I. INTRODUCTION

The Center for the Study of Women at UCLA is the only organized research unit at the University of California devoted to the study of women and gender. Founded in 1984, the Center has grown and changed as feminist research has expanded in the social sciences and humanities. In 1984, feminist scholars working on campus knew each other because they were relatively few in number. Today, researchers working on women and gender have significantly changed many fields, redefining old problems and studying new topics. By bringing together scholars of similar interests, the Center for the Study of Women has played an important role in the intellectual life of UCLA. Through its conferences, seminars and administration of grants, the Center has enabled feminist scholars to exchange ideas and secure funding.

This report details the Center's activities in 1991-92 and describes how these activities contributed to fostering and disseminating research. During the fall and winter quarters of 1991-92, Helen S. Astin (Education) was the Acting Director. In the spring quarter of 1992, Kathryn Norberg (History) assumed the directorship of the CSW. Throughout 1991-92, Anne Peplau (Psychology) chaired the Center's Faculty Advisory Committee.

The Center for the Study of Women, as well as its sister unit, the Women's Studies Program, is located within the Division of the Life Sciences in the UCLA College of Letters and Sciences. The Center has greatly benefited from the active support of the Dean of the Life Sciences, Frederick Eiserling, and Assistant Dean, Lianna Anderson, has provided invaluable assistance and advice. The success of the Center, however, derives primarily from the commitment of its faculty. In 1991-92, special thanks should be extended to Helen S. Astin, Acting Director, who assumed the interim guidance of the Center. Professor Astin's commitment to the Center dates from its inception and remains one of its major strengths. Thanks are also due to the faculty who chaired the Center's committees and gave so generously of their time.

The Center is also fortunate in having a support group of Friends led by Beatrice Mandel. Thanks to the tireless efforts of the Friends Executive Board, the Center is able to provide support to worthy graduate students interested in women and gender and thereby encourage feminist research in the 21st century.

II. RESEARCH

The Center's major purpose as an Organized Research Unit is to facilitate faculty research on women and gender. To this end, the Center develops and monitors proposals for research funds, sponsors conferences to discuss and disseminate research, provides seed money through the mini-grant competition, sponsors the Feminist Research Seminar, distributes a newsletter, and hosts activities for graduate students interested in women and gender. During the 1991-92 academic year, the Center continued to collect and organize information on funding sources for faculty and graduate students. The Center has also distributed Occasional Memos that describe relevant agencies and the types of research they fund.

During the 1991-92 academic year, the major Center-based project was the Integration of Ethnic Women into Liberal Arts Curriculum (Ford Ethnic Women's Curriculum Transformation Project or FEW). More than fifty faculty members and graduate students have participated in this project, and it has significantly affected the campus curriculum. During the year the Center also housed nine other projects: Cultural Tools and Learning Processes in a Changing World; Client Involvement in the Governance of Head Start; Middle Class Lawyers: The Transformation of the Small Firm Practice; Gender and Labor Union Leadership; Child Care Across Class Lines; Prostitution in Eighteenth-Century France; Gender and Politics; Media Adaptations of the Works of Black Women Writers; Predicting Sexual Coercion and Antisocial Behavior Against Women; Learning from Latin America: Women's Struggles for Livelihood. In addition, the Center also hosted its first President's Fellow as well as a Visiting Professor under the National Science Foundation Visiting Professorships for Women Program.

During 1991–1992, under the Center's auspices, a number of research projects continued, new projects were begun and more research proposals were written. This section reviews the continuing projects, lists the newly funded projects and enumerates the pending proposals.

1. Continuing Projects

"Integration of Ethnic Women into Liberal Arts Curriculum"
Karen Rowe, PI (English)
The Ford Foundation
$100,170
UCLA College of Letters and Sciences
$36,000 (direct funding)
UCLA Office of Instructional Development
$123,580 (direct funding)

"Curriculum Writing Integration Project"
Office of the President
$14,285 (direct funding)
UCLA Office of Instructional Development
$30,000 (direct funding)

The Center-based "Integration of Ethnic Women into Liberal Arts Curriculum Project"—now more widely known as the Ford Ethnic Women's Curriculum Transformation Project (FEW)—began in January 1989 with funding from the Ford Foundation, the UCLA College of Letters and Sciences, and the Chancellor's Committee on Instructional Improvement.

The primary objective of this project was the incorporation of new research by and about American ethnic women—African American, American Indian, Asian American, and Chicanas/Latinas—into UCLA's undergraduate curriculum. Seven quarter-long faculty development seminars were held (four by discipline and three interdisciplinary) that allowed seventy-five faculty members to identify and evaluate ethnic-gender research literature relevant for their respective courses, formulate themes reflective of the multiethnic visions created by the material, and develop innovative instructional strategies appropriate for the new material. All faculty participants transformed or created at least one undergraduate course, and many did more than one. During this project, the FEW bibliographic database grew to over 4,000 items, and a filmography listing over 100 films and videos by and about American ethnic women was compiled. Also the syllabi and articles from the seminars remain a popular campus and national resource.

The effectiveness of the FEW project led the UC President's office, in conjunction with the Chancellor's Committee on Instructional Improvement, to fund a similar project for the Center-based "Curriculum Writing Integration Project" (CWIP). This project constitutes phase three of UCLA's curriculum integration projects and is specifically for the faculty of UCLA's Writings Programs. It is, at the present time, the only curriculum innovation drawing on the scholarship from ethnic and women's studies to transform Liberal Arts undergraduate courses across the curriculum. A second year of seminars will be held during 1992-93 so that all interested Writing Programs faculty can participate.
"Cultural Tools and Learning Processes in a Changing World"
Patricia M. Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
The Spencer Foundation
February 1, 1990-January 31, 1993
$249,150
$25,000 (supplemental funds)

Professor Patricia Greenfield received funding to examine the interrelationship among culture, social change, informal education, and cognitive development of children in two very different settings. The research is being conducted in urban Los Angeles and in rural Mexico. Greenfield's research in Mexico includes a twenty-year follow-up study of the ways Mayan Indian mothers teach weaving skills to their daughters in Zinacantan, Chiapas. This study of modernization investigates how formal education of females affects adaptation to a changing society. The second study, located in the urban United States, investigates the cognitive effects of video games as tools of socialization for the emerging world of computers and high technology. The study specifically addresses the unequal cognitive socialization of males versus females in this domain.

Taken together, the two studies examine how contrasting cultural tools are each part of a highly integrated system that includes: 1) the level of individual cognitive development, 2) processes of informal education, and 3) adaptation for survival under particular economic, societal, and technological conditions. The U.S. study addresses an education problem relevant to post-industrial societies, while the Zinacantan weaving study is relevant to pre-industrial societies. As such, these studies provide insight into problems arising from diversity in our own educational system.

In March 1992 a no-cost time extension was requested and subsequently approved. The new period of performance is February 1, 1990-January 31, 1993. Professor Greenfield also applied for supplemental funds of $25,000 to complete the project. The Spencer Foundation awarded these funds on June 23, 1992.

"Client Involvement in the Governance of Head Start"
Lucie White, PI (School of Law)
National Science Foundation
July 1991-August 1993
$109,955

In this study, Professor Lucie White examines client involvement in the governance of Project Head Start. Head Start, a federal pre-school and social service program for poor families, has gained wide public acceptance and gives parents substantial legal power to make management decisions at the local level. The law also includes several measures to enable parents--usually poor women--to exercise these legal powers in a meaningful way. The study focuses on three Head Start programs chosen for their geographic, social, and ethnic diversity. Through demographic and archival research, open-ended interviews with parents and staff, participant observation, and conversational analysis of parent deliberations over a two-year period, the study provides a detailed, comparative account of the interplay between legal framework and local culture in Head Start's client governance process in three contrasting settings. The study addresses theoretical and policy-oriented issues relating to the law's capacity to facilitate greater participation by ethnically and economically subordinated groups--particularly women--in social institutions in the welfare state.

Although Head Start has been well studied, the Head Start research has not focused on the program's elaborate legal structure for mandating parent governance. This research project collects and interprets some of the data from this experience. The results should help inform lawmakers on how to shape client governance provisions that address the material realities of client's lives and support their expression of cultural autonomy. The research will also illuminate important theoretical issues about participation, cultural identity, and the possibilities for law in a multicultural "post"-bureaucratic state.
"Middle Class Lawyers: The Transformation of the Small Firm Practice"
Carroll Seron, PI (Baruch College, CUNY)
National Science Foundation, Visiting Professorships for Women Program
September 1991-December 1992
$125,921

Professor Seron, a sociologist from Baruch College, spent the year at the Sociology Department as a visiting scholar. Her research project looks at the work of small-firm and solo legal practitioners as they confront changes in their profession, including new opportunities to market their services, the incorporation of innovative ways to computerize their offices, and the entry of women into the work force as both lawyers and paralegals. The ways in which these legal practitioners describe and understand their lifestyles, values, aspirations, expectations and commitments provide an entry point for examining contemporary economic, political and social values of urban America.

Through a survey of a random sample of attorneys and in-depth interviews with a sub-sample of small-firm and solo practitioners, Seron provides a demographic overview of the depth and range of change in new business-getting and managerial techniques among private legal practitioners. The in-depth interviews provide a richer understanding of the ways in which these lawyers conceptualize their image of a professional person, their perception and articulation of their social and political responsibilities to their communities, and their strategies to balance work and private demands.

In June 1992, a no-cost time extension was requested and subsequently approved. The new period of performance is September 1, 1991-December 31, 1992.

"Gender and Labor Union Leadership"
Ruth M. Milkman, PI (Sociology)
National Science Foundation
Research Planning Grant
August 1991-July 1992
$12,605

In this Research Planning Grant, Professor Milkman explores the possibility of using a previously untapped source of data to analyze variations in the gender composition of labor union leadership in the U.S. This is an important issue for understanding gender inequality in the labor market and in complex organizations. While most of the literature on gender and unionism focuses on general organizational characteristics that encourage or impede women’s access to leadership positions within unions, this project instead hypothesizes systematic patterns of variation among unions in the gender distribution of leadership positions.

It is hypothesized that different cohorts of unions have distinct patterns of gender composition among their leadership, reflecting the different historical conditions in which the unions emerged. Milkman used this planning grant to work on the numerous technical problems involved in converting the data from LM-2 forms into usable format as well as to develop a full-fledged research proposal.
"Child Care Across Class Lines"
Julia Wrigley, PI (Education, Sociology)
American Sociological Association
January 1991-January 1993
$2,500

Professor Julia Wrigley was funded to examine the relations between parents and child care workers. Her goal is to place the relations between parents and caregivers, often viewed in purely individual terms, in a sociological context, examining issues and possible tensions between parents and caregivers as reflecting larger inequalities and class-based child rearing attitudes.

Wrigley's research is designed to explore underlying issues between parents and caregivers that can arise from different views of what counts as quality care. In exploring the minutia of relations between parents and caregivers, including views on how children should talk, eat, dress, and behave, the research also illuminates macro issues of inequality and class boundaries in the society, with particular attention on a theoretical level to how they have been affected by the spread of education. The research explores the social complexities created by the intertwining of the lives of parents, children, and caregivers in households, even as one set of parties, the caregivers, occupies a highly responsible but socially subordinate position.

"Prostitution in Eighteenth-Century France"
Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
The Florence J. Gould Foundation
$19,492

Professor Kathryn Norberg was funded to complete research on her book about prostitution and its depiction in French art and literature between 1650-1814. The book, under contract to the University of California Press for its series on French history and culture, investigates how gender and sexuality were constructed socially and culturally at a critical period in French history. Thus, Norberg uses prostitution as an instrument for examining gender roles and unearthing hidden distinctions based upon sex. In her book, Norberg seeks to demonstrate the relevance of French feminist theory to historical analysis, and to make the American scholarly community familiar with a set of documents and texts either utterly unknown or virtually neglected. She draws upon archival sources previously unexamined--police reports, hospital records and court documents—and also looks at a group of texts neglected by historians, namely the erotic novels written during the Enlightenment, erotic novels written by women, and engravings and illustrations.

Norberg takes a resolutely feminist approach, incorporating political theory in her research on prostitution to study the history of gender. The book ends with an analysis of the role of the prostitute in literature produced during the Revolution and argues that liberalism, while freeing men, reduced women to their bodies, figuratively to whores, and therefore excluded them from full participation in civil society.

"Gender and Politics"
Ellen DuBois, PI (History)
UCLA College of Letters and Science
Deans Eisnering and Sears
$10,500 (July 1988-June 1989)
$10,500 (July 1989-June 1990)
$10,500 (July 1990-June 1991)
$1,500 (July 1991-June 1992)

Professor Ellen DuBois was awarded funds by UCLA in 1988 to direct a three-year series of interdisciplinary programs on gender and politics, broadly construed. During the first year, with the support of Center program staff, Professor DuBois organized regular meetings of UCLA faculty interested in bridging the gap between academic research on woman and women's political and community organizing in Los Angeles. These meetings focused on the contemporary dilemmas facing women and the character of feminist political responses to these dilemmas. These were explored through readings and group discussions.

During year two, this group continued meeting to discuss and analyze feminist issues. In addition, the project sponsored a symposium on May 14, 1990, entitled "A Conference on Domestic Workers: Feminist Perspectives." This symposium focused on women household workers in the United States and internationally, the racial and ethnic dimensions of domestic labor in the United States, and possibilities for labor organization among domestic workers in California and Latin America.

The third year of the project brought veteran feminist activists to UCLA in May 1991 to offer analytic memoirs of the 1960's and 1970's at a two-day conference entitled "What Ever Happened to Women's Liberation? Rethinking the Origins of Contemporary Feminism." In her opening remarks, Professor DuBois pointed out the contrast between 19th-century feminists who left behind a wealth of records, and 1960's-70's activists who have not done enough to document the true history of the women's movement. DuBois urged participants to create records and document their personal experiences. Throughout the conference, the need to build and strengthen links between academic and non-academic feminists was emphasized.

For 1991-92 activity, see "Programs" (III/C).

"Media Adaptations of the Works of Black Women Writers"
Jacqueline Bobo, President's Fellowship Program
Office of the President
July 1991-June 1992
$34,204

See "Researchers Affiliated with CSW-University of California President's Fellowship" (D-3) for a detailed description of Bobo's research project.

"Predicting Sexual Coercion and Antisocial Behavior Against Women"
Neil Malamuth, PI (Communication Studies)
Daniel Linz, PI (Psychology, UC Santa Barbara)
National Institute of Mental Health
May 1990-October 1992
$414,284
$20,217 (supplemental funds)

Professors Malamuth and Linz continued a two-year study of men considered to be "at risk" for behaviors that are physically and psychologically abusive toward women. The project findings are expected to have important theoretical and applied implications. They should offer a better understanding of the causes of men's antisocial behavior against women, assess the validity of theoretical perspectives that hold that a wide range of antisocial behaviors have common causes, and indicate whether it is feasible to identify men who are "at risk" for behaviors such as spouse abuse before the behaviors occur.

In November 1990, a no-cost modification of the above grant was requested and subsequently approved for an extension of the period of performance from April 30, 1991, through April 30, 1992. A second no-cost time extension was requested in January 1992 and the period of performance was extended through October 1992.

Professor Malamuth also applied for supplemental funds of $20,217 to complete the above project. These supplemental funds were awarded to Professors Malamuth and Linz to enable the gathering of data from a larger number of subjects than would be feasible with the current budget. The study is a follow-up of 423 men who were originally studied intensively nearly ten years ago. Malamuth and Linz have also been obtaining data from the female partners of these men (i.e., wives or girlfriends).
2. Newly Funded Projects

"Learning from Latin America: Women's Struggles for Livelihood"
John Friedmann, PI (Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning)
February 1991-June 1992
MacArthur Foundation Program on Peace and International Understanding
$25,000 (January 1991-September 1992)
Inter-American Foundation
$10,000 (December 1991-November 1992)
The Ford Foundation
$30,200 (November 1991-October 1992)
National Science Foundation
$20,000 (March 1992-February 1993)

Women in Latin America have actively responded to prolonged economic crisis and deepening poverty in ways that have been both politically and psychologically empowering. Their experiences and survival strategies have given rise to a significant body of research. Professor Friedmann served as the convener of a three-day conference the intention of which was to examine this new research and spark a continuing North-South dialogue on how urban and rural poverty affects women, their families, and their communities. Held on the UCLA campus and in the Latina community, this conference-workshop is the first major encounter between scholars from both American continents who study poor women in Latin America. It places these scholars' research in a cross-cultural, cross-disciplinary and comparative perspective. For a more complete description of the project, see "Programs" (III-F).

"Caregiving Practices in Hispanic and Anglo Families"
Robert Emerson, PI (Sociology)
National Institute of Aging
July 1992-June 1995
$295,070

In this project, Professor Emerson will examine ethnic and gender differences in (1) the development and use of informal caregiving practices that spouses employ in the home to take care of and manage the Alzheimer's patient, and (2) family caregivers' consideration of and possible turn to formal caregiving strategies, including support groups, respite and in-home care, day care, and perhaps ultimately institutionalization. Specific attention will be given both to the nature and consequences of management practices developed to control the behavior of the person with Alzheimer's, and to that person's cooperation with or resistance to the caregiver's care and control efforts.

The research will employ qualitative in-depth interviews at six-month intervals over a two-year period with a final sample of sixty Hispanic and Anglo Alzheimer spousal caregivers. The research design will also entail participant observation field research focused on gate keeping and entry processes at agencies that either assess family caregiving needs and link family caregivers with formal services, or that directly provide such services. These procedures will allow in-depth longitudinal analysis of the experience and practices of informal family caregiving and of the processes of transition to formal care, including caregivers' efforts to find out about, contact, assess, arrange for and implement such care. Ethnic and gender variations in these processes will be brought out and analyzed.
"UCLA Humanities Educational Leadership Project"
Karen E. Rowe, PI (English)
American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS)
August 1, 1992-December 31, 1993
$32,500

As part of UCLA's collaboration with the American Council of Learned societies, the Los Angeles Unified School District, and the Los Angeles Educational Program to strengthen Humanities education in secondary schools, Professor Karen Rowe would serve as director of the UCLA's Humanities Educational Leadership Project. Professor Rowe would direct the curriculum transformation seminars, establish mentoring relationships between UCLA faculty and ACLS Fellows, collaborate with ACLS post-docs and Fellows to develop educational materials for use in secondary schools; serve as a liaison between UCLA and the ACLS Fellow and the Humanities teaching team located in their respective high schools; and participate in events scheduled by the ACLS to achieve the individual and group goals set for this project during the 1992-93 academic year.

"Syntax and Semantics in Context: Media Reporting on Violence Against Women"
Nancy M. Henley, PI (Psychology)
The Spencer Foundation
May 1992-March 1993
$7,455

The mass media, the source of news and opinion for most Americans, serve as a vast educational system outside the formal systems provided by state and local governments, and their potential effects on beliefs and attitudes should be examined in this light. Professor Henley intends for this research project to examine the link between expressive forms in the mass media and cultural beliefs about violence against women. More specifically, it tests claims that the media tend to report sexual violence in passive-verb format, making the female survivor of violence the focus and the male perpetrator an almost invisible figure in the story. It has been noted that this format portrays women as responsible for the violence and overlooks men's role as the agent of violence. This first phase of the research will be a study of a major newspaper with respect to forms used in reporting violence against women compared with those used in reporting non-sexual violence, nonviolent crimes, and neutral and positive acts. In basic research terms, the research examines the link between syntax and semantics.

The contribution of the proposed research will be to increase knowledge of the role of the mass media as a source of popular education/everyday knowledge. In particular, if the results of the research indicate a greater use of the passive for acts of male violence against women, or for men's negative acts in general, compared with their positive acts and compared with women's negative and positive acts, more will be known about potentially detrimental writing styles in newspaper reporting and perhaps something of how the social milieu affects them.

"The Life and Development of Mayan Children In and Out of School"
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
UC MEXUS
July 1992-June 1993
$12,000

This proposed project emphasizes field research in the highland of Chiapas Mexico. It builds on a program of research by Professor Greenfield that has investigated the education and development of Mayan children in and out of school over a span of more than twenty years. In 1992, Greenfield returned to Chiapas to do a twenty-year follow-up study of the effects of economic development (the change from an agrarian to an entrepreneurial economy) on informal education and cognitive development among the Zinacantecos. Returning with her team to the same village where they had conducted studies two decades earlier, they were able to study the children of their subjects from 1969 and 1970, thus carrying out a unique natural experiment on the effects of historical change. The proposed project would build on and extend this research and, most important, create an ongoing field site that could be used for field research training for many years to come.

The project involves a collaborative research exchange between UCLA and a branch of the National Education University (Universidad Pedagogica nacional) in San Cristobal de las Casas. The theme of the project is the role of culture and education in the development of Mayan and Mestize children. This topic is of importance to policy issues in the education of Mexican children. It is also of importance for theoretically based issues concerning the role of culture in socialization and child development, as well as for broader educational issues of cultural diversity and bilingual education.

"The Effects of Economic Development on the Socialization of Tool Use in a Mayan Community"
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
The Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research, Inc.
May 1992-July 1993
$12,000

This project is an empirical, historical study of the effects of culture change on the instructional processes required for tool use in the Mayan community of Zinacantan in highland Chiapas, Mexico. The tool selected for study is the backstrap loom, a tool with a long history among the Maya. Twenty years ago, Greenfield carried out studies of weaving instruction and of weaving's cognitive effects in Nabenchaum, a Zinacanteco hamlet. In 1991, she returned to Nabenchaum to study the descendants of the original subjects in order to assess the effects of two decades of entrepreneurial development on informal education and learning processes. The research has relevance for understanding how changes in transmission processes both reflect and perpetuate changes in the ecology/economy of a society and its cultural values.

C. Call for Conference Proposals

For the past few years, the CSW has held a campus-wide competition for small grants (approximately $2,000) to encourage faculty research on women and gender. Instead of a mini-grant competition in 1991-92, the CSW held a competition for conference funds designated specifically for conferences on women and gender. Funds will be transferred to recipients' home departments in fiscal year 1992-1993. Three applications were submitted and two were selected by the Executive Committee. These two projects were:

Lucy White (Law)
Women and Poverty

Professor Lucy White plans to convene two mini-conferences in the fall of 1992 and the spring of 1993 that will bring together Head Start mothers and UCLA faculty interested in women and poverty. The interaction of women from the Los Angeles community and UCLA scholars should lead to new methods and research agendas.

Janet Bergstrom (Film) and Anne Mellor (English)
A Feminist Theory Speaker Series

Professors Bergstrom and Mellor plan to invite approximately six internationally known feminist theorists to campus during the 1992-93 academic year. These theorists will give a public lecture and preside at an informal seminar composed of both faculty and graduate students.
D. Researchers Affiliated with CSW

During 1991-92, several independent scholars doing research on women and gender were associated with the Center as Research Scholars and Affiliated Scholars. The Center also hosted its first University of California President’s Fellow.

Through their formal affiliation, these scholars received library privileges, stationery, opportunities to participate in all Center activities and assistance in developing funding proposals.

1. Research Scholars

The Research Scholar category was created to provide a Center affiliation and title for established scholars not funded on extramural projects. Five researchers held appointments as CSW Research Scholars in 1991-92:

Sondra Hale has had a long association with CSW, as an Affiliated Scholar, as a Visiting Associate Professor in the Women's Studies Program and as a member of various Center committees. An anthropologist, Hale studies gender and class issues with an emphasis on the Middle East and Africa. She is currently finishing work on Gender and Politics in Sudan, a book that explores the problematic uses of culture by various institutions and by women themselves to affect gender arrangements. She also plans a project tracing colonial to post-colonial representations of Sudanese by Westerners and of Westerners by Sudanese. For this research, access to the vast UCLA Sudan collection will be essential.

S. Barbara (Penny) Kanner, a scholar in English social history, was a Visiting Scholar in the UCLA History Department in 1991-92. She is continuing to work on her current project, "British Women's Autobiographies, 1720-1920," a reference work on 1,000-1,200 autobiographies.

Mitzi Myers' association with the Center is vital to her work, since it provides her with access to UCLA's Children's Book Collection, the Sadleir Collection and the University Research Library's manuscript holdings of women's writings and related materials. Myers is fast becoming one of the United States' leading experts in the field of children's literature. In 1991-92, while on leave from teaching, Myers has continued work on her book on Maria Edgeworth, an 18th-century author of children's stories, as well as working on a number of other projects relating to women and education.

Norma Fain Pratt was appointed as a CSW Research Scholar effective April 1, 1992. She received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 1976 and has taught women's history at UCLA, Sarah Lawrence and CSULA. Currently she teaches in the History Department at Mt. San Antonio College. Although in the past she has specialized in the history of immigrant Jewish women of Eastern European background in the United States, her current research project deals with female childhood in Southeast Asia, particularly Thailand and Indonesia. In connection with this research, she is developing a joint project with the Women and Youth Studies Program at Thammasat University in Bangkok and the Public Health Program at Khon Kaen University in northeastern Thailand.

Nayereh Tohidi, a social psychologist, has been studying women in the Middle East, particularly Iran, for more than a decade. Her work on the situation of Iranian women since the Islamic revolution has been widely published and disseminated at international conferences. Currently she is studying the rise of "Islamic feminism," a movement of fundamentalist women in Iran who are fighting for expanded women's rights within Islam. She is also conducting an empirical investigation of the impact of acculturation on intergenerational and marital conflicts, family stability and the divorce rate among Iranian immigrants in the United States. During 1991-92, Tohidi received a Fulbright Award to teach and study at Azerbaijan State University. She was the first scholar to teach courses on the psychology of gender in the Soviet republic.
2. Affiliated Scholars

Now in its fifth year, the Affiliated Scholars Program is designed to promote research on women and gender by bringing independent scholars and faculty from the larger women's studies community to UCLA. The program specifically seeks to attract racial and ethnic minority scholars doing research on women and gender who have limited institutional support. Affiliated Scholars meet to discuss their research, and they participate in Center-sponsored activities. The Affiliated Scholars Program is overseen by a faculty committee which reviews applications and selects scholars each year. For a list of these committee members, see Appendix I.

Appendix II lists the 1991-92 scholars and their research projects. Five new Affiliated Scholars were selected for the program:

Marilyn Manners received her Ph.D. in Comparative Literature from UCLA in 1989. Supervising editor of the journal Emergences, she is studying sexual feminisms and popular culture.

Anita Hemphill McCormick received her Ph.D. in English from UCLA in 1984. She is currently a lecturer in the UCLA Writing Programs and is studying women writers and their family relationships.

Kathryn McMahon received her Ph.D. in Comparative Culture from UC Irvine in 1989. She is conducting an analysis of representations of Vietnamese women in U.S. popular media histories of the war.

Yung Wha Son received her Ph.D. in Music Composition from UC San Diego in 1986. An independent composer, she is studying the links between music and feminist scholarship in other fields.

Deborah Then received her Ph.D. in Psychology and Education from Stanford in 1986. She is an independent scholar studying women and physical attractiveness.

Two 1990-91 scholars were reappointed for 1991-92:

Jill Cherneff received her Ph.D. in Anthropology from the New School for Social Research in 1981. She is conducting an ethnographic study of women behind the camera in the Hollywood film industry.

Marta Lopez-Garza received her Ph.D. in Sociology from UCLA in 1985. An assistant professor of Sociology at California State University, Los Angeles, she is researching the implications of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 on the status of immigrant women from Mexico and Central America.

3. University of California President's Fellowship

From its inception, the Center for the Study of Women has been committed to facilitating research about, and service for, women of color. Thus, during the summer of 1990 CSW Associate Director Julia Wrigley looked into the possibility of hosting a University of California President's Fellow. These postdoctoral fellowships are designed to open academic careers to people of color.

In the fall of 1990, CSW launched its fellowship program that offered successful President's Fellowship applicants doing gender research the opportunity to affiliate both with the Center and with an academic department. Announcements of the CSW program were sent out by the President's Office as inserts in every fellowship application; in addition, CSW distributed program announcements and asked core faculty to serve as fellowship mentors. The response to the program was enthusiastic. Many faculty members agreed to serve as mentors, and many new Ph.D.s inquired about affiliation with the Center. Four applicants were matched with mentors. Of those four, one was selected as a President's Fellow. She began her affiliation with the Center on July 1, 1991.
Jacqueline Bobo, the Center's first President's Fellow, is an assistant professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, in the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures. She studies media images of Black women. Her mentor at UCLA is Valerie Smith (English). Bobo's original fellowship project, "Media Adaptations of the Works of Black Women Writers" has been expanded to include the work of Black women filmmakers and an assessment of Black women as spectators. Bobo is currently completing this research that will result in a book on Black women and film entitled, Credible Witness: Black Women, Film Theory, and Spectatorship.

Bobo was a speaker at the April 14 session of the Feminist Research Seminar, and was featured in a profile in the Center’s Fall 1991 Newsletter. Her fellowship has been renewed for 1992-93.

In 1991-92, the Center again recruited applicants to the President's Fellowship program and sponsored two scholars. Unfortunately, neither was among the twenty fellows selected.

III. Programs

CSW programs are designed to support and enrich the Center's research activities. Some programs spark ideas and questions that ultimately become the source of new research proposals. Other programs disseminate the results of funded research and enable us to keep the larger UCLA community informed of the most recent work on women and gender. Programs often vary according to their disciplinary focus. Scholars in the humanities are more likely to conduct research individually and to gather for presentations of papers at workshops and conferences; social scientists more often engage in large data gathering projects and work in collaboration with other researchers. The Center seeks to sponsor a variety of programs to meet these different needs.

CSW programs are also central to our efforts to build an active community of UCLA scholars doing research on women and gender. In this respect, our programs provide much-needed opportunities for our faculty and graduate students to discuss and debate issues within and across disciplines and to develop new critiques and formulations of feminist theory. All of our programs are designed to encourage multicultural research attentive to racial, ethnic and class diversity.

The following sections describe the ongoing programs, special conferences and events that were offered or co-sponsored by the Center during the 1991-92 academic year.

A. Feminist Research Seminar

The purpose of this long-standing interdisciplinary seminar is to provide an informal setting for the discussion of theoretical, methodological and cross-cultural issues raised by current feminist scholarship. Special attention is given to the ways in which race and class interact with gender.

Now in its twelfth year, the seminar is financially self-supporting. It meets twice per quarter and is open to faculty, graduate students and affiliated researchers who join the seminar for a modest membership fee. UCLA faculty and affiliated scholars doing research on women and gender are invited to present their work-in-progress to the seminar. In order to allow more time for discussion, the papers are distributed in advance. The format is designed to facilitate active interchange among all seminar participants, rather than to showcase completed work. Speakers distribute articles by other scholars in their field as well as their own work-in-progress so that participants can better understand the disciplinary context of the papers presented. This understanding, in turn, promotes interdisciplinary work.
Faculty Co-Chairs Chris Littleton (Law) and Valerie Smith (English) coordinated the 1991-92 seminar with the assistance of CSW Programs Coordinator Lynn Naliboff. Membership was composed of over 120 faculty, graduate students and affiliated researchers. The speakers represented work in the disciplines of anthropology, political science, philosophy, law, film and television, and psychiatry. A complete listing of the seminar topics and speakers for 1991-92 is included in Appendix III.

B. Graduate Student Programs

The CSW Graduate Programs Committee has identified three major ways in which the Center can assist UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender. These include: 1) creating a sense of community among students from diverse departments/schools and facilitating networking among them; 2) providing opportunities for graduate students to present their research in public forums and obtain feedback about their work from other feminist students and faculty; and 3) making funds available through the Center to support graduate research on women and gender and providing students with information about other funding sources and opportunities.

The Center's mailing list of UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender currently includes over 350 names and makes direct communication with each student possible. Individuals on the mailing list receive the quarterly newsletter, information about CSW programs and invitations to CSW-sponsored events. We also share the list with other campus departments sponsoring programs of interest to our students. The list is updated regularly, and frequent adds in the Graduate Division Newsletter and announcements in our own newsletter encourage students engaged in feminist research to send us information about themselves. As a result of these efforts, graduate student attendance at Center events increased dramatically this past year.

This year the Friends of the Center for the Study of Women focused on raising funds for graduate student research on women and gender. Toward this end, the Graduate Programs Committee helped the Friends organize a luncheon event to honor students who had received grants from the Center that had been made possible by generous donations from the Friends. "On the Cutting Edge: UCLA Graduate Research on Women," was held at the Faculty Center on October 7, 1991. Student grant recipients Carole Collier Frick (History), O. Funmilayo Makarah (Film and TV), and Mary O'Connor (English) spoke about their work to a group of forty-five faculty, students and Friends. The program for this event is included in Appendix IV-A.

The committee's next program was aimed at new and returning graduate students engaged in feminist research. On October 27, 1991, a potluck dinner was held at the home of Professor Ellen DuBois (History). (See Appendix IV-B.) Over twenty-five students and faculty (many new to UCLA as well as to the Center) attended this event. They were given information about the Women's Studies Program as well as CSW-sponsored events and programs.

On January 27, 1992, the committee sponsored an afternoon program for students engaged in feminist research called "Graduate Funding: Resources and Strategies." Over sixty students attended the opening plenary session and the following four concurrent workshops that were organized by academic discipline. Faculty and staff speakers provided information and advice about obtaining funding for graduate research on women and gender. The atmosphere was very informal and students were encouraged to ask questions specific to their own research and funding needs. Appendix IV-C contains a complete listing of the program speakers and their topics.

In order to provide graduate students with a much-needed opportunity to present their work in a public forum, the Center sponsored its second annual graduate research conference on April 20, 1992. Thirty-six UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender presented papers in a day-long series of interdisciplinary workshops. Altogether, over one hundred people participated in the program, which included a keynote address by Joyce Appleby (History). A complete listing of the conference speakers and their paper topics as well as a copy of the call for abstracts are included in Appendix IV-D.
1. Travel Grant Program

The Travel Grant Program was initiated in the fall of 1990 to assist UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender with travel expenses related to their research and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences. Through these awards, the Center is able to directly support and facilitate the academic and career aspirations of graduate students doing gender-related work.

During the 1991-92 academic year, funds were awarded three times in competitions held quarterly. A joint student/faculty committee (a subcommittee of the Graduate Programs Committee with a rotating membership) reviewed the applications and notified the recipients by the end of each quarter. A program flyer, a copy of the guidelines and procedures and an application are included in Appendix IV-E.

A total of $3,300 was distributed among fourteen students during this funding cycle, with a maximum award per student of $400. Forty graduate students representing sixteen different departments and schools submitted applications. A list of the 1991-92 travel grant recipients is included in Appendix IV-F.

2. Mary Wollstonecraft Prize

The Center presents an annual award, the Mary Wollstonecraft Prize, for the outstanding dissertation that concerns women or gender and that makes use of historical materials and methods. The prize was established in the amount of $1,000 by the Edwin and S. Barbara (Penny) Kanner Endowed Fund for the Mary Wollstonecraft Prize. Although the prize has been awarded since 1988, it was endowed in December 1989 by a generous gift from Penny Kanner and her husband. Kanner, who received her Ph.D. from UCLA, is a Research Scholar at the Center who specializes in British women's history. This award is designed to make doctoral research on women more visible and to assist students at a critical stage in their careers.

The 1991-92 recipient of the Wollstonecraft Prize was Joan Waugh, a graduate of the history department. Waugh's dissertation, "Unsentimental Reformer: Josephine Shaw Lowell and the Rise and Fall of the Scientific Charity Movement," deals with a philanthropist and reformer active in late 19th and early 20th century America. Lowell's career illustrates a major transition in the American response to poverty, from upper-class charity to professionalized social science, a transition in which women played a major role. Waugh shows keen insight into Lowell and her contemporaries, recreating their world with imagination and grace. Integrating issues of gender, race, class, and ideology, she provides an analysis of her subject that is impressive in its depth as well as its scope.

Waugh's dissertation was selected by a Center committee composed of Martha Banta, Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Chair, and Debora Silverman.

C. Gender and Politics Project

Professor Ellen DuBois (History) was awarded funds by UCLA in 1988 to direct a three-year series of interdisciplinary programs on gender and political issues through the Center for the Study of Women. In May 1990, this group presented a one-day symposium on domestic labor entitled "A Conference on Domestic Workers: Feminist Perspectives." In May 1991, DuBois convened a two-day conference entitled "What Ever Happened to Women's Liberation? Rethinking the Origins of Contemporary Feminism." Funding for the Gender and Politics Project has been renewed until 1993. In 1991-92, planning began for an international conference on the historical and cross-cultural dimensions of women's enfranchisement. In 1991-92, Professors Pateman and DuBois were awarded a Center mini-grant to support research and planning connected with this conference.
D. Public Lecture Series and Conference Co-Sponsorships

Throughout the academic year, the CSW organizes and co-sponsors a large number of public lectures, conferences and special events related to women and gender issues. These programs provide opportunities for faculty and graduate students to learn more about the work of their feminist colleagues on other campuses and to share their own research with the UCLA community.

Most of the lectures are a part of the "Women, Culture and Society Public Lecture Series" that the Center co-sponsors with the UCLA Women's Studies Program. The two units also share in the planning and organization of events to commemorate Women's Week at UCLA. Mary Smith, Assistant to the Director of Women's Studies, plays an important role in this process.

The Center also provides financial support and organizational assistance for conferences and speakers sponsored by other campus units. To qualify for co-sponsorship, a program must address women and gender issues and include CSW faculty and graduate students as speakers and/or participants. During the 1991-92 academic year, the Center co-sponsored conferences with the UCLA Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, the UCLA G. E. von Grunebaum Center for Near Eastern Studies, the Coalition of Women from Asia and the Middle East, the UCLA Center for Afro-American Studies, the Latin American Center, the Chicano Studies Research Center, and the Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning.

A complete list of lectures, conferences and special events that the CSW co-sponsored can be found in Appendix V.

E. Brown Bag Lunch Seminars

In the fall of 1991, the Center initiated a new series of brown bag lunch seminars. Faculty engaged in research on women and gender were invited to present their work in a more intimate and informal setting than that provided by either the Feminist Research Seminar or the Public Lecture Series. The seminars were conceived as a community building device as well as an opportunity for faculty to share their work-in-progress with their colleagues and obtain valuable feedback.

The seminars were held in the Center's new conference room, Kinsey 288, on Thursdays from 12:00 to 1:00 p.m. Although attendance at these events varied, the discussions were always lively and of value to the speakers. During the spring quarter, the seminars were switched to Wednesdays, and graduate students as well as faculty were invited to attend. This increased both the size and disciplinary diversity of the audience.

For a complete list of the twelve faculty members who led a brown bag lunch seminar during the 1991-92 academic year, their affiliations and their topics, see Appendix VI.

F. Women and Poverty in Latin America Conference

The CSW organized and co-sponsored a conference entitled "Learning from Latin America: Women's Struggles for Livelihood" which was held on February 27-29, 1992. John Friedmann (Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning) conceived and directed the project, along with CSW Acting Director Helen S. Astin. The conference was co-sponsored by CSW, GSAUP, the Latin American Center, and the Chicano Studies Research Center. The conference was coordinated by CSW Programs Coordinator Lynn Naliboff. Funding was provided by the MacArthur Foundation, the Inter-American Foundation, the Ford Foundation and the National Science Foundation. A copy of the conference program is included in Appendix VII-A, and a list of participants, their area of research and their publications can be found in Appendix VII-B.
Twenty-three Latin American and North American scholars presented papers or commentary based on current research on poor women's struggles for subsistence in light of the prolonged economic crisis in Latin America. Links were made between the experiences of women in Latin America and issues of special concern for those working with Latina communities in the United States. To this end, ten activists from the Latina communities of Los Angeles were invited to participate in the conference and bring a firsthand perspective to the academic findings.

On the final day of the conference, a closed workshop was held at the Dolores Mission in central Los Angeles, generating a dialogue between scholars and community activists on the empowerment of poor women and what lessons poverty workers in the United States can learn from the Latin American experience.

Conference papers are currently being revised for publication; it is hoped that translation and editing will be completed by the fall of 1992. A follow-up to the conference is also being planned, including a seminar for women legislators which would serve to disseminate the findings of the conference and encourage translation into concrete public policy initiatives.

G. Annual Research Retreat

The Annual CSW Research Retreat is designed to offer scholars an opportunity to share present gender-related work-in-progress at an interdisciplinary gathering. The 1992 retreat, entitled "Feminist Scholarship at the Crossroads," took place on May 16 at the Serra Retreat in Malibu. Thirty-five faculty members, graduate students and affiliated researchers came together to reflect on the current status of feminist scholarship and debate new directions to be explored.

The morning session featured a discussion of current issues in feminist scholarship in the social sciences and the humanities, led by Anne Mellor (English) and Carol Tavris (Psychology). In the afternoon, participants discussed two recent books: Backlash by Susan Faludi and Revolution from Within by Gloria Steinem. The afternoon discussion was facilitated by Carrie Menkel-Meadow (Law) and Karin Elliott Brown (Social Welfare). A complete agenda is included in Appendix VIII.

H. Publications Reception

On November 13, 1991, the Center hosted a publications' reception and open house to honor works on women and gender published by CSW scholars. The reception was held in the Center's new conference space in Kinsey 288. More than forty recent books, book chapters and journal articles authored by UCLA faculty, graduate students and research affiliates were featured at the reception. The Center received $150 from Jossey-Bass Inc. in San Francisco to help defray expenses. See Appendix IX for a copy of the flyer.

I. Friends of the Center for the Study of Women

The Center has an active group of community supporters called the Friends of the Center for the Study of Women. The Friends function as a formal support group. During the 1991-92 year, Beatrice Mandel served a third term as the President of the Friends, providing leadership in fund-raising and in the development and presentation of programs sponsored by the Friends. Members of the Friends' Executive Board are listed in Appendix X.
This year the Friends organized a spring benefit/fund-raiser for the Center, featuring a special performance by Academy Award winner Patty Duke, an informal "high tea" and a tour of beautifully restored Victorian-era homes on Carroll Avenue just north of downtown Los Angeles. All proceeds from this event went to support UCLA graduate students whose research relates to women and gender.

In 1991-92, Friends member and noted editor Jean Stone contributed an additional $10,000 to the Jean Stone endowment. This endowment, established last year, is providing significant new support for faculty and graduate student research on women and gender-related issues. Details of the Friends' Income and Expenditures can be found in Supplement B.

In addition to the spring benefit, the Friends sponsored five other programs during 1991-92.

1. Topic: On the Cutting Edge: UCLA Graduate Student Research on Women
   Date: October 7, 1991
   Moderators: Bea Mandel, President, Friends of CSW
                   Helen S. Astin, CSW Acting Director
   Introduction: Ellen DuBois, CSW Graduate Committee Chair
   Student Speakers: Carole Frick, Department of History
                         "Gender, Society and Economics in the Dress of Renaissance Florence"
                         O. Funmilayo Makarah, Department of Film
                         "Multiculturalism and the Media"
                         Mary O'Connor, Department of English
                         "In Her Own Image: Irish Women Poets and the Question of Identity"
   Program Chair: Laura Levy, Friends of CSW

2. Topic: Women's Health Issues: A Medical Update
   Date: November 20, 1991
   Moderators: Bea Mandel, President, Friends of CSW
                   Helen S. Astin, CSW Acting Director
   Panel Speakers: Andrea J. Rapkin, M.D., Associate Professor of Obstetrics & Gynecology
                     "Hormone Replacement in Menopausal Women"
                     Patricia A. Ganz, M.D., Associate Professor of Medicine/Oncology;
                     Chief, Hematology & Oncology Division, Sepulveda VA Medical Center
                     "Breast Cancer Prevention and What's New in Breast Cancer Treatment"
                     Lynne Warner Stevenson, M.D.
                     Assistant Professor of Medicine/Cardiology;
                     Director of the Cardiomyopathy Center
                     "Risk Factors in Heart Disease"
   Program Chair: Carolyn L. Shine, Friends of CSW

3. Topic: Estate Planning for Women: A Legal Perspective
   Date: March 5, 1992
   Speaker: Wendy L. Kohn, Friends Member and Lawyer
Date: May 4, 1992
Speaker: Janet Sternberg
Co-Sponsor: Friends of English

5. Topic: The Forgotten Feminist: Alva Vanderbelt Belmont
Date: June 30, 1992
Speaker: Margaret Haydon Rector
Program Chair: Sallie O'Neill

IV. PUBLICATIONS

Promoting and maintaining informational links among scholars doing research on women and gender is one of the primary functions of the Center. The CSW also seeks to inform the wider academic community about research resulting from Center-supported projects.

In addition to Center-based publications, most speakers in the Feminist Research Seminar, as well as many of the Principal Investigators, Research Scholars and Affiliated Scholars at CSW, have published their research results in scholarly journals and books. Through the publications described below, the Center informs individuals and organizations within and beyond UCLA about the research and programs it supports.

A. Newsletter

In 1991–1992, the CSW published two Newsletters that contained profiles of faculty members, book reviews and reports on Center-sponsored conferences and social events. In February of 1992, budget concerns led to the termination of the part-time editor position and a hiatus in publication of the Newsletter. The Assistant to the Director has assumed the responsibilities of the editor, and the publication of the Newsletter under a new name and format will resume in the fall of 1992.

B. Directories

During 1991-92, the CSW completed the first nine-campus UC directory, Research on Women and Gender: A Directory of UC Scholars. The book is modeled on Research on Women and Gender: A Directory of UCLA Scholars that the Center published in 1989. The new directory includes faculty conducting gender-related research at all nine campuses in the UC system. The UC Council of Women's Programs initiated this project at its first meeting in 1985. Primary responsibility for the directory was assumed by UCLA CSW in 1989. Psychology Professor Anne Peplau, a member of the Center's core faculty, and CSW Senior Editor Penelope Moffet worked together with other members of the CSW staff and with women's studies liaisons at the eight other UC campuses to organize the book. Funding to cover printing costs for the fall 1991 publication was provided by the Office of the President.

C. Occasional Memo

In winter 1992, one issue of the Occasional Memo concerning opportunities for funding was compiled by Evelyn Barnes, Assistant to the Director. This memo listed funding sources, deadlines and information about the principal federal agencies.
V. Administration and Operations

During the 1991-92 academic year, the Center was administered in the fall and winter quarters by Acting Director, Helen Astin. At the beginning of the spring quarter, Professor Kathryn Norberg became the permanent Director of the CSW.

A. Advisory and Executive Committees of CSW

The Center's administration is advised by a faculty committee appointed by Dean Fred Eiserling. The Advisory Committee met once during each of fall and winter quarters and twice in the spring quarter. The Executive Committee met three times each quarter. In addition to its Advisory and Executive Committees, the Center also benefits from the advice of faculty members serving on seven different standing committees: Affiliated Scholars; Research; Graduate Programs; Development; Wollstonecraft Prize; Feminist Research Seminar and Publications. Members of these committees for 1991-92 are listed in Appendix I.

B. Staff

This past year saw major changes in staff personnel and staff patterns at the Center. Evelyn Barnes became the Assistant to the Director on August 1, 1991. She resigned at the beginning of April 1992. A search for a replacement was begun immediately and eventuated in June 1992 in the hiring of Dawn Waring, Ph.D., as the new Assistant to the Director. She assumed the position in August 1992.

In December 1991, La Vera Ward, the CSW Administrative Assistant and receptionist, moved to Atlanta. Bettyann Chun was hired for this position shortly thereafter.

In order to render the operations of the Center more efficient and less costly, a major reorganization of staff was undertaken in the spring of 1992. In February, the part-time Editor was laid off. In April, the Computer and Administrative Specialist as well as the Director of Programs and the Program Coordinator, all part-time positions, were laid off. The functions of the Programs staff and the editor will be assumed by the Assistant to the Director. Van Do-Nguyen continued in her position as Director of Operations for the entire year. In July 1991, she was reclassified from Administrative Assistant III to Administrative Analyst. During the academic year, the Center was also assisted by undergraduate and graduate students.

C. Space

Currently the Center occupies a total of 1,740 square feet in Kinsey Hall (rooms 236A, 251, 255 and 288).

D. Budget

The Center's permanent budget is composed mainly of 19900 funds allocated by the Dean of the Life Sciences. In addition, the Center receives one-time allocations for special projects and utilizes resources from funds raised by the Friends of the CSW (Supplement B) and from grants awarded from private and public foundations and agencies.
The detailed budget, including income and expenditures by sources, is listed in Supplement A.

1991–92 Summary of Funding Sources

19900 sub-0 Academic Salaries
19900 Operational Budget
One-time Special Allocations
University Support to Faculty Research
Donor Funds
Income
Foundations
Federal Agencies

TOTAL: $1,677,818.21

E. Equipment

The Center's current inventory of computer equipment consists of the following: 1 IBM AT clone, 4 original equipment IBM PCs upgraded with AST Super Paks, 1 MAC/SE, 1 MAC+ with external hard drive, 1 IBM Quietwriter impact printer, 1 Okidata dot matrix printer, 1 HP LaserJet I printer, 1 HP LaserJet II printer, a LaserWriter NTX and a newly acquired LaserJet III. The Center's reception area houses an IAS computer (an IBM PSII/60) and an accompanying Diablo dot matrix printer. The Center also has 2 IBM selectric typewriters, 1 Panasonic typewriter, 1 IBM Wheelwriter 6 and one Wheelwriter 10.

F. Affiliation with Other Groups

The Center's staff and administration are affiliated with a number of groups locally, at the state level and nationally.

Women's Studies Program

The Director of the Center sits on the Faculty Advisory Committee of Women's Studies. The Women Studies Program and the CSW co-sponsor the public lecture series and share the cost of bringing in outside speakers. With the institution of a Ph.D. in Women's Studies at UCLA, the two units should draw still closer together.

University of California Council of Women's Programs

The Center is a member of the UC Council of Women's Programs which is composed of representatives of women's studies programs and feminist research units on the nine California campuses. In 1991-92, the UC Council met three times. The first meeting was October 11. The Women's Studies Program at UC Irvine hosted a special meeting to draw up a proposal for a UC-wide graduate program in Women's Studies. Evelyn Barnes, Assistant to the Center Director, Mary Smith, Assistant to the Director of the UCLA Women's Studies Program, and Kathryn Norberg, Interim Director of UCLA Women's Studies, attended the meeting. The second meeting was held on January 24 at UC Davis and was attended by Evelyn Barnes and Mary Smith. The third meeting was held on May 15 at UC Berkeley.
Liaison with the UCLA Association of Academic Women (AAW)

Once a year the Center cooperates with the AAW in hosting a fall reception for new female faculty. In 1991, the reception was held on Thursday, November 21. The Center's role has been to provide materials to newcomers describing the Center and to be represented at the event. Faculty affiliated with the Center host newcomers from their respective departments.

Council on Diversity

In 1991, Executive Vice Chancellor Andrea Rich, in consultation with members of the women's community at UCLA, created the Chancellor's Coordinating Council on the Status of Women that replaced the Chancellor's Advisory Council on the Status of Women. This new group was chaired by Center Acting Director, Helen S. Astin and composed of the Director of Women's Studies, the President of the AAW, the Director of the Women's Resource Center, the Director of the UCLA Child Care Center and representatives for staff, graduate students and undergraduates. A list of the 1991-92 members of the committee can be found in Appendix XI-A.

In September 1991, the new Council sent a questionnaire to all staff women on campus asking them to select those areas of campus life they considered most problematic for women. Sexual harassment emerged as one of these problems, and the new Council on Diversity organized an all-university forum on sexual harassment on March 5, 1992. The forum was held in the Ackerman Union from 12:00-4:30 and dealt with the social/psychological aspects of sexual harassment, sexual harassment laws and how they evolved, preparing a complaint at UCLA and men's issues related to sexual harassment. Speakers at the event included Executive Vice Chancellor Andrea Rich, Professor Helen Astin, Psychologist Nancy Lynn Baker, and Sheila Kuehl, Director of the California Women's Law Center. A program for the event appears in Appendix XI-B.

National Council for Research on Women

The Center is a member of The National Council for Research on Women, a national aegis organization whose membership is composed of all the research centers in the country that do research on women and gender. As a member of the Council, the Center is represented at the annual meeting and shares information on its activities through the National Council's Newsletter.

G. Fund-Raising Activities

The Center for the Study of Women engages in a number of activities geared toward raising funds for gender-related research and programs from interested individuals in the community, UCLA alumni, foundations and corporations.

Center administrators are advised on matters of development by a Friends/Faculty Development Committee. (For a list of committee members, see Appendix I.)

The Center for the Study of Women has been fortunate in having a dedicated group of Friends, led by President Beatrice Mandel. Through a number of events (see "Programs" [III/i]) and through solicitation letters, the Friends cultivate community persons who often join the group. The details of income and expenditures for the Friends of the CSW are listed in Supplement B.

Second Annual
GRADUATE STUDENT RESEARCH CONFERENCE

- CALL FOR PAPERS -

Deadline for submission of abstracts:
February 14, 1992

The Center is organizing this conference to give graduate students doing research on women and gender an opportunity to present their work-in-progress to the campus community. The program is scheduled for Monday, April 20, 1992, in Royce Hall 314. There will be at least three sessions of concurrent workshops throughout the day. To allow time for discussion, each speaker will be asked to limit her/his presentation to twenty minutes.

If you would like to present your research at this conference, please submit a one-page abstract of your paper by February 14th to the Graduate Programs Committee, Center for the Study of Women, 236A Kinsey Hall, 150405. Include your name, department/school affiliation, level of graduate study, faculty advisor, home address, and home/work phone numbers. A joint student/faculty committee will review the abstracts for inclusion in the conference. You will be notified of the committee’s decisions by March 13th.

Although we are interested in original research, it is not necessary to write a new paper especially for this conference. A seminar paper, a chapter from your master's thesis or dissertation, or a paper presented at a conference held elsewhere are equally welcome.

For further information contact:

Emily Ooms, CSW Director of Programs, at 206-1843.

We look forward to learning more about your research.

TRAVEL GRANTS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

Generous donations from the Friends of CSW have made possible a competitive travel grant program for UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender. The purpose of this program is to assist students with travel expenses related to their research (at the dissertation or pre-dissertation level) and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences. In this way the Center hopes to facilitate the academic and career aspirations of its graduate students.

Funds will be awarded in the fall, winter and spring quarters. A joint student/faculty committee will review the applications and notify the recipients by the end of each quarter.

Application deadline for spring quarter:

May 12, 1992

The maximum amount a student may be awarded in any one year is $400. Awards may be used only for transportation costs to and from the conference or place of research. Travel must take place within one year of receiving the award. Awards will not be made retroactively to fund travel which has occurred prior to the application deadline. Students will receive the funds from CSW upon submission of an airline ticket stub or other proof of travel costs. For more information about this program, please call Emily Ooms, CSW Director of Programs, at 206-1843.

Program guidelines and application forms are available at the Center for the Study of Women, 236A Kinsey Hall.

CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF WOMEN
Travel Grant Program for Graduate Students

Application Guidelines and Procedures

Travel grants for UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender are now available. The purpose of this program is to assist students with travel expenses related to their research (at either the dissertation or pre-dissertation level) and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences. In this way, the Center hopes to facilitate the academic and career aspirations of its graduate students.

Funds will be awarded three times a year. A joint student/faculty committee will review the applications and notify the recipients by the end of each quarter.

APPLICATION DEADLINES:

Fall quarter: November 12, 1991
Winter quarter: February 21, 1992
Spring quarter: May 12, 1992

The maximum amount a student may be awarded in any one year is $400 (a student may apply more than once if the total of the separate awards does not exceed this amount). Awards may be used only for transportation costs to and from the conference or place of research. Travel must take place within one year of receiving the award. Awards will not be made retroactively to fund travel which occurs prior to the time of application. Students will receive the funds from CSW as a reimbursement of travel expenses upon submission of an airline ticket stub or other proof of travel costs.

How to apply:

Complete the attached Student Application Form and ask a faculty member familiar with you and your work to complete the attached Faculty Evaluation Form. Return these forms to the Center for the Study of Women, 236A Kinsey, together with a Statement of Purpose which should be at least one page in length and include the following:

- a brief description of the research you plan to conduct or an abstract of the paper you will present.
- a discussion of the purpose of your travel proposal in relation to your broader research interests, experience, and goals.
- the significance of your conference paper or research project.
- an outline of your plan of research and/or methodology.
- a brief description of your background in women/gender studies and participation in relevant non-academic activities.

For more information about this program, please contact Emily Ooms, CSW Director of Programs, at 206-1843. We welcome your questions and comments.

CSW Development Funds

1991-1992

Funds raised by the Center and its Friends group, if unrestricted, are placed in CSW's general UCLA Foundation account #5722 or in the UC Regents Various Donors fund #53073. Membership contributions to the Friends group are also placed in this Foundation account. All other gifts have been placed in the appropriate restricted Foundation accounts. Income earned from fund raising events were deposited to the designated Foundation accounts. Funds were transferred from Foundation accounts to the UC Regents linking funds to offset expenses.
