personally aiding thousands of Genocide survivors.

California Digital Humanities Research Institute (CaliDHRI) will take place April 27-29th, 2022.

CaliDHRI is a free, annual digital ethnic studies institute inspired and co-sponsored by CUNY DHRI as well as UC Irvine Libraries and UCLA Libraries. The inaugural CaliDHRI will center Black digital humanities thematically, and rotate annually through Latinx, Asian American, and Indigenous Studies topics while focusing on California-centric research questions and datasets.

Our 2022 theme, “The Black Press”, will be explored by three keynote speakers (who will highlight their own Black digital humanities research and projects) as well as multiple small teams of participants who have applied with a research question, collection, or project in mind.

Using James B. Denver’s authoritative Bibliography of African American Newspapers and Periodicals as well as open datasets, participants will be taught GIS and text mining tools by a team of library workers from public and private academic institutions and libraries and collaborate on digital humanities resources for research and teaching using Black collections with the aim of strengthening cross-California connections across institutional boundaries and advancing digital ethnic studies.

CaliDHRI will be a virtual event via Zoom.

STREET QUEENS AND THE PROMISE OF INTERSECTIONAL TRANS STUDIES
SPEAKER: Jules Gill-Peterson, History, John Hopkins University
IN CONVERSATION WITH: Mel Y. Chen, Gender and Women’s Studies, UC Berkeley

Trans studies recruits exemplary subjects to guarantee the promises of its political desires. This talk turns to the street queen, a fixture of mid twentieth century American queer and trans cities, to ask critical questions of the propensity to idealize subjects marginalized by race and gender. Who is the Black and brown street queen, what kind of life did she lead, and what does she know outside of the projection of contemporary desires for resilience and resistance onto her?

Jules Gill-Peterson is an associate professor of history at Johns Hopkins University. She is the author of Histories of the Transgender Child (Minnesota, 2018), winner of a Lambda Literary Award and the Children’s Literature Association book prize. Jules also serves as General Co-Editor of TSQ: Transgender Studies Quarterly.

Mel Y. Chen is an associate professor of gender & women's studies and Director for the Center for the Study of Sexual Culture at UC Berkeley. Since Animacies: Biopolitics, Racial Mattering, and Queer Affect (2012), their second book concerns intoxication's involvement in archival histories of the interanimation of time, race, and disability. Chen coedits a Duke book series entitled “Anima” and is part of a queer/trans of color arts collective in the San Francisco Bay Area.

WORKSHOP
TOOTH AND NAIL: A TRANS CRITIQUE OF THE UNIVERSITY
SPEAKER: Jules Gill-Peterson, History, John Hopkins University
IN CONVERSATION WITH: JUST RESEARCH? TRANS FUTURES IN HEALTH AND SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE

Trans inclusion has been framed as the latest chapter of ongoing struggle to make the university a more representative and equitable institution. But the university is also where many of the most degrading and devastating negations and limitations on trans people’s lives have been invented, credentialled, and funded. How can trans studies—and trans people in academia—confront that painful reality and history in their effects on us? What does it look like to be trans and do trans work from a critical perspective on the university as an institution?

How can thinking through UCLA’s history, in particular, inform how we imagine a more ethical and justice-centered vision for the public university’s relationship to transgender people? Join the conversation with Thinking Gender 2022 keynote speaker, Dr. Jules Gill-Peterson, author of Histories of the Transgender Child (University of Minnesota Press, 2018), the first book to shatter the widespread myth that transgender children are a brand-new generation in the twenty-first century. The conversation will include a roundtable discussion with members of a statewide community-university initiative, Just Research? Trans Futures in Health and Scientific Knowledge, including Dr. Christoph Hansmann (San Francisco State University), and UCLA PhD students Sid Jordan and Vanessa Warri.
RECOMMENDED ADVANCE READING

JUST RESEARCH? TRANS FUTURES IN HEALTH AND SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE

Just Research? Trans Futures in Health and Scientific Knowledge is a trans and two-spirit-led team of community organizers, university faculty, and students in California working at the intersections of gender, racial, economic, and disability justice. Our goal is to increase access to public research university resources for transgender, two-spirit, gender-expansive, and intersex communities’ (TGI) and to align these resources with the needs of these communities. We recognize an ongoing history of harm enacted against TGI people in pursuit of health and scientific knowledge in the academy. We also recognize that TGI people and community organizations have developed research and knowledge-making practices outside of universities. We dare to envision and enact a more ethical and justice-oriented role for public research universities in the pursuit of TGI-related scholarship. This initiative aims to cultivate a network of scholars and community leaders interested in strengthening the interdisciplinary field of transgender studies and in building capacities for community-driven and justice-centered research in alignment with our fight for liberation. We work for a future in which research about TGI people is relevant to and rooted in the knowledge, priorities, and practices of TGI people and communities and in which community researchers are valued, well resourced, and credited.

Statement on Afghanistan

September 1, 2021 / News

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women stands in solidarity with the people of Afghanistan as they face not only Taliban rule, which is garnering global concern, but also, importantly, the related and brutal consequences of twenty years of invasion, occupation, and warfare at the hands of the US military and its allies. Our commitment to an intersectional and transnational practice of feminist solidarity makes it particularly important to highlight the ways that women, children, and LGBTQ+ people have been cruelly used as hollow justification for the violence of war, as Lila Abu-Lughod and many other feminist scholars and activists have long observed. Laura Bush’s now infamous radio address in November of 2001 cast the invasion as a boon for Afghan women, and this framing has been replicated countless times over the last two decades. Today, we risk advancing such obfuscations if we do not situate the very real jeopardy that women, LGBTQ+ people, feminist, queer, and human rights activists, and ethnic minorities, among others, face within the context of the decades of violence and instability brought about in large part by US militarism and imperialism. We condemn all militarized violence directed at women, children and the LGBTQ+ community. As a research unit that prioritizes the study of women, feminism, and gender, we are aligned with a long tradition of feminist, anti-racist, and anti-colonial commitments that comprise the very foundations of our discipline. We echo our discipline’s primary scholarly organization, the National Women’s Studies Association’s “pledge to listen to and follow the lead of Afghan women leaders.” We call on the US government to use whatever means possible to create pathways for departure for Afghan people seeking to leave, to raise or remove admissions caps for refugees, and provide resources for relocation. We also commit to creating safe harbor for scholars, students, and teachers in our own university context.

CSW Statement on Sit-in Protest in Murphy Hall

February 17, 2022 / News

On February 11, CSW Director Grace Hong and the UCLA Divest/Invest Faculty Collective sent the following letter to UCLA leadership in response to UCPD activity during the sit-in protest in Murphy Hall.

As the UCLA Divest/Invest Faculty Collective, we write to express in the strongest terms possible that UCPD harassment and surveillance of Disabled Student Union, Mother Organizations Coalition, Black Student Athlete Alliance, and Undergraduate Students Association Council, currently engaged in a sit-in protest in Murphy Hall, is unacceptable and must stop immediately. The incidents that these organizations document in their 2/11/22 statement (included below) in which UCPD woke sleeping students at Murphy Hall are egregious. This statement also notes that UCPD have surveilled, stopped, and interrogated BIPOC students on other parts of campus, using the Murphy Hall protests as pretext.

That students of color are being profiled, stopped, and interrogated for documents by UCPD officers with their hands ready on their guns indicates the complete failure of the UCLA administration to address concerns about policing that have been documented, researched, and foregrounded by students, faculty, staff, workers, and community members. We can only assume that the current policing and surveillance of students and student organizations is taking place with your permission. This must stop immediately. Students have the right to engage in collective protest without police harassment. These incidents highlight that UCPD does not heighten safety for our campus, but instead creates violence and harm, and emphasizes the need for divestment from police and investment in programs that truly keep us safe.

Statement on Reproductive Justice

June 24, 2022 / News

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women (CSW) affirms reproductive justice as foundational to our core values and mission, and we pledge our recommitment to protecting and advancing reproductive justice principles. We follow the lead of SisterSong, a Black women-led organization that defines reproductive justice as “the human right to maintain personal bodily autonomy, have children, not have children, and parent the children we have in safe and sustainable communities” [https://www.sistersong.net/reproductive-justice].” In the wake of decades of assaults on reproductive autonomy, the most recent of which is today’s devastating Supreme Court decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization to overturn federal abortion rights, we join organizations like SisterSong in recognizing that communities already rendered vulnerable by poverty, racialized and carceral violence, and settler colonialism are most affected by the lack of access to safe, affordable abortion. This decision cements the control, criminalization, and abandonment of reproductive capacities that have already exacerbated premature death, constrained life chances, and devastated our most precarious communities. In response, we reaffirm our commitment to a broad and ambitious vision to protect and transform all the structural conditions required to ensure reproductive justice.

The statements on this page represent the views of the Director, Associate Director, Executive Board, and staff of the Center for the Study of Women and do not necessarily represent the views of the University of California, UCLA, or its Chancellor.

Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) Graduate Fellowships

The CSW Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) has established two fellowships to support intellectual work that centers Black feminist frameworks of analysis: the Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research and the Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research. In the tradition of abolitionist feminist activism and labor, the BFI Graduate Fellowships seek to advance Black feminist work on any topic with a focus on scholarship that interrogates historical and ongoing regimes of violence, enclosure, and captivity and offers original insights for conceiving of freedom, redress, abolition, and refusal.

Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research Recipient:

Sonya Brooks: Sonya Brooks is a PhD student who is a passionate advocate for the health and well-being of Black girls. Her research lies at the intersections of education and the impact that intergenerational oral stories and narratives have on their academic and health outcomes. Brooks graduated from UCLA in 2019 and from Brown University in 2021 and was chosen to be the 2021 Graduate Commencement Speaker. Brooks is known for her engaging and energetic personality and loves reading, gardening, roller skating, and most of all, her faith and her three children.

Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research Recipients:

Jeanette Charles: Jeanette Charles is a proud daughter of the Haitian Diaspora raised by working-class Black and Brown Los Angeles. She is a Black internationalist and anti-imperialist scholar pursuing her PhD in history. Her work seeks to build bridges with movements globally and document their revolutionary legacies. Her focus is on the African Diaspora with an emphasis on grassroots movements, religion, and political economy. She is a long-time solidarity organizer, independent journalist, human rights advocate, popular educator, and delegation coordinator. She is also a certified coach and founder of Ìyá Global.

Dominique Montgomery: Dominique Mikell Montgomery, a scholar deeply committed to highlighting the historical and present-day lived experiences and acts of resistance of Black families in the United States, is currently a doctoral candidate in social welfare within the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs. Montgomery’s research interests include the experiences of individuals and families impacted by the child welfare system, Black studies, and participatory research methods. Her dissertation aims to utilize literature from the womanist canon as a foundation upon which youth in foster care can redefine wellness.

Constance Coiner Award
Appendix 8. CSW Student Award Recipients

These awards honor the life and help continue the work of Constance Coiner, PhD 1987, who perished along with her daughter Ana Duarte-Coiner on TWA Flight 800 in June 1996.

Graduate Award Recipient:

Krystal Ledesma: Krystal Ledesma is a PhD candidate in cinema and media studies. Her research areas include Classic Hollywood, archival research, and Mexican American/Chicana/o images in film. She’s interested in the relationship between 1940s Mexican American/Chicana/o activism, events such as the Sleepy Lagoon Murder and Zoot Suit Riots, the Hollywood Left and the representation of Mexican American/Chicana/os on-screen. In 2019 she served as a Cultural Equity and Inclusion Project intern at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences’ Film Archive.

Undergraduate Award Recipients:

Lucia Santina Ribisi: As a feminist environmental media scholar, activist, and artist, Lucia Santina Ribisi investigates effective ways to influence public discourse about justice. On the frontlines of environmental justice, they have lived in Giant Redwood treetops to defend forests from ecocide. On the frontlines of reproductive justice, they are a consent educator and doula. Their live performances, lectures, writing, and videos blend stories of troubled ecologies with meditations on collective healing for creatures and ecosystems. Community and care are essential to the sustainability of their activist art practice, and they love mentoring teens.

Brooklyn Oxandaboure: Brooklyn Oxandaboure is a third-year undergraduate student majoring in gender studies with a double minor in labor studies and community engagement and social change. She is a native to the San Bernardino area, and her interest in community organizing stems from her experiences in her hometown. She is currently researching the gendered dynamics of knowledge production among Latin American liberation theologians after the Second Vatican Council. Oxandaboure hopes to continue her education, and ultimately join the professoriate, while continuing her community-engaged work in working-class communities.

*Due to an available balance in funds, additional awards were given this academic year.

Elizabeth Blackwell, MD, Awards

This award recognizes an outstanding research report, master's thesis, dissertation, or published article related to women and health or women in health-related endeavors. Named for Elizabeth Blackwell, MD, the first woman to graduate from medical school, it is made possible by the generosity of Dr. Barbara “Penny” Kanner.

Graduate Award Recipient:
Appendix 8. CSW Student Award Recipients

Jordan Parker: Jordan Parker is a doctoral student in health psychology at UCLA. She graduated from Stanford University with a BA in psychology and a minor in African and African American studies. Her graduate research seeks to apply an intersectionality framework to the psychological study of body image and eating behaviors in Black women. For example, she is particularly interested in how experiences of gendered racism or gendered colorism affect body image, how they may subsequently influence eating behaviors, and how they longitudinally contribute to disordered eating and related health disparities.

Undergraduate Award Recipient:

Mira Joan Qureshi: Mira Qureshi is a fourth-year UCLA student who is pursuing a bachelor's degree in human biology and society with a minor in global health. She works as an undergraduate researcher at Dr. Wagman’s lab under UCLA’s Fielding School of Public Health where she is passionate about examining the barriers women have in obtaining sexual and reproductive health services. Qureshi is also the president of The Global Uplift Project club at UCLA where she has funded initiatives such as a reusable menstrual kit project in Kenya and a birthing center in Nepal, in order to increase women’s access to sexual and reproductive health services.

Jean Stone Dissertation Research Fellowship

Made possible through the generosity of Mrs. Jean Stone, this fellowship funds an exceptional graduate student dissertation research project focusing on women or gender.

Fellowship Recipients:

Amira Hassnaoui: Born and raised in Tunis, Tunisia, Amira Hassnaoui is a PhD candidate in the Department of World Arts and Cultures/Dance at UCLA. Her work aims to demystify trance healing music rituals practiced by Black Tunisians. She incorporates film and photography in her research, and she aspires to create a hybrid project that features a museum exhibition of the material culture of these idioms. She received a MA in popular culture from Bowling Green State University in 2017, where she was President of the Graduate Student Senate and the Graduate Women’s Caucus.

Alana de Hinojosa: Alana de Hinojosa is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Chicana/o and Central American Studies. She is a Ford Foundation and IUPLR/Mellon Fellow whose research is concerned with histories of displacement, diaspora, and refusal and what these have to do with the meandering Río Grande that caused the century-long Chamizal Land Dispute along the El Paso-Cd. Juarez borderlands. Alana’s attention rests on those who are often removed from this land dispute’s official record—those often deemed irrelevant or inconvenient to the telling of this story. This means she emphasizes the stories of el Chamizal’s diverse marginalized stakeholders, including an ongoing legacy of Mexican immigrant and Mexican American Chamizal women who have led and organized multiple generations of Chamizal communities to rebel against forced displacement, dispossession, and uneven development.

Following law school, Monica worked as a deportation defense attorney at the Asian Law Caucus, focusing on cases challenging the deportation of immigrant communities targeted for policing and immigration enforcement.
