I. INTRODUCTION

The Center for the Study of Women at UCLA is a nationally recognized center for research on women and gender. Founded in September 1984, the Center has grown and changed as feminist research has expanded in the social sciences and humanities. It is the only unit of its kind in the University of California system, and it draws on the energies of more than 200 faculty from 12 professional schools and 27 departments. By bringing together scholars with similar interests, the Center for the Study of Women has played an important role in the intellectual life of UCLA. Through its conferences, seminars and administration of grants, the Center has enabled feminist scholars to exchange ideas and secure funding.

During 1993-94, Kathryn Norberg (History) was the Director of the CSW, and Anne K. Mellor (English) chaired the Center's Faculty Advisory Committee. The Center for the Study of Women, as well as its sister unit, the Women's Studies Program, is located within the Division of the Life Sciences in the UCLA College of Letters and Sciences. The Center has greatly benefited from the active support of the Dean of the Life Sciences, Frederick Eiserling, and Assistant Dean, Lianna Anderson, has provided invaluable assistance and advice. The success of the Center, however, derives primarily from the commitment of its faculty. Special thanks are due to the faculty who served on the Center's committees and gave so generously of their time. (See Appendix I for a listing of all 1993-94 CSW committees.)

This report details the Center's activities in 1993-94 and describes how these activities contributed to fostering and disseminating research. The narrative is supported by extensive appendices and supplements.

II. RESEARCH

The Center's major purpose as an Organized Research Unit is to facilitate faculty research on women and gender. To this end, the Center develops and monitors proposals for research funds; sponsors conferences to discuss and disseminate research; provides faculty with seed-money through the mini-grant competition; sponsors the Feminist Research Seminar, the Feminist Theory Series, the Lunch Series, the Gender and Politics Project, and the new Gender and Science Program; distributes a tri-annual Newsletter and an annual Calendar of Events; sponsors an annual Graduate Student Research Conference, offers graduate student awards, and hosts activities for students interested in women and gender. The Center also continues to collect and organize information on funding sources for faculty and graduate students.

During the 1993-94 academic year, the Center housed three major Center-based projects, one on-going and two newly funded: 1) The on-going, multi-pronged Curriculum Transformation Project (CTP) which includes the original Integration of Ethnic Women into Liberal Arts Curriculum (Ford Ethnic Women's Curriculum Transformation Project or FEW), the related Curriculum Writing Integration Project (CWIP), the Ethnic and Gender Undergraduate Integration Project (EGUIP), and the Humanities Educational Leadership Project (HELP); 2) The NEH Summer Seminar for College Teachers entitled Romanticism and Gender; and 3) Going Public: Women and Publishing in Early Modern France, a major conference funded by The Florence J. Gould Foundation. In addition, the Center also housed eleven other projects: Caregiving Practices in Hispanic and Anglo Families; Cultural Tools and Learning Processes in a Changing World; Client Involvement in the Governance of Head Start: Learning from Latin America: Women's Struggles for Livelihood; Prostitution in Eighteenth-Century France; Gender and Politics Project; Preventing the Misuse of Videotape Evidence in the Court Room: An Experimental Approach; The Presence of Cultural Value Conflicts Among Teachers, Students, and Parents and Integrating Different Cultural Values in the Classroom Through Intervention Workshops; Value Conflicts Between the Social Contexts of Home and School for Spanish-Speaking Children; Women in Central and Eastern Europe: Nationalism, Feminism and Possibilities for the Future; Comparative Fundamentalism: Gender, Politics and Beyond.

This section reviews the continuing projects and lists the newly funded projects. A distinction is made between extramural and intramural funding.

CAREGIVING PRACTICES IN HISPANIC AND ANGLO FAMILIES
Robert Emerson, PI (Sociology)
National Institute of Aging
July 1992-July 1995
$296,137

In this project, Professor Emerson examines ethnic and gender differences in (1) the development and use of informal caregiving practices that spouses employ in the home to take care of and manage the Alzheimer's patient, and (2) family caregivers' consideration of and possible turn to formal caregiving strategies, including support groups, respite and in-home care, day care, and perhaps ultimately institutionalization. Specific attention is given both to the nature and consequences of management practices developed to control the behavior of the person with Alzheimer's, and to that person's cooperation with or resistance to the caregiver's care and control efforts.

The research employs qualitative in-depth interviews at six-month intervals over a two-year period with a final sample of sixty Hispanic and Anglo Alzheimer spousal caregivers. The research design also entails participant observation field research focused on gate keeping and entry processes at agencies that either assess family caregiving needs and link family caregivers with formal services, or that directly provide such services. These procedures will allow in-depth longitudinal analysis of the experience and practices of informal family caregiving and of the processes of transition to formal care, including caregivers' efforts to find out about, contact, assess, arrange for and implement such care. Ethnic and gender variations in these processes will be brought out and analyzed.

CULTURAL TOOLS AND LEARNING PROCESSES IN A CHANGING WORLD
Patricia M. Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
The Spencer Foundation
February 1990-January 1994
$249,150
$25,000 (supplemental funds)

Professor Patricia Greenfield received funding to examine the interrelationship among culture, social change, informal education, and cognitive development of children in two very different settings. The research is being conducted in urban Los Angeles and in rural Mexico. Greenfield's research in Mexico includes a twenty-year follow-up study of the ways Mayan Indian mothers teach weaving skills to their daughters in Zinacantan, Chiapas. This study of modernization investigates how formal education of females affects adaptation to a changing society. The second study, located in the urban United States, investigates the cognitive effects of video games as tools of socialization for the emerging world of computers and high technology. The study specifically addresses the unequal cognitive socialization of males versus females in this domain.

Taken together, the two studies examine how contrasting cultural tools are each part of a highly integrated system that includes: 1) the level of individual cognitive development, 2) processes of informal education, and 3) adaptation for survival under particular economic, societal, and technological conditions. The U.S. study addresses an education problem relevant to post-industrial societies, while the Zinacantan weaving study is relevant to pre-industrial societies. As such, these studies provide insight into problems arising from diversity in our own educational system.
In March 1992, a no-cost time extension was requested and subsequently approved. The new period of performance is February 1990-January 1993. Professor Greenfield also applied for supplemental funds of $25,000 to complete the project. The Spencer Foundation awarded these funds on June 23, 1992. A second no-cost time extension was subsequently granted with the new period of performance being February 1990-January 1994.

CLIENT INVOLVEMENT IN THE GOVERNANCE OF HEAD START
Lucie White, PI (School of Law)
National Science Foundation
July 1991-August 1995
$109,955

In this study, Professor Lucie White examines client involvement in the governance of Project Head Start. Head Start, a federal pre-school and social service program for poor families, has gained wide public acceptance and gives parents substantial legal power to make management decisions at the local level. The law also includes several measures to enable parents—usually poor women—to exercise these legal powers in a meaningful way. The study focuses on three Head Start programs chosen for their geographic, social and ethnic diversity. Through demographic and archival research, open-ended interviews with parents and staff, participant observation, and conversational analysis of parent deliberations over a two-year period, the study provides a detailed, comparative account of the interplay between legal framework and local culture in Head Start's client governance process in three contrasting settings. The study addresses theoretical and policy-oriented issues relating to the law's capacity to facilitate greater participation by ethnically and economically subordinated groups—particularly women—in social institutions in the welfare state.

Although Head Start has been well studied, the Head Start research has not focused on the program's elaborate legal structure for mandating parent governance. This research project collects and interprets some of the data from this experience. The results should help inform lawmakers on how to shape client governance provisions that address the material realities of client's lives and support their expression of cultural autonomy. The research will also illuminate important theoretical issues about participation, cultural identity, and the possibilities for law in a multicultural "post"-bureaucratic state.

In conjunction with this project, the CSW funded two working mini-conferences in 1992-93 that brought together Head Start mothers from South Central Los Angeles, selected leaders from local community-based organizations and UCLA faculty interested in issues of women and poverty. The first focused on issues of neighborhood-based retail and consumer services and the second dealt with community-controlled child care.

Professor White applied for and received a no-cost time extension with the new period of performance being July 1991-August 1994. A second no-cost time extension was subsequently approved. The new period of performance is now July 1991-August 1995.

LEARNING FROM LATIN AMERICA: WOMEN'S STRUGGLES FOR LIVELIHOOD
John Friedmann, PI (Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning)
MacArthur Foundation Program on Peace and International Understanding
$25,000 (January 1991-September 1992)
Inter-American Foundation
$10,000 (December 1991-November 1992)
The Ford Foundation
National Science Foundation
$20,000 (March 1992-February 1993)

Women in Latin America have actively responded to prolonged economic crisis and deepening poverty in ways that have been both politically and psychologically empowering. Their experiences and survival strategies have given rise to a significant body of research. In February 1992, Professor Friedmann served as the convener of a three-day conference, the intention of which was to examine this new research and spark a continuing North-South dialogue on how urban and rural poverty affects women, their families, and their communities. Held on the UCLA campus and in the Latina community, this conference/workshop was the first major encounter between scholars from both American continents who study poor women in Latin America. It placed these scholars' research in a cross-cultural, cross-disciplinary and comparative perspective.

Two no-cost time extensions for the Ford Foundation grant were requested and approved. Funds from this grant were retained for preparation of conference manuscripts. The new period of performance extends to August 1994.

HUMANITIES EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP PROJECT (HELP)
Karen E. Rowe, PI (English)
American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS)
August 1992-September 1994
$32,500

Professor Karen Rowe serves as director of UCLA's Humanities Educational Leadership Project (HELP) as part of UCLA's collaboration with the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS), the Los Angeles Unified School District, and the Los Angeles Educational Program to strengthen Humanities education in secondary schools. As an extension of the FEW, CWIP and EGUIP Projects (see "Continuing Projects--Intramural," p. 5), Professor Rowe directs curriculum transformation seminars for ACLS Fellows, establishes mentoring relationships between UCLA faculty and ACLS Fellows, collaborates with ACLS post-docs and Fellows to develop educational materials for use in secondary schools, serves as a liaison between UCLA and the ACLS Fellow and the Humanities teaching team located in their respective high schools, and participates in events scheduled by the ACLS to achieve the individual and group goals set for this project.

In November 1993, a no-cost time extension was requested and approved. The new period of performance is August 1992-September 1994.

PROSTITUTION IN EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY FRANCE
Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
The Florence J. Gould Foundation
$19,493

Professor Kathryn Norberg is completing research on her book about prostitution and its depiction in French art and literature between 1650-1814. The book, under contract to the University of California Press for its series on French history and culture, investigates how gender and sexuality were constructed socially and culturally at a critical period in French history. Thus, Norberg uses prostitution as an instrument for examining gender roles and unearthing hidden distinctions based upon sex. In her book, Norberg seeks to demonstrate the relevance of French feminist theory to historical analysis, and to make the American scholarly community familiar with a set of documents and texts either utterly unknown or virtually neglected. She draws upon archival sources previously unexamined—police reports, hospital records and court documents—and also looks at a group of texts neglected by historians, namely the erotic novels written during the Enlightenment, erotic novels written by women, and engravings and illustrations.

Norberg takes a resolutely feminist approach, incorporating political theory in her research on prostitution to study the history of gender. The book ends with an analysis of the role of the prostitute in literature produced during the Revolution and argues that liberalism, while freeing men, reduced women to their bodies, figuratively to whores, and therefore excluded them from full participation in civil society.

INTEGRATION OF ETHNIC WOMEN INTO LIBERAL ARTS CURRICULUM (FEW)
Karen Rowe, PI (English)
The Ford Foundation
$100,170
UCLA College of Letters and Sciences
$36,000 (direct funding)
UCLA Office of Instructional Development
$123,580 (direct funding)
January 1989-December 1991

CURRICULUM WRITING INTEGRATION PROJECT (CWIP)
Karen Rowe, PI (English)

$14,285 (direct funding awarded in 1991-92)
UCLA Office of Instructional Development
$30,000 (direct funding awarded in 1992-93)

ETHNIC AND GENDER UNDERGRADUATE INTEGRATION PROJECT (EGUIP)
Karen Rowe, PI (English)
UCLA Office of Instructional Development
$32,662 (direct funding awarded in 1993-94)
UCLA Office of the President
$25,000 (direct funding awarded in 1993-94)
UCLA Multicultural Curriculum Committee of the Academic Senate
$43,050 (This amount was awarded in 1993-94, but $9,000 was not transferred until 1994-95.)

The Center-based project Integration of Ethnic Women into Liberal Arts Curriculum—now more widely known as the Ford Ethnic Women's Curriculum Transformation Project (FEW)—originally began as an extramural project in January 1989 with funding from the Ford Foundation and was later supplemented by the UCLA College of Letters and Sciences and the Office of Instructional Development. The primary objective of this project was the incorporation of new research by and about American ethnic women into UCLA's undergraduate curriculum. Seven quarter-long faculty development seminars were held that allowed 75 faculty members to identify and evaluate ethnic-gender research literature relevant for their respective courses, formulate themes reflective of the multiethnic visions created by the material, and develop innovative instructional strategies appropriate for the new material. All faculty participants transformed or created at least one undergraduate course. During this project, the FEW bibliographic database grew to over 4,000 items, and a filmography listing over 100 films and videos by and about American ethnic women was compiled.

The effectiveness of the original FEW project led the UC President's office, in conjunction with the Office of Instructional Development, to fund a similar initiative through the Center-based Curriculum Writing Integration Project (CWIP), specifically for the faculty of UCLA's Writing Programs. Two seminars were held—one in 1991-92 and one in 1992-93. As the result of these seminars, more than 30 courses were created or revised. The original FEW database increased from 4,000 to over 5,000 items.

The tradition of curriculum integration projects continued this year with two innovative seminars, a faculty development seminar for the School of Arts faculty and a TA development seminar for TA consultants. These seminars were the first organized through the Ethnic and Gender Undergraduate Integration Project (EGUIP). "The Arts in America" seminar enabled faculty from the Departments of Art, Dance, World Arts and Cultures, Music/Musicology, and Theater/Film to identify and incorporate ethnic gender scholarship into their undergraduate courses. The 12 faculty participants submitted 13 new courses and 5 revised courses by the end of the seminar, while an additional 4-7 courses remained in progress. The 5 graduate student participants were similarly productive in creating course readers, bibliographies and new courses. New bibliographic recommendations were added to the FEW database.
"Transforming TAs for the Transformed Curriculum" was EGUP's response to an unmet need created by prior curriculum projects. Through a seminar for 10 TA consultants entitled "Teaching in the Multiethnic Classroom," EGUP recognized TAs/consultants as dynamic, innovative, and knowledgeable colleagues, who are an integral part of UCLA's teaching of undergraduates. An immediate benefit of the spring seminar was participants' decision to incorporate readings and films used in the seminar into a resource manual for all TAs to use in their 495 courses.

The closely related HELP Program, which is an extension of the curriculum integration efforts to include secondary schools in the Los Angeles Unified School District, is described under "Continuing Projects--Extramural," p. 4.

The variety and stages of curriculum transformation efforts were reflected in an increasing number of acronyms and demanded simplification. An umbrella "organization," the Curriculum Transformation Projects (CTP), was established. CTP's outreach activities during 1993-94 were diverse. The Project arranged UCLA faculty panels for presentations on curriculum transformation to colleges and community colleges in southern California, collaborated with Los Angeles Community Colleges faculty for a grant to "Mainstream Women's Scholarship Into the Community College Curriculum," which was funded and began in the spring, and played an active role in organizing a city-wide partnership of educational and community leaders to develop a long-range plan for meeting the needs of currently underserved students in grades K-16. This partnership, now known as the Los Angeles Partnership Assuring Student Success (LAPASS), was accepted as one of 16 Ford Foundation funded Urban Partnership Programs.

GENDER AND POLITICS PROJECT
Ellen DuBois, PI (History)
UCLA College of Letters and Science
Deans Eiserling and Sears
$10,500 (July 1988-June 1989)
$10,500 (July 1989-June 1990)
$10,500 (July 1990-June 1991)
$1,500 (July 1991-June 1992)
$1,500 (July 1992-June 1993)
$1,500 (July 1993-June 1994)

Professor Ellen DuBois was awarded funds by UCLA in 1988 to direct a three-year series of interdisciplinary programs on gender and politics, broadly construed. During the first year, Professor DuBois organized regular meetings of UCLA faculty interested in bridging the gap between academic research on women and women's political and community organizing in Los Angeles. Through readings and group discussions, the group explored the contemporary dilemmas facing women and the character of feminist political responses to these dilemmas.

During year two, this group continued meeting to discuss and analyze feminist issues. In addition, the project sponsored a symposium on May 14, 1990, entitled "A Conference on Domestic Workers: Feminist Perspectives." This symposium focused on women household workers in the United States and internationally, the racial and ethnic dimensions of domestic labor in the United States, and possibilities for labor organization among domestic workers in California and Latin America.

The third year of the project brought veteran feminist activists to UCLA in May 1991 to offer analytic memoirs of the 1960's and 1970's at a two-day conference entitled "What Ever Happened to Women's Liberation? Rethinking the Origins of Contemporary Feminism." DuBois urged participants to create records and document their personal experiences. Throughout the conference, the need to build and strengthen links between academic and non-academic feminists was emphasized.

The Project has continued to receive limited additional funding for the past three years (1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94) and sponsored a series of speakers from 1991-93. For the specifics on this project for 1993-94, see "Gender and Politics Project," p. 23.

ROMANTICISM AND GENDER
Anne K. Mellor, PI (English)
National Endowment for the Humanities
October 1993-September 1994
$96,400

Professor Anne Mellor, English, received a grant from the NEH to conduct a summer seminar for college teachers. This seminar explores the difference that gender makes in the construction and interpretation of major literary texts written in the English Romantic period. By combining theoretical strategies gleaned from the new historicism, feminism, deconstruction, psychoanalysis, and thematic criticism, the seminar focuses on poetry, fiction, drama and prose by Blake, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Byron, Keats, Mary and Percy Shelley, Wollstonecraft, Godwin, Charlotte Smith, Felicia Hemans, Letitia Landon, Edgeworth, Austen, Opie, Radcliffe and Joanna Baillie to analyze the different rhetorical forms and ideological positions employed by male and female romantic writers. The seminar provides an overview of recent scholarship and criticism of the English Romantic canon in the light of current theoretical debates in feminist literary criticism.

The seminar was actually held in 1994-95 (June 20-August 12, 1994) in Kinsey 288 and consisted of twelve participants from California, New Mexico, Kansas, New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Texas, Pennsylvania, and Iowa. A flier announcing the seminar is in Appendix II.

PREVENTING THE MISUSE OF VIDEOTAPE EVIDENCE IN THE COURT ROOM: AN EXPERIMENTAL APPROACH
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
Markle Foundation
January 1994-December 1994
$29,600

Video evidence has moved to center stage of the legal process, as the Rodney King and Reginald Denny cases in Los Angeles dramatically showed. However, this occurred initially with a naïve belief in both the power and objectivity of the video record. While many techniques, such as freeze frame, stills, and slow motion were used to present the tape to the jury in the first trial of the police officers who beat Rodney King, no thought was given to how these technological manipulations affect jurors' perceptions and judgments and whether they diminish or enhance the validity of the videotaped evidence. Our proposed Study 1 will begin to fill this gap by providing experiments on the effects of slow (and fast) motion video on perceptions of violent force, motivation, and details of action. Study 2 will apply the results of Study 1 by testing out techniques for educating jurors to compensate for the distorting effects of slow (and fast) motion video shown in Study 1, while enhancing any positive effects of speed manipulations demonstrated in the first study. This research will be immediately applicable in the justice system.

GOING PUBLIC: WOMEN AND PUBLISHING IN EARLY MODERN FRANCE
Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
Florence J. Gould Foundation
$20,300

Professor Kathryn Norberg received a grant from the Florence J. Gould Foundation to mount a public conference on women and publishing in early modern France. The conference explored the cultural and political conditions that made it possible for French women writers to take their private thoughts into the public sphere, that is to publish. Scholars in literature and history analyzed a variety of works--novels, judicial tracts, memoirs, scientific treatises, fairy tales and erotic fiction—in order to determine how seventeenth- and eighteenth-century French women got into print, that is how they "went public."

The two-day conference was held on February 4-5, 1994, at the William Andrews Clark Memorial Library in Los Angeles. Additional support was provided by the UCLA Center for Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century Studies. The event was organized by CSW Director Kathryn Norberg, Elizabeth Goldsmith (Boston University), and Dena Goodman (Louisiana State University). The conference proceedings will be published by Cornell University Press.

Scheduled participants included: Janet Altman, University of Iowa; Faith Beasley, Dartmouth College; Nadine Berenguier, Harvard University; Elizabeth Colwill, California State University, San Diego; Joan DeJean, University of Pennsylvania; Nina Gelbart, Occidental College; Elizabeth Goldsmith, Boston University; Dena Goodman, Louisiana State University; Erica Harth, Brandeis University; Susan Jackson, Boston University; Carolyn Chappell Lougher, Stanford University; Kathryn Norberg, UCLA; Lewis Seifert, Brown University; and Cynthia Traunt, University of California, San Diego. Unfortunately, Berenguier, DeJean and Hart had to cancel.

A full conference program can be found in Appendix III.

THE PRESENCE OF CULTURAL VALUE CONFLICTS AMONG TEACHERS, STUDENTS, AND PARENTS AND INTEGRATING DIFFERENT CULTURAL VALUES IN THE CLASSROOM THROUGH INTERVENTION WORKSHOPS
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
Urban Education Studies Center
January 1994-January 1995
$11,259

Before entering school, children have become competent at carrying out activities in different domains of functioning, and they have mastered modes of interpersonal engagement through participating in social interactions with their families. As cultural diversity characterizes contemporary American families, children's customary modes of activity and interaction not only differ, but may also come in conflict with those favored in the public schools. This research project explores how parents, teachers, and students approach interpersonal and academic situations through the lens of different cultural values.

VALUE CONFLICTS BETWEEN THE SOCIAL CONTEXTS OF HOME AND SCHOOL FOR SPANISH-SPEAKING CHILDREN
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
Linguistic Minority Research Institute, UC Santa Barbara
July 1994-June 1995
$9,580

As cultural diversity characterizes American families and classrooms, children from cultural backgrounds that favor interpersonal interdependence have become competent at modes of interaction experience that conflict with the independence-oriented activities favored in public schools. To document areas of cultural and ethnic conflict, the proposed research explores how parents and teachers approach interpersonal and academic situations through different cultural value frameworks. Videotaped observations of parent-teacher conferences will be conducted at Stoner Avenue School. Stoner Avenue School has a large population of children whose parents have immigrated from Mexico and Central America, where an interdependence orientation is especially strong. It is hypothesized that the conflict between interdependence, valued at home, and independence, valued at school, will be an important element in the structuring of parent-teacher conferences. The findings from the proposed research will provide the foundations for facilitating cultural contact between the schools and culturally diverse populations of students. The research will also enable an extramural grant proposal to be developed for a larger research and action project on multiculturalism for teachers, students, and parents.
Although the project does not begin until July 1994, the funds were transferred in June 1994, and it is therefore included as a new intramural project in the annual report for the 1993-94 fiscal year.

WOMEN IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE: NATIONALISM, FEMINISM AND POSSIBILITIES FOR THE FUTURE
Frances Olsen, PI (School of Law)
Center for German and European Studies, UC Berkeley
January 1994-December 1994
$5,101

The original purpose of this grant was to fund a graduate student assistant to work with Professor Olsen in organizing a conference on women in Central and Eastern Europe which explored how recent governmental changes in Central and Eastern Europe have affected women in the areas of work, reproductive rights, family life and politics. (Since additional funding was limited, the purpose of the grant was subsequently expanded to include other conference expenses.) Women have been deeply affected by the collapse of Communist regimes. The demise of an inclusive welfare system has made work and family life problematic. The resurgence of nationalism and ethnic conflict have further complicated women's lives in ways that western scholars, including feminists, often fail to comprehend. While the transition to a post Communist world has been bitter for most women, the potential for positive change exists. This conference sought to analyze current problems with a view to future solutions.

Scholars from various disciplines, political activists and lawyers from Central and Eastern Europe--Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria--as well as England and the United States, met together on April 8-10 at UCLA to discuss the legacy of Communism for women and how the laws now being drawn up in the former Soviet bloc might best be framed to benefit women and society at large. The perspective was resolutely comparative and unusual in that it focused on resurgent nationalism and ethnic identity, two phenomena rarely linked with women's issues.

Since the entire grant was not funded, additional financial support for the conference was secured from the Center for the Study of Women, the UCLA Law School and the UCLA Center for Russian and East European Studies. For a more complete description, see "CSW Funded Conferences," pp. 17-18. The conference program can be found in Appendix V-C.

COMPARATIVE FUNDAMENTALISM: GENDER, POLITICS AND BEYOND
Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
Institute for Global Conflict and Cooperation, UC San Diego
December 1993-June 1994
$2,500

This grant helped to fund a three-day, public conference entitled "Comparative Fundamentalism: Gender, Politics and Beyond." It was conceived by UCLA History Professor Nikki Keddie and offered international and cross-cultural perspectives on the phenomenon of fundamentalisms in the late twentieth-century and the global impact of these ideologies. The focus on gender and politics underscored the centrality of these components to nearly all contemporary fundamentalisms.

The conference was held on the UCLA campus on April 21-23, 1994, and brought historians, political scientists and theologians together to consider the international impact of Islamic, Jewish and Christian fundamentalisms. Conference proceeding will be published in Contestation: Debates in Society, Culture and Science. For a more detailed description of the conference, see "Co-sponsored Conferences," pp. 25-26. A detailed program can be found in Appendix XIII-C.

Additional financial support was provided by 11 campus units as well as the Global Peace and Security Program (UC Santa Barbara). Campus units included the G. E. von Grunebaum Center for Near Eastern Studies, the College of Letters and Science, ISOP, the Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, the Center for International Relations, the J. S. Coleman African Studies Center, the Jewish Studies Program, Critical Studies, UCLA Hillel Council, the University Religious Conference, and the CSW.
B. Projects Submitted, 1993-1994

All of the projects listed below are either grants which were not funded or grants which were still pending as of June 30, 1994. A distinction is made between extramural and intramural.

CULTURAL MODES OF INTERDEPENDENCE AND INDEPENDENCE
Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
Catherine Raeff, Co-PI (Post-doc, Psychology)
National Institute of Mental Health
December 1994-November 1999
$1,395,762

This integrated program of research deals with diversity in the invisible culture that suffuses everyday life but is so basic that it is taken for granted. Many aspects of development assumed to be universal in the field of psychology are characteristic of the culture of individualism, with its developmental goal of autonomy. The presence in Los Angeles of large numbers of Hispanic immigrants from Mexico and Central America provides an urgent reason to expand the definition of developmental pathways to encompass the collectivistic value system brought with them from their homelands. This value system stresses interdependent development and family unity.

The proposed research focuses on two groups: immigrant Hispanic (representing a collectivistic orientation) and European-American (representing an individualistic orientation); it consists of a series of five studies of children, parents, and extrafamilial agents of socialization. These studies develop new methods for investigating the values, interactions, and developmental processes that characterize the collectivistic path of development. In so doing, the research illuminates an unstudied developmental pathway, collectivism. Through contrast with this alternative, awareness of individualism as a culturally specific mode of development will also be an outcome of the planned research.

In addition to ethnographic and observational methods, the proposal involves the development and research application of new, culturally sensitive instruments for assessing individualistic and collectivistic ethnotheories of development and socialization. Most important, it sheds light on an important source of culture conflict in our society, one that pressures children into a destructive choice between the values of home and school; the conflict between individualistic and collectivistic modes of acting and interacting. By applying our research to multicultural children's environments, we hope to produce true cultural exchange.

Finally, our research has the potential to make people aware of the developmental strengths immigrants bring with them to this country and of the losses, as well as gains, that take place when assimilation to the dominant culture involves a shift from collectivistic to individualistic ways of being, acting, and interacting.

OPPRESSION, IDENTITY, ATTITUDE AND MENTAL HEALTH IN WOMEN
Nancy Henley, PI (Psychology)
National Institutes of Health
December 1994-November 1998
$488,749

The long-term goal of the proposed research is to understand, through longitudinal study within a diverse group of college women, the relationships among discriminatory/oppressive life events (those targeted at one because of one's perceived group membership), the development of positive ethnic, gender, and combined ethnic/gender (womanist) identity, and mental health. The proposed research is a longitudinal study, beginning in the first year of college and extending through the fourth, of a sufficient number (600) of female students, allowing for attrition, to end with data on 400 women, with equal numbers from African, Asian, European ("white"), and Latina ("Hispanic") Americans.
The research design allows for both standard correlational and quasi-experimental analyses (using cross-lagged panel correlations), to allow testing of causal as well as relational hypotheses. This research tests hypotheses from a model of mental health under stress, which posits that people who are the targets of discrimination best maintain emotional stability through developing a positive identification with, and attitudes supportive of, their oppressed group; and that the very harassment and hate behaviors that cause stress also lead to the development of heightened awareness, hence the attitudes and identity that, especially in combination with other factors, give psychological strength.

Along with standard measures of psychological functioning, the research utilizes five instruments specifically developed to address problems of previous measures: (a) a scale which measures six different perspectives on women and gender issues, including a womanist (women of color) perspective; (b) a scale which incorporates oppressive life events that occur to ethnic minorities into a measure of stressful events; (c) a scale which incorporates oppressive life events that occur to women into a measure of stressful events; (d) a scale to measure ethnic identity that is worded specifically for different ethnic groups, rather than being either ethnicity-neutral or directed toward African Americans; and (e) a scale to measure an integrated ethnic and feminist, or womanist, identity in women of color, who have argued that separate, single-themed ethnic and feminist attitude or identity scales do not apply well to them. All these measures are developed and tested and have adequate psychometric properties.

SYNTAX, SEMANTICS, AND VIOLENCE
Nancy Henley, PI (Psychology)
National Institutes of Health
July 1994-June 1996
$142,547

The long-term objectives of the research are to better understand the connections between language and social relationships, specifically those involving dominance, power and violence, as part of an overall goal of understanding socially asymmetric relations more fully. A major focus within this long-term goal is on power relationships based on gender, as one basis of hierarchy. The particular aim of the present proposal is the examination of the part played by syntax—specifically, verb voice—in both the production and interpretation of reports of violence in the mass media.

The proposed research tests hypotheses (a) that news media tend to report sexual violence in passive-verb format, making a female survivor of violence the focus, and a male perpetrator an almost invisible figure in the story; (b) that reporting will reflect racial bias, reversing the tendency for passive-verb format in cases of sexual violence attributed to African-American males (hence attributing more agency to them than to Euro-American males); (c) that reporting of attacks on gay males will also obscure male agency through use of the agentless passive voice; and (d) that passive-voice format in reporting violence against women leads us to see victims as more responsible for and less harmed by the violence (than active-verb format would), and to lessen recognition of men's responsibility as agents of sexual violence.

LITERATURE IN TRANSITION: THE IMPACT OF INFORMATION TECHNOLOGIES
Katherine Hayles, PI (English)
National Endowment for the Humanities
October 1994-September 1995
$89,925

This proposed seminar for college teachers will explore the impact of information technologies on literary studies. Using an interactive multimedia classroom, participants will compare print narratives with hypertext and hypermedia narratives, concentrating not only on differences in reading experiences but on such broad theoretical issues as changing concepts of textuality, authorship, and readership. Participants will be given first-hand experience with instructional hypertexts to facilitate the exploration of how the new media are affecting the teaching and reading of major literary texts.
Also at issue is the impact of electronic media on professional practices, including library holdings, peer review, copyright protection, publication in electronic media versus print journals and books, and the changing goals and purposes of English Departments as they head into the twenty-first century.

VINDICATING WOLLSTONECRAFT: AN INTERDISCIPLINARY CONFERENCE ON MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT
Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
National Endowment for the Humanities
October 1994-December 1995
$69,586

Vindicating Wollstonecraft will reevaluate the work of Mary Wollstonecraft and seek to restore it to its rightful place in the development of liberal democratic theory. Though her contemporaries considered her the equal of Thomas Paine and Edmund Burke, nineteenth- and twentieth-century scholars have largely neglected Wollstonecraft. The goal of this conference is to reexamine Wollstonecraft by 1) analyzing her complete literary production including her novels, children’s literature and neglected political treatises; 2) contextualizing her political theory, that is, establishing the influence of Rousseau, Burke, Paine and the French Revolution on her political thought; and 3) reassessing her role in the history of democracy from the late eighteenth-century to the present. Specialists in literature, history and political science will come together to examine Wollstonecraft’s work and stature. The issues raised by Wollstonecraft—participation of women and minorities, the resolution of rights and responsibilities, the relationship between the state and the family and the connections between the private and public—are still controversial. Because she speaks to the problems that bedevil democracies today, Wollstonecraft deserves to be heard by a larger audience than she has heretofore enjoyed.

SYNTAX, SEMANTICS, AND VIOLENCE
Nancy Henley, PI (Psychology)
Harry Frank Guggenheim Foundation
January 1994-December 1995
$61,356

The proposed research will examine the obscuring of agency in the discourse around male sexual violence, and the link between that discourse and attitudes and beliefs about sexual violence. In doing so, it looks at the corollary questions of the effect of a perpetrator’s race/ethnicity on the discourse, and at the related discourse of “straight” men’s violence against gay males.

The research will test hypotheses (a) that news media tend to report sexual violence in agentless passive-verb format, making a female survivor of violence the focus, and a male perpetrator an almost invisible figure in the story; (b) that reporting will reflect racial bias, reversing the tendency for passive-verb format in cases of sexual violence attributed to African-American males; (c) that reporting of attacks on gay males will also obscure male agency through use of the agentless passive voice; and (d) that passive-voice format in reporting violence against women leads us to see victims as more responsible for and less harmed by the violence (than active-verb format would), and to lessen recognition of men’s responsibility as agents of sexual violence.

WOMEN IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE: NATIONALISM, FEMINISM AND POSSIBILITIES FOR THE FUTURE
Frances Olsen, PI (Law)
Soros Foundation
January 1994-September 1994
$37,882

This grant would fund a conference on women in Central and Eastern Europe which would explore how recent governmental changes in Central and Eastern Europe have affected women in the areas of work, reproductive rights, family life and politics. Women have been deeply affected by the collapse of Communist regimes. The demise of an inclusive welfare system has made work and family life
The resurgence of nationalism and ethnic conflict have further complicated women's lives in ways that western scholars, including feminists, often fail to comprehend. While the transition to a post-Communist world has been bitter for most women, the potential for positive change exists. It is important to highlight women's concerns at a time when many countries are rewriting their laws and rethinking their legal system. This conference will analyze current problems with a view to future solutions.

The conference will bring together social scientists, political activists and lawyers from Central and Eastern Europe--Germany, Hungary, Poland, and Bulgaria--to discuss the legacy of Communism for women and how the laws now being drawn up in the former Soviet bloc might best be framed to benefit women and society at large. FUNDAMENTALISM IN TODAY'S WORLD: PEACEFUL MEANS OR VIOLENCE?

Kathryn Norberg (History)
C. S. Fund
December 1993-June 1994
$15,552

This grant would support a conference tentatively entitled "Fundamentalism in Today's World: Peaceful Means or Violence?" This three-day, public conference will bring together historians, political scientists and theologians to discuss how Islamic, Jewish or Christian fundamentalism threaten world peace and encourage intolerance and conflict. The following questions will be posed: Does fundamentalism produce conflict and encourage revolution? To what degree are ethnic and gender intolerances fostered by fundamentalism? What groups have been most attracted to fundamentalism? What social and political circumstances cause individuals to embrace fundamentalism? How is fundamentalism likely to affect human rights and international peace?

The conference will be resolutely interdisciplinary and comparative in perspective. Speakers will focus on America and a variety of countries in the Middle East, Asia and Africa. The overall goal of the conference is to determine how a dialogue can be instituted among competing ideologies and religious beliefs so that world peace and human rights can be secured.

2. Intramural

THE BREAST

Kathryn Norberg, PI (History)
UC Humanities Research Institute
$15,000

Through scholarly panels, performances, and an exhibition, this three-day, public conference will bring together scholars and researchers from the humanities, arts, social sciences and medical sciences and seek to investigate how women of different ages, races and ethnicities have experienced their breasts and how different times and cultures have constructed "the breast" and with it, femininity. The breast constitutes a useful "site" around which to organize collective thinking. The conference will explore the following questions: How is the female body constructed in the media, literature and the arts? How has new technology (e.g., mammography) transformed our thinking about the breast? What role has the breast played in religion or in political discourse? In short, how has gender been constructed by and through the breast?

The goals of the conference would be: 1) to create a dialogue between the humanities and the sciences; 2) to synthesize and reconceptualize feminist approaches to the body; 3) to "humanize" the experience and treatment of breast cancer by bringing clinicians together with humanists; and 4) to expose the general public (most likely women recovering from breast cancer) to humanistic scholarship on an issue of great personal import.
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, INFORMAL EDUCATION, AND COGNITIVE PROCESSES IN A MAYAN COMMUNITY IN CHIAPAS, MEXICO: A LONGITUDINAL STUDY OF HISTORICAL CHANGE

Patricia Greenfield, PI (Psychology)
UC Mexus
July 1994-June 1995
$10,000

This proposal relates to an important social problem: the relationship between economic development on the level of the group and psychological development on the level of the individual. Specifically, it concerns a longitudinal, historical study of the Zinacantecos, a Mayan group in Southern Mexico that is undergoing the economic transition from agriculture to commerce. The project constitutes a two-decade follow-up to investigations of traditional methods of informal education, or apprenticeship, and their cognitive consequences. The focus of the studies is weaving, a technical skill that is making the transition from a central role in subsistence to an important role in a money-oriented economy. A major question is how rapidly can processes of informal education and cognitive representation shift in response to social and economic change. Do mothers teach their daughters to weave the same way their mothers taught them, even under changed socioeconomic conditions? Or are they able to adapt their instructional techniques to new conditions in the space of one generation? In other words, what happens to the process of cultural transmission in times of economic change? To what extent do new methods of cultural transmission and new cultural tools lead to new representational strategies?

C. Mini-grants

Each year, the CSW holds a campus-wide competition for small seed-money grants (maximum $5,000) to encourage faculty research on women and gender. The call for proposals is distributed in the spring, and projects are funded for the following academic year. Seven applications were submitted in the spring of 1993, and five were funded for the academic year 1993-94. These projects are described below. The call for proposals and application forms are in Appendix IV.

Carole Browner (Psychiatry and Anthropology)
Decisions About the Use of Prenatal Diagnostic Testing by Mexican Immigrant and Mexican-American Women

This project will examine decisions about the use of prenatal diagnostic testing by Mexican immigrant and Mexican-American women at risk for having a child with a disability. It considers the consequences of those decisions for adaptation to the pregnancy and subsequent birth. Our focus is on how acculturation processes 1) shape Mexican immigrant and Mexican-American women's attitudes, understandings and expectations about prenatal diagnostic testing, 2) influence the role their husbands or conjugal partners play in their decisions about such tests, and 3) affect the role genetic counseling plays in shaping couples' understandings about prenatal testing, their decisions about its use, and their experiences with the tests.

Andrew Christensen (Psychology)
Naturalistic Study of Marital Arguments

Previous questionnaire and laboratory research indicate that in marital conflict women often take a demanding role through criticism and emotional demands while men take a withdrawing role through avoidance and defensiveness. We will explore a social structure explanation for these findings, which argues that the partner wanting change or seeking redress of grievances will be demanding in conflict while the partner who is a recipient of change requests or grievances will be withdrawing. We will monitor naturalistic marital arguments in 12 couples by having these couples page us after each of two arguments. After being paged, we will telephone the couple and interview each spouse independently about the precipitants and process of the conflict. Based on these data, we will determine the initiated offended partner (IOP, the one who first had a grievance), the nature of that grievance, the demander in the conflict, and the withdrawer in the conflict. We predict that a) the IOP will more often take the demanding role in conflict, b) women will more often be the IOP, and c) women's grievances will concern neglect of household responsibilities and child care and partner's neglect of them (e.g., lack of attention).

The Content of Prenatal Care in African-American and Latina Women in Los Angeles

Some segments of the U.S. population continue to experience high rates of adverse pregnancy outcomes (low birth weight and infant mortality), despite advancements in maternity and neonatal care. Adequate prenatal care has been consistently shown to be protective against such adverse outcomes, yet the actual process of antenatal care and how its effects are mediated are not well understood. This research uses participant observation and ethnographic interviews in order to gain a more complete understanding of this very important process. Sixty low-income women, (30 Hispanic and 30 African-American) will be observed through the entire course of their prenatal care, and events will be recorded. In addition, the women and their care providers will be surveyed at the completion of each visit to assess their levels of understanding of the process. The medical record will be abstracted. Levels of agreement will be calculated, with observation as the standard, to verify the most accurate source of data for studying prenatal care content. Content analysis of ethnographic interviews will be used to describe a range of variables which might potentially explain ethnic differences in pregnancy outcome.

Women's Work and the Transmission of Cultural Knowledge Among Mayan Mothers and Daughters: A Longitudinal Study of the Effects of Two Decades of Economic Development

For the Zinacantecos, a Mayan group in Southern Mexico, weaving is the defining female skill. In a process that has greatly accelerated since my first studies in 1969 and 1970, Zinacantan has been making the transition from a subsistence to an entrepreneurial, cash economy. Weaving has been part and parcel of this change. This project constitutes a two-decade follow-up to investigations of traditional methods of weaving education and their learning consequences. A major question is how rapidly can processes of informal education and cognitive representation shift in response to social and economic change. Do mothers teach their daughters to weave the same way their mothers taught them, even under changed socioeconomic conditions? Or are they able to adapt their instructional techniques to new conditions in the space of one generation? In other words, what happens to the process of cultural transmission in times of economic change? To what extent do new methods of cultural transmission and new cultural tools (particularly the introduction of girls to literacy tools) lead to new cognitive strategies for representing cultural images, such as textile patterns?

Claire McEachern (English)

"This England," Literature and the Nation, 1590-1612

This study seeks to define the historical and affective contours of an early-modern English nation as they are expressed in three Tudor-Stuart texts: Shakespeare's Henry V (1599); Book One of Spenser's The Faerie Queene (1590); and Drayton's Poly-Olbius (1612). The study traces the literary expression of the political identity shaped by a common culture, and examines how these texts imagine and address three institutions of the developing state: the crown, the church, and the land. As a study of the affective structures of nationalist sentiment, this research is primarily engaged with the ways in which vocabularies of gender identity, discourses of the domestic, and images of female physiognomy serve in early modern England to imagine group identity and to model an identification between state and subject. Arguing against the limitation of national identity exclusively to a post-nineteenth-century location, this research locates an early modern group consciousness as the product of a state-mandated religious culture.
D. CSW Funded Conferences

In addition to Going Public: Women and Publishing in Early Modern France (see pp. 7-8 and Appendix III), the CSW mounted three public conferences. These three conference awards resulted from a "Call for Conference Proposals" which was issued in the spring of 1993. Each conference received additional funding from other campus groups and units within the UC system. The three funded proposals were: Scary Women: Female Monsters and Fiends in American Film; And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st Century; and Women in Central and Eastern Europe: Nationalism, Feminism and Possibilities for the Future.

1. Scary Women: Female Monsters and Fiends in American Film

In conjunction with the UCLA Film and Television Archive, the CSW co-sponsored a multi-faceted program that addressed the role of the female monster in American film. The program's main event was a one-day symposium held in Melnitz Theater on Saturday, January 29, 1994, which was dedicated to the critical consideration of films which feature women as menacing characters. This symposium featured some of the most important figures in feminist film scholarship. Vivian Sobchack, Associate Dean, Department of Film and Television at UCLA, discussed what made women monstrous in the fifties science-fiction films Attack of the Fifty Foot Woman and The Leech Woman. Rhona Berenstein, Assistant Professor in the Program in Film Studies at UC Irvine, analyzed the not-so-subtle lesbian subtext in the ghost story The Uninvited. Linda Williams, also a Professor in the Program in Film Studies at UC Irvine, discussed the advertising scheme used in the original release of Psycho. Carol Clover, Professor of Scandinavian and Rhetoric at UC Berkeley, analyzed recently released titles that fit into the "Scary Women" category. Finally, Barbara Creed, Professor at La Trobe University in Bundorriga Australia, examined the themes introduced in her new book, The Monstrous Feminine. The symposium was moderated by Janet Bergstrom, Professor of Film and Television at UCLA.

The program also featured these "scary women" in a film series that chronicled the history of female monsters and fiends from classic horror and science fiction to the contemporary horror/thriller. A total of 23 films in 11 different categories were screened between January 15 and February 12.

This examination of the role of women in horror films unearthed important information about the cultural place of women in American society. A look at women in the role of monster opens doors to understanding what is threatening about women in any particular era. By uncovering the fears expressed in modern cinema, a cultural psyche threatened by the advent and progression of women is also exposed.

For the initial announcement and a copy of the symposium program as well as a list of all film screenings, see Appendix V-A.

2. And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st Century

On January 21-22, 1994, the CSW sponsored an innovative conference for women leaders in higher education and community organizations to come together and identify the higher educational needs of women and children for the next decade. More than 150 respondents demonstrated the timeliness of this type of gathering. Unfortunately, the earthquake on January 17 took its toll on the number of expected participants, and it was decided that the program had to be modified and shortened to two days. The 40 hardy individuals, some from out of state, who were able to attend the conference participated with even greater zeal, aware that many could not attend because they were needed to address the damage done by the earthquake to their institutions, organizations, and clients/students.

Friday evening keynote speakers Marguerite Archie Hudson and Alison Bernstein, each in her way, articulated the need for active partnerships between women leaders in academia and the community in order to insure that the advances made over the last quarter century will not be lost in the next. The first panel on Saturday morning, "Views From Within," consisted of Rosina Becerra (Dean, UCLA School of Social Welfare), Sr. Karen Kennelly (President, Mount St. Mary), and Cecilia Preciado-Buchiago (Associate Dean, Stanford), who delivered a speech from Mary McKinney Edmonds (Vice-Provost, Stanford). The second panel, "Views From Without," was only missing Kausar Ahmed from the Coalition of Women from Asia and the Middle East. Luncheon speaker Claudia Mitchell-Kernan, newly appointed Vice Chancellor, Academic Affairs, and Dean of the Graduate Division, UCLA, gave a challenging talk.

The group decided to forego the afternoon workshops in favor of working groups which would discuss the issues raised by the morning presentations and also prepare final reports. This proved to be exciting and productive. A number of mini-partnerships were formed on the spot, and the many ideas for collaboration between community and higher education were innovative and needed. Donna Shavi//ik's closing synthesis captured the spirit of the day when she pointed out that "It is within our ability to redefine the world, and it is our responsibility to do so." Carol Hartzog, Vice-Provost, UCLA, echoed this sentiment in her dinner speech.

Recovery from the earthquake and changes in FEW/CWIP personnel have delayed following up on this gathering. However, the tapes are being transcribed, and hopefully by the end of the year the transcriptions will be sent to participants for their responses.

The conference was organized by Norma Rice, Coordinator of the Curriculum Transformation Projects, and Professors Karen E. Rowe, English, and Helen Astin, Education. It was held at Griffin Commons Conference Center/Sunset Village. Co-sponsors included the Association of Academic Women, the UCLA Council on Diversity, the Graduate School of Education, the Higher Education Research Institute, and the Office of the Assistant Vice-President, University of California.

The conference program can be found in Appendix V-B.

3. Women in Central and Eastern Europe: Nationalism, Feminism and Possibilities for the Future

On April 8-10, 1994, prominent feminists from Germany (east and west), Hungary, Bulgaria, England and the United States gathered at UCLA to discuss the status of women in Central and Eastern Europe today. Disciplines represented included political philosophy, anthropology, law, applied politics, cultural studies, and literary theory. A public conference was held on Saturday, April 9, from 9 AM-6 PM at the UCLA Law School, Room 1430. Presentations focused on the status of women's participation in the new democracies and the impact of recent changes on women's labor and reproductive rights. Special attention was paid to nationalism—its impact on women's rights and women's impact on it.

Speakers included Penka Angelova, Petra Bläss, Hermine G. De Soto, Nicola Lacey, Eva Malek-Levy, and Krisztina Morvai. Angelova is Professor of German and Russian at the St. Kyriil and Method University, Veliko Tarnovo, Bulgaria; Visiting Professor at the Konstantin Preslavski University in Shumen, Bulgaria; and founder of the Elias-Canetti Research Center in Rousse, Bulgaria. Bläss is Chair of the commission that organized the elections in East Germany which led to unification; member of the Bundestag (German Federal Parliament); founding member of the Independent Women's Association of East Germany; and member of the parliamentary commissions for labor market and social affairs, women's affairs and abortion rights. De Soto is a socio-cultural anthropologist; Honorary Research Fellow in Women's Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison; and co-editor of The Curtain Rises: Rethinking Culture, Ideology, and the State in Eastern Europe (1993). Lacey is a Law Fellow and Lecturer at Oxford University; legal and political theorist specializing in women in Europe; and author of State Punishment: Political Principles and Community Values (1988), Reconstructing Criminal Law: Critical Perspectives on Crime and the Criminal Process (1990) and Politics and Community (with Elizabeth Frazer, 1993). Malek-Levy is Co-founder of the East German Unabhängiger Frauenverband (UVP) and of the first "Netzwerk polnischwissenschaftlich und politisch arbeitender Frauen" in Germany; and Research Fellow at the American Institute for Contemporary German Studies in Washington D.C. Morvai is a Hungarian lawyer specializing in civil rights, constitutional law and feminist legal theory; a Fulbright Visiting Scholar at the Law School of the University of Wisconsin, Madison; and former clerk at the Supreme Court of Hungary.
The conference was organized by Frances Olsen, UCLA Law Professor, and Hermine G. De Soto, Research Fellow, University of Wisconsin, Madison. Additional financial support for the conference was provided by the UCLA Law School, the UCLA Center for Russian and East European Studies, and the Center for German and European Studies at UC Berkeley (see "New Funded Projects--Intramural," p. 9). Proceedings will be published by the UCLA Women’s Law Journal.

The full conference program can be found in Appendix V-C.

E. Researchers Affiliated with CSW

During 1993-94, 21 scholars doing research on women and gender were associated with the CSW in various capacities—as Research Scholars, Affiliated Scholars and Visiting Scholars. Through their formal affiliation, these scholars received institutional support in the form of library privileges, stationery, opportunities to participate in all Center activities, and assistance in developing funding proposals. A fall luncheon/reception was held on November 5 to welcome new scholars and provide an opportunity for both new and returning scholars to network together and share their research. The invitation to the reception is in Appendix VI as well as the Affiliated Scholars "Call for Applications."

1. Research Scholars

The Research Scholar category was initially created to provide a Center affiliation and title for established, independent scholars not funded on extramural projects. Five researchers held continuing appointments as CSW Research Scholars in 1993-94:

Sherna Berger Gluck is a part-time lecturer at California State University, Long Beach, where she is also Director of the Oral History Program. Berger is a sociologist whose interests lie in the areas of feminism and the politics of the third world, women of color and the women’s liberation movement in the United States, and Palestinian women and the struggle for self determination. Her current project examines the women’s movement in occupied Palestine in terms of women’s consciousness, gender interests and nationalism, and her new book, Journeys in an Occupied Land: An American Feminist in Palestine, is due to be published by Temple University Press in the spring of 1994. In addition to the final editing of her book, she is doing research for a manuscript on “Women’s Consciousness, Gender Interests and Nationalism.”

Sondra Hale is the Director of Women’s Studies at California State University, Northridge, a lecturer in the Women’s Studies Program at UCLA, and a very active member of the CSW community. An anthropologist, Hale studies gender and class issues with an emphasis on the Middle East and Africa. She is currently working on revisions to her book Gender and Politics in Sudan, a book that explores the problematic uses of culture by various institutions and by women themselves to affect gender arrangements. She is also working on a project tracing colonial to post-colonial representations of Sudanese by Westerners and of Westerners by Sudanese. For this research, access to the vast UCLA Sudan collection is essential. Hale’s other interests include the arts and issues surrounding pedagogy/curriculum and diversity.

Barbara Penny Kanner is a scholar in English social history. She is finishing her manuscript on Georgian, Victorian and Edwardian Women’s Autobiographies: An Analytical, Critical Guide to Research, a reference work which analyzes over 800 British women’s personal writings between 1720-1930. These represent various geographical derivations over the empire and commonwealth which will allow for comparative study. She plans a substantive introduction on theory related to the genre as well as relevant application to the authors and works included in the book.

Mitzi Myers’ association with the Center is vital to her work, since it provides her with access to UCLA’s Children’s Book Collection, the Sadleir Collection and the University Research Library’s manuscript holdings of women’s writings and related materials. Myers is fast becoming one of the United States’ leading experts in the field of children’s literature and serves on the editorial boards of three major journals in her field. She is continuing work on her book on Maria Edgeworth, an eighteenth-century author of children's stories, as well as working on a number of other projects relating to women and education. Myers is a lecturer in the Writing Programs at UCLA.

Norma Fain Pratt is a faculty member in the History Department at Mt. San Antonio College. Her past work has focused on the history of immigrant Jewish women of Eastern European background in the United States. Her current research project deals with female childhood in Southeast Asia, including the Philippines, Thailand, Vietnam and Indonesia, and focuses attention on girls who find themselves in the status of "outsider". In connection with this research, she is developing a joint project with the Women and Youth Studies Program at Thammasat University in Bangkok and the Public Health Program at Khon Kaen University in northeastern Thailand.

2. Affiliated Scholars

Now in its seventh year, the Affiliated Scholars Program is designed to promote research on women and gender by bringing independent scholars and faculty from the larger women's studies community to UCLA. The Affiliated Scholars Program is overseen by a faculty committee which reviews applications each spring and selects scholars for the following year. (See Appendix I.) The "Call for Applications" is in Appendix VI. In 1993-94, the CSW had a total of 12 Affiliated Scholars.

Three new Affiliated Scholars were selected for the program in 1993-94.

Jacqueline Braithman received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 1988 where she has been a visiting lecturer. She is working on a manuscript that will examine the resurgence of California's two-party system and seek to offer a new interpretation of the state's political culture and evolution. This will take the form of a critical biography of the life and career of its leading female activist and Democratic party chairwoman (1954-56), Elizabeth Snyder (b. 1914-), but it begins to address the imbalance of previous works by both political scientists and historians who neglect the role of women in the revitalization of the Democratic party. UCLA's Research Library provides access to the oral histories of the California Democratic Council and other state politicians. Special Collections also houses related manuscript material, including parts of the Elizabeth Snyder Collection already donated. These will be invaluable.

Phyllis Smith received her MFA in Dance Ethnology from UCLA in 1991 and currently teaches dance at Santa Monica College. Her research interests are in the area of African-American women's concepts of gender identity within the context of West African dance performance and how West African dance as a social structure shapes and defines a number of gender as well as cultural experiences for its women participants.

Yumi Soma received her M.S. in Counseling Psychology from SUNY at Albany in 1989. She is doing exploratory research on the needs of non-citizen divorced women of Japanese origin in Southern California. By means of a needs-assessment, Soma will interview Japanese women who are contemplating divorce, who are proceeding with divorce and who are divorced. This information will then be used to explore better ways to meet their needs and help them regain their self-esteem.

Four Affiliated Scholars from 1992-93 were reappointed for 1993-94. Inactive status was phased-out, and five scholars who had held this status returned to active status, resulting in a total of nine reappointments for 1993-94.

Jill Cheneff received her Ph.D. in Anthropology from the New School for Social Research in 1981. She is continuing to work on an ethnographic study of women's roles behind the camera in the production of feature films, the social relations in this community and the impact of gender in the decision-making and power relations in the Hollywood film industry. In addition, she is doing research on Dr. Hortense Powdemberger for a chapter in a book on anthropology and education which will be published this year.

Marta Lopez-Garza received her Ph.D. in Sociology from UCLA in 1985. An assistant professor of Sociology at California State University, Los Angeles, she is researching the implications of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 on the status of immigrant women from Mexico and Central America. Her present work focuses on female and male wage differentials and immigration and the informal economy in the Southwest. Aided by a Ford Fellowship this past year, she has had two manuscripts accepted for publication.

Doreene Ludvig received her MFA from UCLA. She is a part-time instructor at L.A. Valley College and Artistic Director and President of American Living History Theater, where she writes, directs, produces and performs in one-person shows throughout southern California. She is currently conducting research on women of the west and Isabella of Spain for scripts she is writing.

Jaclyn Greenberg received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 1985. She is currently working on two projects. One is the final revision of a manuscript entitled "Industry in the Garden," which deals with women canny workers. The other is a project that examines gender and the myth of the agrarian west. Greenberg has just published an article in the Journal of Policy History, Spring 1993, entitled "The Limits of Legislation: Katherine Philips Edson, Practical Politics and the Minimum Wage Law in California, 1913-1922."

Kathryn McMahon received her Ph.D. in Comparative Culture from UC Irvine in 1989 and teaches in the Women's Studies Program at California State University, Long Beach. She has signed a contract for a book based on her current research which focuses on the representation of Vietnamese women in popular history. The book is entitled Heroes and Enemies: War, Gender and Popular Culture and is a comparative study of how gender difference is constructed in popular representations of war. McMahon is beginning preliminary work for a second book which will include political, historical and economic analysis along with discussions of representations of and by women within Vietnamese postwar culture.

Margaret Rose received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 1988 and is a lecturer at California State University, Bakersfield. She is working on an article on the experiences of Latinas in the postwar era for an anthology of women in the 1950's to be published by Temple University Press. The Edward Roybal Collection at the UCLA Special Collections Library is extremely beneficial in her research on women's activism within the Community Service Organization (CSO), a Mexican American self-help group.

Kathleen Sheldon received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 1988. She is currently editing a collection of essays on urban African women which she plans to submit for publication this year. In addition, she is working on a book manuscript entitled "Pounds of Beans: Women, Work, and Ideology in Mozambique, 1850-1990." In this work, she raises issues related to gender and ethnicity in the precolonial era, the impact of Portuguese colonialism on women's work and ideas about women, and the transformations in work and gender ideologies since 1975 under an independent socialist government.

Deborah Then received her Ph.D. in Psychology and Education from Stanford in 1986. Her emphasis is applied social psychological research on women and their personal and professional lives. She is continuing her study of women and body-image through an examination of the socialization of females by means of women's magazines, and plans to extend that research to include teens. In addition, she is beginning work on a manuscript which explores the reasons why women remain in emotionally abusive relationships. Her theoretical framework will be the "Stockholm Syndrome," which uses the prisoner of war type argument to explain how women bond with their abusers.

Victoria Westernmark received her B.A. in English/Education from the University of Denver in 1968. She is an independent scholar, writer and producer and will be working on her manuscript entitled "Lady Blackrobe: Pioneer Catholic Sisters Roles in Western Frontier Settlement." Her work demonstrates that the way the church hierarchy treated its sisters was parallel to the way the government treated "its Indians." "Lady Blackrobe" will allow these pioneer women to be heard.

3. Visiting Scholars

The category of Visiting Scholar is reserved for scholars who hold academic appointments, but who are on sabbatical or are otherwise temporarily released from their teaching position in order to conduct research. In 1993-94, the CSW had 4 Visiting Scholars.
Karen Barad is a Professor in the Department of Physics at Pomona College in Pomona where she also teaches Women's Studies and has been instrumental in establishing a new concentration in Women's Studies and the Sciences. She was a Visiting Scholar at CSW in the winter and spring quarters of 1994 and an active member of the Gender and Science Project. Barad has recently completed several articles on the intersections of physics and feminist theories and is currently working on a manuscript entitled "Meeting the Universe Halfway: Discontinuous Interactions in Quantum Physics, Feminist Epistemologies and the Politics of Scientific Knowledge Construction." On April 18, Barad gave a presentation in the CSW Lunch Series entitled "A Feminist Reading of Niels Bohr's Philosophy of Quantum Mechanics."

Kari Fasting is a Professor at the Norwegian University of Sport and Physical Education where she is also Rector. Fasting is currently the President Elect of the International Committee for Sociology of Sport (ICSS). She was a Visiting Scholar with the CSW and the Department of Psychology. Fasting has written and lectured extensively in the area of women and sports and is presently working on an international project with scholars from Norway, Spain, Germany and England. While at UCLA, Fasting was able to extend her project to include U.S. women athletes in soccer. On December 8, Fasting gave a presentation in the CSW Lunch Series entitled "Studying Sports from a Feminist Perspective."

Marie Harvey is a Professor in the Department of School and Community Health at the University of Oregon where she is also associated with the Center for the Study of Women and Society. She spent her sabbatical year at UCLA and was involved in several different research projects including a study of attitudes about condoms and condom use among African-American college students and a joint research project with Linda Beckman (School of Public Health) on the relationships between alcohol use and sexual behaviors associated with HIV transmission. In addition, Harvey was part of the development team (with Joanne Leslie and Francine Coeytaux) for the new Pacific Institute for Women's Health. On February 9, Harvey gave a presentation in the CSW Lunch Series entitled "Attitudes About Condoms and Condom Use Among African-American University Students."

Ruth Gimbo Mukama is a Professor of Linguistics and Dean of the Faculty of Arts at Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda. At UCLA on a Fulbright, Mukama was jointly affiliated with the African Studies Center and the Linguistics Department while she pursued her research on "Ugandan Languages and Gender," which not only documents the existence of sexism in the languages under study but also seeks to explain the origin and function of that sexism, to ascertain the basis of the devaluation of "women's language," and to weigh the documented gender differences as to whether or not they are the products of sex or society.

III. PROGRAMS

CSW programs are designed to support and enrich the Center's research activities. Some programs spark ideas and questions that ultimately become the source of new research proposals. Other programs disseminate the results of funded research and enable the Center to keep the larger UCLA community informed of the most recent work on women and gender. Programs often vary according to their disciplinary focus. Scholars in the humanities are more likely to conduct research individually and to gather for presentations of papers at workshops and conferences; social scientists more often engage in large data gathering projects and work in collaboration with other researchers. The Center seeks to sponsor a variety of programs to meet these different needs.

Programs are also central to the Center's efforts to build an active community of UCLA scholars doing research on women and gender. In this respect, our programs provide much-needed opportunities for faculty and graduate students to discuss and debate issues within and across disciplines and to develop new critiques and formulations of feminist theory. All of our programs are designed to encourage multicultural research attentive to racial, ethnic and class diversity.

The following sections describe the on-going programs as well as special conferences and events that were organized or co-sponsored by the Center during the 1993-94 academic year.
A. Feminist Research Seminar

The purpose of this long-standing interdisciplinary seminar is to provide an informal setting for the discussion of theoretical, methodological and cross-cultural issues raised by current feminist scholarship.

Now in its fourteenth year, the seminar is designed to be financially self-supporting. It meets twice per quarter and is open to faculty, graduate students, affiliated researchers and other interested individuals who "join" the seminar and pay a nominal fee for copies of pre-circulated papers. (The fee is waived for graduate students and for affiliated researchers.) UCLA faculty are invited to present their work-in-progress to the seminar. The format is designed to facilitate active interchange among all seminar participants rather than to showcase completed work. This year, two respondents from departments other than that of the presenter were invited to give a brief comment on each of the papers and also to help facilitate discussion. This slight change in format helped to underscore the interdisciplinary nature of the seminar and resulted in lively and stimulating discussion.

In 1993-94, membership was composed of 140 people who "joined," plus various members of the CSW community who attended occasional individual sessions. The membership total was more than a 200% increase over 1992-93 and included 66 graduate students. In general, audience size ranged from 28 to 70 with an average of 46 participants for each seminar. The presenters in the community represented the disciplines of English, Law, History, Psychology, African American Studies.

A complete listing of the seminar speakers and topics for 1993-94 is included in Appendix VII, as well as the invitation to join, the membership form, and fliers for each seminar. Note that the original date for Anne Mellor's seminar had to be changed due to the January 17 earthquake.

B. Feminist Theory Series

The Feminist Theory Series was originally conceived by Professors Janet Bergstrom (Film) and Anne Mellor (English). In response to the "Conference Call" in the spring of 1992, Bergstrom and Mellor received funding for a proposal for a feminist theory series that would bring prominent feminist theorists to UCLA in 1992-93 and provide a public forum for feminist theorizing. The goal of the series was to enrich the work of CSW scholars and expose the broader campus community to feminist approaches in the Humanities. The series commenced in January 1993, and in winter and spring quarters featured six scholars who focused on women and film. The speakers were E. Ann Kaplan, Linda Kauffman, Amelia Jones, Jacqueline Rose, Trinh T. Minh-ha, and Mary Ann Doane. The success of the series prompted the Advisory Committee to commit to having an on-going program that would feature feminist theorists, choosing a different focus or "topic" for each year.

In 1993-94, the three series organizers (Janet Bergstrom, Film; Anne Mellor, English; Valerie Smith, English/African-American Studies) invited seven well-known feminist theorists to discuss feminist theories of race and gender. Speakers were Elaine Showalter, Rosa Linda Fregoso, Vèvè Clark, Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak, Ella Shohat, Deborah McDowell and Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham. Unfortunately, Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham had to cancel at the last minute due to illness. Audience size for the series ranged from 27 to 160 with an average of 70. Appendix VIII contains the fliers for each speaker.

C. Gender and Science Series

This new series began in the winter of 1994 and is designed to present current research on gender issues in the social and cultural studies of science, technology and medicine. The series organizers were Sandra Harding, Philosophy; Katherine Hayles, English; and Sharon Traweek, History—all relatively new additions to the UCLA faculty. They cooperated closely with the Center for Cultural Studies of Science, Technology and Medicine and also drew on the rich resources of southern California, involving scholars from other UC campuses and local institutions. Through speakers, seminars and informal lunches, the Gender and Science Project has created a network of researchers and an ongoing discussion among scholars interested in these issues.
In the winter quarter, the project sponsored Robert Proctor and Londa Schiebinger, and in the spring quarter, together with the Department of Philosophy, the project hosted Naomi Scheman and Elisabeth Lloyd. In addition, a series of five informal workshops on gender issues in science, technology and medicine took place during spring quarter—on alternate Wednesdays from 4:00-5:30. The workshops were very successful and drew from 25-40 people.

Appendix IX contains fliers for the speakers and a complete listing of the titles of all workshops as well as the presenters.

D. Lunch Series

In the fall of 1991, the Center initiated a series of brown bag lunch seminars. Faculty engaged in research on women and gender were invited to present their work in a more intimate and informal setting than that provided by the Feminist Research Seminar. The seminars were conceived as a community building device as well as an opportunity for faculty to share their work-in-progress with their colleagues and obtain valuable feedback.

The format for the lunch series was changed in 1992-93 in an effort to draw more participants and bring in scholars from the broader academic community in Los Angeles. Featured speakers were feminist scholars from local universities, other UC campuses, and Visiting Scholars at UCLA. The CSW also provided a light lunch. This resulted in a marked increase in attendance. In 1993-94, this format was continued, and audience size ranged from 10 to 38 with an average of 22. Lunch speakers were Margaret Rosenthal (University of Southern California), Susan Foster (UC Riverside), Lynn Spigel (University of Southern California), Kari Fasting (Norwegian University of Sport and Physical Education and CSW Visiting Scholar), Judy Coffin (UC Riverside), Dorinne Kondo (Pomona College), Marie Harvey (University of Oregon and CSW Visiting Scholar), Lourdes Arguelles (Pitzer College), Karen Barad (Pomona College and CSW Visiting Scholar), and Tania Modleski (University of Southern California). Judy Coffin's talk had to be canceled due to the earthquake on January 17.

See Appendix X for the fliers for each program, which include titles of the lectures and recent publications for each speaker.

E. Lesbian and Gay Series

For the second year, the CSW functioned as the administrative home for the Lesbian and Gay Series for 1993-94. Vice Chancellor Ray Paredes from the Chancellor's Office/Academic Development allocated $5,000 to bring speakers who would address the concerns of the UCLA Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual community.

In 1993-94, the series hosted Chicana author and poet Cherrie Moraga; author and historian Allan Bérubé; and Lillian Faderman, Professor of English at California State University, Fresno. These events were co-sponsored by other campus units including the History Department, the English Department, the Women's Studies Program, the Women's Resource Center, the Chicana Studies Program and the Lesbian and Gay Faculty/Staff NETWORK. See Appendix XI for the fliers announcing these events.

F. Gender and Politics Project

Professor Ellen DuBois (History) was awarded funds by UCLA in 1988 to direct a three-year series of interdisciplinary programs on gender and political issues through the Center for the Study of Women. Minimal funding for the Gender and Politics Project has been renewed through June 1994. (See "Continuing Projects--Intramural," p. 6.) In 1993-94, Professor DuBois used her funds to employ a graduate student and to plan for a panel on women candidates that will be held prior to the general election in the fall of 1994. The Center has committed to additional funding for this project in 1994-95.
G. Special Events and Co-Sponsorships

Throughout the academic year, the CSW both organizes and co-sponsors a variety of special events, public lectures, and conferences related to women and gender issues. In 1993-94, the CSW sponsored two public receptions. Special invitations were sent to UCLA faculty, graduate students, local Women's Studies Programs, and friends and supporters of the Center. On October 11, the Center hosted its annual fall reception. Over 90 people attended the event which was held in Kinsey 288 from 4-6 PM. On March 1, the CSW sponsored a reception for Women's History Month. It was held from 4-6 PM in Kinsey 288 and attended by approximately 65 people. The invitations for the two receptions are in Appendix XII-A.

The CSW also hosted the second annual commemoration of the anniversary of Roe v. Wade with two special lectures. On January 12, Abby Liebman from the California Women's Law Center gave a lunch presentation entitled "Reproductive Rights: Where Have We Been? Where Are We Going?" "Chromosome Stories: Prenatal Diagnosis and the Facts of Life" was the title of Rayna Rapp's lecture on January 13. Rapp is Professor of Anthropology at the New School for Social Research. Fliers for these as well as other special lectures throughout the year can be found in Appendix XII-B.

Las Doñas, a "friend-raising" group of women alumnæ, chose to highlight the Center for the Study of Women in their annual program, "Morning at UCLA." The choice to highlight the CSW was made in light of the upcoming tenth anniversary of the Center which will be celebrated in the fall of 1994. The program took place on March 24 from 9 AM-1 PM at Griffin Commons Conference Center/Sunset Village on the UCLA campus. Working together with Assistant to the Director, Dawn Waring, Las Doñas co-chairs Janet Seitz and Bretta Terzian planned an excellent program which drew approximately 250 women. Keynotes were given by Andrew Christensen, Psychology, and Vivien Burt, NPI. Four mini-seminars by Professors Christine Littleton, Kathryn Norberg, Karen Rowe and Co-Director of the Pacific Institute for Women's Health, Francine Coeytaux, gave the participants a choice of topics for the late morning break-out sessions. The event concluded with lunch. Appendix XII-C contains the full program which lists the speakers and their topics.

In addition, throughout the year, the Center provides financial support and organizational assistance for speakers and conferences sponsored by other campus units. To qualify for co-sponsorship, a program must address women and gender issues.

Co-sponsors for 1993-94 included: the Women's Studies Program, Friends of Art History, Department of Art, Indian Students Association, Center for Pacific Rim Studies, International Studies and Overseas Programs (ISOP), Asian-American Studies Center, Department of History, Filipino American Graduate Students Association, Raza Women, Women's Resource Center, UCLA Writing Programs, Political Science Women's Caucus, Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, Center for American Politics and Public Policy, Chancellor's Office for Academic Development, Graduate Student Association, Department of English, Chancellor's Advisory Committee on the Gay and Lesbian Community at UCLA, Lesbian and Gay Faculty/Staff NETWORK, Office of Academic Development, Office of Instructional Development, MEChA Calmaecac, Gay and Lesbian Student Association, Department of Philosophy, Center for Cultural Studies of Science/Technology & Medicine, School of Law, Institute of Industrial Relations, Center for Russian and East European Studies, Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies, G. E. von Grunebaum Center for Near Eastern Studies, Las Doñas, UCLA Film and Television Archive Research and Study Center, UCLA AIDS Institute, UCLA CARE Center, Critical Studies Program, and the Office of Community and Governmental Relations.

A complete list of lectures, conferences and special events that the CSW co-sponsored is in Appendix XII-D. Fliers for co-sponsored lectures not listed elsewhere are also in Appendix XII-D. Co-sponsored conference programs are in Appendix V-A-C and Appendix XIII-A-E. (Also see "CSW Funded Conferences," pp. 16-18 and "Co-sponsored Conferences," pp. 25-27.)
H. Co-sponsored Conferences

In addition to the four conferences listed under "Research," namely, Going Public: Women and Publishing in Early Modern France, pp. 7-8; Scary Women: Women Monsters and Fiends in American Film, p. 16; And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st Century, pp. 16-17; Women in Central and Eastern Europe: Nationalism, Feminism and Possibilities for the Future, pp. 17-18, the CSW co-sponsored five other public conferences.

1. Women and HIV: Awareness is Life

The UCLA Center for Clinical AIDS Research and Education (CARE), the UCLA AIDS Institute, and the Universitywide AIDS Research Program were the major sponsors for this third annual conference. Together with 19 community organizations, they worked to organize a conference that would focus specifically on women and HIV. Assistant to the Director, Dawn Waring, served on the planning committee.

The conference took place on Saturday, November 13, 1993, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Los Angeles. Featured speakers for the morning session were Alexandra Levine, Professor of Medicine, USC; Janet Mitchell, Chief of Perinatology, Harlem Hospital Center, New York; and Paula Treichler, College of Medicine at Urbana-Champaign. The afternoon program featured two tracks—one dealing with introductory issues and the other moving beyond the basics. A concurrent program was conducted in Spanish. For a complete program, see Appendix XIII-A.

2. Working in the 21st Century: Gender and Beyond

This conference and its companion (Encountering the Class Ceiling: Gender, Values, and the Structure of Work, see #4 below) were organized by the Center for Human Resource Management at the UCLA Institute of Industrial Relations as part of their overarching theme, "Anticipating the 21st Century." Professor Helen Astin, Education; CSW Assistant to the Director, Dawn Waring; and Bea Mandel, CSW friend and supporter, were three of the ten committee members who worked together for a year to conceptualize these two public conferences that focused on the dynamics of gender in the workplace. Centered around a series of public symposia, this project sought to address public policy makers and change agents in the public and private sectors of the economy. By broadening and deepening our economic and social understanding of the dynamics of gender in the workplace, the hope was that this project might move us from intellect to appropriate action so that the full potential of our labor force can be realized.

The conference was held on December 3, 1993, at Griffin Commons Conference Center/Sunset Village on the UCLA campus. It provided a broad conceptualization of the confluence of gender, values, and the structure of the workplace, and featured lectures by noted scholars Joan Acker, University of Oregon; Juliet B. Schor, Harvard University; Emily Levine, writer and philosopher; and Gary K. Hart, California State Senator, 18th District. The afternoon panel was moderated by Professor Carrie Menkel-Meadow, UCLA School of Law. For a complete program, see Appendix XIII-B.

Major funding for this conference was provided by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation; CSW friend and supporter, Joan Palevsky; the Bank of America; and the Roth Family Foundation. In addition to IIR and CSW, co-sponsors included the California Women's Law Center, the UCLA Human Resources Roundtable, the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce and the Los Angeles County Commission on Women.

3. Comparative Fundamentalism: Gender, Politics and Beyond

This three-day conference on comparative fundamentalism was conceived and organized by UCLA History Professor Nikki Keddie. It offered international and cross-cultural perspectives on the phenomenon of fundamentalisms in the late twentieth-century and the global impact of these ideologies. The focus on gender and politics underscored the centrality of these components to nearly all contemporary fundamentalisms.
The conference was held on the UCLA campus on April 21-23, 1994. The Thursday evening session opened with a keynote address by Martin Marty, The Divinity School, University of Chicago, entitled "Comparing Fundamentalisms." Ninian Smart from UC Santa Barbara gave a formal response. Friday morning focused on fundamentalism and gender in the U.S., Pakistan, Iran and India and featured Julie Ingersol, Mary Hegland, Shahla Haeri, Sucheta Mazumdar and Nikki Keddie. The afternoon turned to fundamentalism and politics in the U.S., the Arab world, Israel and South Asia. Speakers were Matthew Moen, Tapan Raychaudhuri, Nazih Ayubi, Ehud Sprinzak and Mark Juergensmeyer. Saturday consisted of a roundtable which focused specifically on the Islamic world. The participants included Seyyed Vali Nasr, Juan Campo, Joseph Kechichian, Timur Kuran, Eliz Sanasarian, Sondra Hale and Sherifa Zahur. Nikki Keddie and Hassan Hanafi gave closing statements.

The conference was sponsored by 11 campus units as well as the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation, UC San Diego. (See "Newly Funded Projects--Intramural," p. 9) and the Global Peace and Security Program, UC Santa Barbara. Campus units included the G. E. von Grunebaum Center for Near Eastern Studies, the College of Letters and Science, ISOP, the Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, the Center for International Relations, the African Studies Center, the Jewish Studies Program, Critical Studies, UCLA Hillel Council, the University Religious Conference, and the CSW.

Conference proceeding will be published in Contention: Debates in Society, Culture and Science. For a detailed program, see Appendix XIII-C.

4. Encountering the Glass Ceiling: Gender, Values and the Structure of Work

This conference was the second in the series on the dynamics of gender in the workplace (see #2 above). It explored the nature of the glass ceiling and focused on changes that will help our increasingly diverse workforce to experience success and satisfaction on the job, and that will contribute to maintaining healthy organizations in an increasingly competitive global environment.

The conference was held on April 29, 1994, at Griffin Commons Conference Center/Sunset Village on the UCLA campus. The featured speaker was Joyce Miller, Executive Director, Glass Ceiling Commission, United States Department of Labor. Other panelists included Susan Rose, Barbara Gutek, David Barclay, Trlice Delgado, Jose Feliciano, Miya Iwataki, Belinda Ross and Lucy Wander-Perna. The afternoon "table talk" was moderated by UCLA Law Professor, Christine Littleton. For a full conference program, see Appendix XIII-D.

Major funding for this conference was provided by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation; CSW friend and supporter, Joan Palevsky; the Bank of America; and the Roth Family Foundation. In addition to IIR and CSW, co-sponsors included the California Women’s Law Center, the UCLA Human Resources Roundtable, the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce, the Los Angeles County Commission on Women, the Commission for Sex Equity of the LA Unified School District, PDQ Personnel Services, Women in Management, LA Chapter, and the National Association of Women Business Owners, LA Chapter.

5. Dressing the Renaissance Woman

The Renaissance was the first era in European history since Roman antiquity in which there was a concern for fashion. This one-day conference on May 6, 1994, enabled scholars from a variety of disciplines to investigate the meaning of this elaborate Renaissance dress, concentrating on female dress, since the Renaissance was an era in which women’s economic power and personal independence became increasingly subjected to patriarchal structures and ideology at the same time that their external adornment became more complex and expensive.

Conference speakers included Carole Frick, Christine Junkerman, Peter Stallybrass, Sharon King, Ann Rosalind Jones, Claire McEchern and Mela Hoyt-Heydon. A full conference program can be found in Appendix XIII-E. In conjunction with the conference, the University Research Library mounted an
The exhibit of Renaissance costume books from the UCLA collections. The exhibit, in the main lobby of the library, ran from March 29 to May 8.

The conference was organized by Deborah Kenncl at the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies. CSW Director Kathryn Norberg served on the planning committee along with Claire McEachern and Joanna Woods-Marsden. Co-sponsors included the Dean of Humanities, the Friends of English, the Department of History and the Friends of Art History.

I. Graduate Student Programs

The CSW Graduate Programs Committee has identified three major ways in which the Center can assist UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender. These include: 1) creating a sense of community among students from diverse departments/schools and facilitating networking among them; 2) providing opportunities for graduate students to present their research in public forums and obtain feedback about their work from other feminist students and faculty; and 3) making funds available through the Center to support graduate research on women and gender and providing students with information about other funding sources and opportunities. CSW Graduate Programs are organized with these goals in mind.

The Center's mailing list of UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender currently includes 450 names and makes direct communication with each student possible. Individuals on the mailing list receive the annual Calendar of Events, the tri-annual Newsletter, information about CSW programs, and invitations to CSW sponsored events. The CSW also shares the list with other campus departments sponsoring programs of interest to our students. The list is updated regularly, and announcements in the Graduate Division Newsletter as well as in our own newsletter encourage students engaged in feminist research to contact the CSW and become involved in our programs.

1. Activities for Graduate Students

a. Informal Fall Luncheons

Informal Fall Luncheons were hosted by the CSW on October 25 and December 7 for all feminist graduate students interested in issues of women and gender. The luncheons were held in Kinsey 288 and the CSW provided lunch. The goal was 1) to provide an occasion for new students to be introduced to the Center and meet other like-minded graduate students; 2) to provide a place for graduate students to network, build support systems, and discuss concerns with students from other disciplines; and 3) to allow students a voice in planning the annual graduate student conference. Forty-five students attended the October lunch and 20 students came to the December lunch. Fliers can be found in Appendix XIV-A.

b. Feminist Research Seminar

The Feminist Research Seminar is open to all graduate students interested in research on women and/or gender. (For a full description of the seminar, see "Feminist Research Seminar," p. 22.) The CSW subsidizes any graduate student who "joins," and there is no fee for membership. In 1993-94, 66 graduate students were members of the Seminar out of a total membership of 140.

c. Reading Group--Feminism, Race and Class

An informal reading group, organized by Karen Sacks, Anthropology/Women's Studies, and Vilma Ortiz, Sociology/Chicano Studies, had its initial organizational meeting on Wednesday, October 27, from 4-6 PM in Kinsey 288. The group was open to all faculty and graduate students interested in issues of feminism, race and class. Readings were chosen by the group and put on reserve in four locations, including CSW and Women's Studies. Expectations were that participants would do the reading in advance of the meetings and come prepared for discussion. Meetings continued through winter quarter. See Appendix XIV-B for fliers.
d. Winter/Spring Workshop

The annual winter/spring workshop was to be held on May 24, from 4-6 PM in Kinsey 288 with Judith Rosen, Professor of English and a new faculty member (fall 1993), facilitating a session entitled "Preparing for the Job Market--What To Do and What Not To Do." Due to schedule conflicts, the workshop had to be postponed until the fall of 1994.

2. Annual Graduate Student Research Conference

The Center sponsored its fourth annual graduate student research conference on Friday, March 4, 1994, which provided graduate students with an opportunity to present their work in a public forum. The decision to move the conference from May to March was made so that, for the first time, the conference could be co-sponsored by the University of Southern California. Fifty-one graduate students (38 UCLA students and 13 USC students) doing research on women and gender presented papers in a day-long series of interdisciplinary workshops facilitated by UCLA and USC faculty. This represented a dramatic increase over 1992-93 when 27 UCLA students presented papers. An art exhibit by USC student, Leah Matson, entitled "Women and Power" was on display from 8 AM-5 PM, and the buffet luncheon was used as a time for students to network with each other rather than feature a keynote speaker, which had been done in prior years. Approximately 125 graduate students and faculty attended the day-long event.

The venue for the conference was the UCLA Faculty Center, since the former venue (Royce Hall and various classrooms) had been damaged in the January 17 earthquake. The students were pleased to have the conference contained in one location, and the site provided a coherence that the conference had previously lacked. The participation of USC students and faculty gave an added dimension, and the conference evaluations were overwhelmingly positive. A complete listing of the conference speakers and their paper topics, the call for abstracts, the conference program and the evaluation form are included in Appendix XIV-C.

In conjunction with the conference, the CSW hosted an evening reception and special docent tour of the exhibit "Bad Girls West" at the Wight Art Gallery. The tour was given by Professor Sondra Hale, Anthropology and Women's Studies. Special invitations were sent to all CSW supporters and friends (also see Appendix XIV-C).

3. Mary Wollstonecraft Dissertation Prize

The Center presents an annual award, the Mary Wollstonecraft Prize, for the outstanding dissertation that concerns women or gender and that makes use of historical materials and methods. The prize was established in the amount of $1,000 by the Edwin and S. Barbara (Penny) Kanner Endowed Fund for the Mary Wollstonecraft Prize. Although the prize has been awarded since 1988, the fund was fully endowed in December 1989 by a generous gift from Penny Kanner and her husband. Kanner, who received her Ph.D. from UCLA, is a CSW Research Scholar who specializes in British women's history. This award is designed to make doctoral research on women more visible and to assist students at a critical stage in their careers. Each spring, the CSW sends a letter to UCLA faculty members asking for nominations. A faculty committee evaluates all submissions. The "call for nominations" is in Appendix XIV-D.

The 1993-94 recipient of the Wollstonecraft Prize was Roxanne Eberle from the Department of English. Her dissertation was entitled "Redeemed Through Narrative: Representing the Sexualized Heroine in Nineteenth-Century British Literature by Women" and focused on representations of fallen women in nineteenth-century British fiction. The Committee (see Appendix I for a list of members) believed that Eberle's account of the "fallen woman" as employed by female writers skillfully interwove historical context and textual analysis. They were particularly impressed with her close attention to the importance of change over time as her work takes the reader from the radicalized political atmosphere of the 1790's to the highly moralistic Victorian reform period of the late 1800's.
The Prize was presented to Roxanne Eberle at a special luncheon at the Faculty Center on June 17, 1994. The luncheon was attended by members of Eberle's family, the Wollstonecraft committee members see Appendix I, Professor Anne Mellor (Eberle's dissertation chair), and Penny Kanner. Penny was recognized and thanked for her generous contribution and commitment to feminist graduate students.

4. Travel Grant Program

The Travel Grant Program was initiated in the fall of 1990 to assist UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender with travel expenses related to their research and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences. Through these awards, the Center is able to directly support and facilitate the academic and career aspirations of graduate students doing gender-related work. This year, funding for this program was provided by the friends and supporters of the CSW (see J below).

During the 1993-94 academic year, funds were awarded three times in competitions held quarterly. A joint student/faculty committee (a subcommittee of the Graduate Programs Committee with a rotating membership) reviewed the applications and notified the recipients by the end of each quarter. (See Appendix I for a list of the committee members.) A program flier, a copy of the guidelines and procedures and an application are included in Appendix XIV-E.

A total of $8,750 was distributed among 38 students representing 13 different departments and schools, with a maximum award per student of $400. Fifty-six graduate students representing 19 different departments and schools submitted applications. This represented an increase over 1992-93 when $5,800 was awarded to 24 students representing 9 departments and schools (43 students representing 16 departments and schools applied). A list of the 1993-94 travel grant recipients, including their department and research topic, is included in Appendix XIV-F.

5. Graduate Student Support

Each year, the CSW offers a limited number of graduate student research assistantships in conjunction with the Graduate Division. In addition, graduate students are employed on both extramural and intramural grants. This year, the CSW was able to provide graduate student research assistantships to three graduate students representing the Departments of History, Sociology and Film. An additional 13 graduate students were employed on extramural and intramural grant projects sponsored by the Center. A complete list of student employees can be found in Appendix XIV-G.

J. Friends of the Center for the Study of Women

Since June 1986, The Center has had an active group of community supporters called the Friends of the Center for the Study of Women. The Friends have functioned as a formal support group, and have organized programs and helped to raise funds for CSW projects, especially the graduate student travel grant program. During 1993-94, the formal Friends group became inactive with the impending resignation of co-chair, Bea Mandel, who had been a mainstay since the group's inception. Since the Friends' special programming was not cost effective and had become very time intensive for CSW staff, it was decided that friends and supporters of the CSW should be invited to established CSW events and special receptions, and that the CSW staff should take over the responsibility of doing an annual mailing. (See "Development Activities," p. 34.)

In 1993-94, the Friends continued to support graduate students in that funds raised in previous years were used to provide continued support for the Graduate Student Travel Grant Program. See Appendix XIV-F for a list of graduate student awards.

For a summary of the development accounts generated by the Friends, see Supplement B.
IV. PUBLICATIONS

Promoting and maintaining informational links among scholars doing research on women and gender is one of the primary functions of the Center. The CSW also seeks to inform the wider academic community about research resulting from Center-supported projects.

In addition to Center-based publications, many of the Core Faculty, Principal Investigators, Research Scholars and Affiliated Scholars at CSW have published their research results in scholarly journals and books. Through the publications described below, the Center informs individuals and organizations within and beyond UCLA about the research and programs it supports.

A. Calendar of Events

In September the CSW published its "Calendar of Events" poster for the 1993-94 academic year. Distribution was approximately 3,500. The success of the 2-quarter 1992-93 calendar prompted the Center to publish an annual calendar which can be "posted" and which gives the "year at a glance." The Calendar presents an overview of the many events and conferences both sponsored and co-sponsored by the CSW and also provides the Center with much needed visibility. All on-going CSW series are included (e.g., Feminist Research Seminar, Feminist Theory Series, Gender and Science Series, and Lunch Series). There is also a column for conferences and one for special events. Obviously, there are often a number of events which are co-sponsored or are added later in the academic year that are not listed, since the Calendar is printed in September. Individual fliers are made to advertise these events. The Calendar for 1993-94 can be found in Appendix XV-A.

B. Newsletter

In 1993-94, the CSW published three Newsletters--fall, winter and spring quarters. Distribution was approximately 3,500 which included all Women's Studies Programs and Women's Research Centers nationwide. The introduction of new women faculty has become a regular feature of the fall newsletter. Overall, the newsletters highlight upcoming programs and events, profile Visiting Scholars and graduate students, and include a "Dates to Remember" calendar on the back. The three Newsletters for 1993-94 are in Appendix XV-B.

C. Brochure

In January 1994, the Center designed and published a new brochure outlining the various research projects and programs of the CSW. This was the second brochure in the ten-year history of the Center, and every effort was made to make it as "timeless" as possible. It was specifically designed to be used as both an informational piece which can be sent to individuals and institutions inquiring about the CSW and as something to be given to potential donors. A separate "How You Can Help" insert lists gift options and a return "Gift Remit Card" provides the opportunity for one to make their donation through a variety of different payment options. The brochure is an effective piece both with and without these inserts. The brochure can be found in Appendix XV-C.

D. Other Publications

1. Women of Color and the Multicultural Curriculum: Transforming the College Classroom

This volume, edited by Liza Fiol-Matta and Mariam K. Chamberlain, was published by the Feminist Press at the City University of New York in the spring of 1994. The book is the product of thirteen curriculum projects and provides faculty and administrators with a guide to change--especially with respect to women of color. Included in the volume are numerous articles about the Ford Foundation-funded project (FEW, see "Continuing Projects—Intramural," pp. 5-6) directed by Professor Karen Rowe, Department of English. Part One highlights the actual process of faculty development and administrative support essential to curricular change, as it occurred at UCLA and George Washington University. Part Two contains thirty-seven transformed undergraduate syllabi for courses—six of these were generated by UCLA faculty involved in the FEW Project. Appendix XV-D displays a copy of the book cover.

2. Working in the 21st Century: Gender and Beyond

Working in the 21st Century: Gender and Beyond, volume 1 in a series on the dynamics of gender in the workplace, presents the conference proceedings from the co-sponsored conference of the same name that was held on December 3, 1993, at UCLA. It is edited by conference organizer, Judith Glass, and was published by the UCLA Institute of Industrial Relations in the spring of 1994. The companion conference, Encountering the Glass Ceiling: Gender, Values, and the Structure of Work, took place on April 29, 1994. Volume 2 in the series will contain the proceeding of that conference and is scheduled to be released in the fall of 1995. For a complete description of the two conferences, see "Co-sponsored Conferences," pp. 25-26. For a copy of the book cover, see Appendix XV-D.

V. ADMINISTRATION AND OPERATIONS

During the 1993-94 academic year, the Center was administered by Director Kathryn Norberg (History) under the direction of the CSW Advisory Committee chaired by Anne K. Mellor (English).

A. Advisory and Other Committees of CSW

The Center's administration is advised by a faculty committee appointed by Dean Fred Eiserling. This committee met once each quarter: November 30, March 8, and May 24. In past years, the Executive Committee, which consisted of three members of the Advisory Committee in addition to the Center Director and the Chair of the Advisory Committee, would convene once or twice a quarter to discuss personnel and other matters that needed immediate attention. However, this year, the Advisory Committee voted to dissolve the Executive Committee until, at some point in the future, it becomes necessary to reconstitute it. In addition to its Advisory Committee, the Center also benefits from the advice of faculty members serving on four different standing committees: Affiliated Scholars; Graduate Programs; Research; Wollstonecraft. Members of these committees for 1993-94 are listed in Appendix I.

B. Staff

During 1993-94, the Center was staffed by an Assistant to the Director, an Administrative Analyst and an Administrative Assistant. There was no staff turn-over, and Dawn Waring, Van Do-Nguyen and Edeliza Tumbkon continued in their respective positions. On April 1, 1994, Edeliza was reclassified from Administrative Assistant I to Administrative Assistant II. During the academic year, the Center was also assisted by both undergraduate and graduate students. A complete listing of student employees can be found in Appendix XIV-G.

C. Space

Currently the Center occupies the following office space in Kinsey Hall: 276 (main office/ Administrative Assistant II), 251B (Administrative Analyst), 288A, B, C (Director, Assistant to the Director and Conference Room). Room 251A is loaned to the Women's Studies Program, and 255 is used for CSW principal investigators, CTP Project Personnel and Visiting Scholars.
D. Budget

The Center's permanent budget is composed mainly of 19900 State funds allocated by the Dean of the Life Sciences. In addition, the Center receives one-time allocations for special projects, income from the Feminist Research Seminar, donations from friends and supporters of the CSW, University support, and support from grants awarded from private foundations and federal agencies. The Center also benefits from funds that have been raised by the Friends of the CSW (see Supplement B).

The detailed budget, including income and expenditures by source, is listed in Supplement A.

1993-94 Summary of Funding Sources

- 19900 sub-0 Academic Salaries
- 19900 Operational Budget
- One-time Special Allocations
- Income Fund
- Donor Funds
- University Support for Faculty Research
- Private Foundations
- Federal Agencies

TOTAL: $1,501,066.20

E. Equipment

The Center is currently operating with the following equipment: 2 486/DX/2-66 computers, 1 ACER 1100 computer, 1 Macintosh SE, 1 Macintosh+ with external hard drive, 1 original equipment IBM PC upgraded with AST super pak, 1 Hewlett Packard LaserJet III printer, 1 HP LaserJet II, 1 HP LaserJet, 1 LaserWriter NTX printer, 1 Diablo Companion 34LQ printer, 1 IBM Wheelwriter 10, 1 IBM Wheelwriter 6, 2 IBM selectric typewriters and 1 transcriber. The Center also has 1 Xerox Teletyper 7024 fax machine, 1 GE Television, 1 Emerson 4-head VCR, 1 TV/VCR stand, 1 Kodak Carousel 4600 slide projector, a 140 slide tray, 1 projection table, and 1 projection screen.

The Center owns but is not using 3 original equipment IBM PC's upgraded with AST super paks, 1 Magnavox PC, 1 Okidata dot matrix printer, 1 Evervision monitor, and 1 Panasonic typewriter. Some of this equipment will be listed in the UCLA surplus catalog.

F. Affiliation with Other Groups

The Center's staff and administration are affiliated with a number of groups locally, at the state level and nationally.

1. UCLA Women's Studies Program (WSP)

The Director of the Center sits on the Faculty Advisory Committee of the Women's Studies Program. The Women's Studies Program and the CSW co-sponsor various public lectures and share the cost of bringing in outside speakers. The WSP also writes news stories and places announcements in the CSW Newsletter. In the fall issue of 1993, the cover story was given to profiling the new Director of the Women's Studies Program, Christine Littleton (Law School). In addition, the CSW shares one of its offices with the WSP as well as xerox and fax machines and the CSW computer data base. The CSW conference room in Kinsey 288 is also made available to Women's Studies for their TGIF gatherings, advisory committee meetings, and special lectures. With the institution of a Ph.D. in Women's Studies at UCLA, the two units should draw still closer together.
2. UCLA Association of Academic Women (AAW)

Once a year the Center cooperates with the AAW in hosting a fall reception for new female faculty. The Center's role has been to provide materials to newcomers describing the Center and to be represented at the event. Faculty affiliated with the Center host newcomers from their respective departments. In 1993-94, the AAW also co-sponsored the January 21-22 conference, And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st Century. For a full description of the conference, see "CSW Funded Conferences," pp. 16-17 and also Appendix V-B.

3. UCLA Chancellor's Coordinating Council on the Status of Women (CCCSW)

In 1991, Executive Vice Chancellor Andrea Rich, in consultation with members of the women's community at UCLA, created the Chancellor's Coordinating Council on the Status of Women that replaced the Chancellor's Advisory Council on the Status of Women. In 1992-93, this group was chaired by Center Director Kathryn Norberg and composed of the Director of Women's Studies, the President of the AAW, the Director of the Women's Resource Center, the Director of the UCLA Child Care Center, two staff representatives, two undergraduate representatives, a graduate representative and an observer from the Lesbian and Gay Faculty/Staff NETWORK. The Council meets at least three times during the year and reports to the Chancellor through the Council on Diversity.

In 1993-94, the CCCSW was chaired by Kathy Rose-Mockery, Director of the Women's Resource Center. CSW Director Kathryn Norberg was a member of the committee, which met monthly.

4. University of California Council of Women's Programs (UCCWP)

The Center is a member of the UC Council of Women's Programs, which is composed of representatives of women's studies programs and feminist research units on the nine California campuses. The Council holds meetings two-three times a year so that faculty and staff from all the UC campuses can share information and work on joint projects.

In 1993-94, the UC Council met once in the fall quarter in conjunction with the UCCWP Conference, "The Feminist Future: A Transnational Perspective from California." The conference was organized and sponsored by UC Riverside and was held at the UCLA Conference Center at Lake Arrowhead on November 19-21. The conference brought together those teaching and doing research in Women's Studies to explore four important sites of feminism--the state, popular culture, the workplace and the academy. The meeting and the conference were attended by Director Kathryn Norberg and Assistant to the Director, Dawn Waring. Professor Christine Littleton, School of Law and Director of Women's Studies, presented a paper entitled "Whose Law Is It Anyway?" Sondra Hale, Women's Studies Lecturer and CSW Research Scholar, served as one of the facilitators. The conference program can be found in Appendix XVI.

In the winter quarter, the Council met on Friday, February 11, at UC San Francisco, and the meeting was hosted by Adele Clarke at her home. Dawn Waring, Assistant to the Director, represented the CSW. The spring quarter meeting was convened on Friday, April 22, at UCLA at the Center for the Study of Women in Kinsey 288.

5. National Council for Research on Women (NCRW)

The Center is a member of The National Council for Research on Women, a national aegis organization whose membership is composed of all the research centers in the country that do research on women and gender. As a member of the Council, the Center is often represented at the annual meeting and shares information on its activities through the National Council's Newsletter. The CSW Newsletter and Calendar of Events are also sent to all NCRW member organizations.
G. Development Activities

The Center for the Study of Women engages in a number of activities that seek to raise funds for gender-related research and programs from interested individuals in the community, UCLA alumni, foundations and corporations. In cooperation with the Development Officer assigned to the Life Sciences in the College of Letters and Science, the CSW also seeks to identify donors to fulfill its long-term goals by means of endowments.

Since 1986, the Center for the Study of Women has had a dedicated group of Friends co-chaired in 1992-93 by Beatrice Mandel and Laura Levy-Coutin, but this group became inactive in 1993-94 (see p. 29). However, the funds raised in past years continued to support the graduate student Travel Grant Program. The details of the development accounts can be found in Supplement B.

The CSW sent out two solicitation letters in 1993-94—one in the fall (a year-end letter) and another in the spring, utilizing the new CSW brochure (see "Publications," p. 30). Both letters focused on the need for funds to support the Travel Grant Program which helps to fund graduate student travel to research sites or to scholarly conferences to present papers. (See p. 29 for a full description of the program and Appendix XIV-F for a list of students awards for 1993-94.) Instead of continuing to deposit solicited funds and unrestricted donations in the current Friends account (#5722), it was decided in November 1993 that a new account (#6167) should be established as a general fund to be used at the discretion of the Director and that income from direct solicitation and unrestricted donations should be deposited in that account. Both of these accounts are listed in Supplement B.

Also in 1993-94, several donors made contributions through the newly established Women and Philanthropy group founded by Karen Stone and Dyan Sublett in the Office of Development. Some of these gifts were to be paid over a three-year period.

Finally, in December 1993, a long-time supporter and friend of the Center, noted editor Jean Stone, transferred to the CSW $20,000 of the money she had originally given for the aborted Presidential Chair. Although the actual transfer of funds was delayed beyond the 1993-94 fiscal year, this new gift will ultimately bring the Center closer to the time when the Jean Stone Fund, an endowment established in 1990-91, will be able to provide an annual fellowship for graduate student research on women and gender-related issues. Details of this fund (not including the transfer) can be found in Supplement B.

ROMANTICISM AND GENDER

National Endowment for the Humanities
Summer Seminar for College Teachers

Professor Anne K. Mellor
Director

20 June 1994 - 12 August 1994

University of California, Los Angeles

This seminar will explore the difference that gender makes in the construction and interpretation of major literary texts written in the English Romantic period. By combining theoretical strategies gleaned from the new historicism, feminism, deconstruction, psychoanalysis, and thematic criticism, we shall study poetry, fiction, drama and prose by Blake, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Byron, Keats, Mary and Percy Shelley, Hemans, Landon, Charlotte Smith, Wollstonecraft, Edgeworth, Austen, Opie, Radcliffe and Baillie to analyze the different rhetorical forms and ideological positions employed by male and female romantic writers. The seminar will provide an overview of recent scholarship and criticism of the English Romantic canon in the light of current theoretical debates.

GOING PUBLIC: Women & Publishing In Early Modern France

UCLA Center for the Study of Women
and
The Center for 17th- and 18th-Century Studies
February 4–5, 1994
at
The William Andrews Clark Memorial Library

Organized by: Kathryn Norberg (UCLA)
Elizabeth Goldsmith (Boston University)
Dena Goodman (Louisiana State University)

This conference explores the cultural and political conditions that made it possible for French women writers to take their private thoughts into the public sphere, that is to publish. Scholars in literature and history will analyze a variety of works—novels, judicial tracts, memoirs, scientific treatises, fairy tales and erotic fiction—in order to determine how seventeenth- and eighteenth-century French women got into print, that is how they "went public."

Friday, February 4
8:45 Registration
9:00 Coffee on the Terrace
9:30-12:00 Putting Their Case to the Public I: Women's Printed Stories
Carolyn Chappel Loughe, Stanford University
"Reason for the Public to Admire Her: Why Madame de La Guette Published Her Memoirs"

Elizabeth Goldsmith, Boston University
"In Search Of A Separate Space: The Memoirs of Hontemne and Marie Mancini"

Susan Jackson, Boston University
"Publishing Without Perishing: Isabelle de Chamire, a.k.a. La Mouche du Coche"

12:00-2:00 Lunch at the Clark Library
2:00-4:30 Putting Their Case to the Public II: Law, Literature and Politics

MINI-GRANT PROGRAM 1993-1994
CALL FOR PROPOSALS

We are pleased to announce that grant money is available to feminist researchers working on women and gender. Awards range from $2,000 to $5,000.

Two types of applications will be supported:

• Individual grants designed to support a specific research project. Priority will be given to proposals that may serve as "seed projects" for larger extramural grant applications to be brought through the Center.

• Interdisciplinary collaborative grants designed to support small team projects that bring together faculty and possibly graduate students from two or more UCLA departments/schools. Priority will be given to proposals that may result in a group product, such as a publication, or a larger extramural grant application to be brought through the Center. At least two faculty members from different departments/schools at UCLA must make a joint application.

Eligibility: UCLA faculty and those applying with them

Amount of Awards: Up to $5,000

Preference will be given to the support of research assistants and other research-related expenses. Award monies may not be used to pay UCLA faculty salaries, costs of manuscript preparation, indexing, publication or translation, or for the purchase of major equipment. Travel funds will be limited.

Evaluation Criteria Include:

1. Selection will be based upon the quality and originality of the proposal and its relevance to feminist research on women and gender.

2. Priority will be given to junior faculty and to individuals who have not previously received research funds from the Center for the Study of Women.

3. Priority will be given to proposals that lead to extramural funding through the Center for the Study of Women.

Submission Deadline: May 13, 1994 (Funding period is 7/1/94-6/30/95.)

For an application or questions about the program, contact Dawn Waring, Assistant to the Director 276 Kinsey Hall, x.65898 or x.50590.
INSTRUCTIONS

Applying for a Mini-grant from the Center for the Study of Women

Please carefully read the "Call for Proposals" for important information about the mini-grant program and the evaluation criteria.

Required Application Materials

Complete the enclosed application forms which include a cover sheet and a budget statement. Prepare a 3-5 page typed Project Description. The Project Description should include, as appropriate, these elements:

1. A one-paragraph abstract or general summary of the proposal, limited to 150 words or less. (If the project is funded, this paragraph will be used in information describing funded projects.)

2. The goal or outcome of the project and the relationship of this product to previous research.

3. The funding sources (specific federal agencies or private foundations) to which you intend to apply in the future.

4. The specific plan of procedure for the funding period.

5. A project budget, including a detailed justification of the budget.

6. For interdisciplinary collaborative proposals only, include a separate page giving the names, UCLA affiliation, mailing address and phone number of each member of the research group.

Submit an envelope containing 6 copies of the following:

(A) The application materials (cover sheet, budget, project descriptions) stapled in sets.

(B) The curriculum vitae of each faculty member participating in the project.

Deadline: May 13, 1994

Mailing Address: Deliver or mail application materials to the Center for the Study of Women, 276 Kinsey Hall, Campus, 150405.

For Additional Information: Contact Dawn Waring, Assistant to the Director, Center for the Study of Women, 276 Kinsey Hall, Campus, 150405 (x. 65898 or x.50590).

The Scary Women series and the symposium, presented in association with the Center for the Study of Women, will examine the idea of the female monster and fiend through many of her various incarnations in American cinematic history. Frightening females in horror and science fiction films have been brides or daughters of Gothic monsters; they have been satanically possessed, sexually hypnotic, and reproductively aberrant. They have wreaked nuclear-powered revenge, murdered from the grave and ruined senior proms. Symposium participants include Rhona Berenstein, Carol Clover, Barbara Creed, Vivian Sobchack, and Linda Williams.

All events will take place in Melnitz Theater.

Ticket prices at Melnitz Theater are $5.00 for the general public and $3.00 for students and seniors. Matinees are $3.00 and $1.50, respectively. Tickets cannot be reserved or purchased in advance. Box office opens one hour prior to screening time. All seats are first come, first serve. Multiple and double bills play in order printed. Ten minute intermission between films, except where noted. Melnitz Theater is located in Westwood on the northeast corner of the UCLA campus, near the intersection of Sunset Blvd. and Hilgard Ave. (East of the San Diego FWY/405, Sunset Blvd. exit). Parking is available for $5.00 at the kiosks at Westwood and Hilgard before 7:00 pm and at the gate of Lot 3, adjacent to Melnitz, after 7:30. For more information, call (310) 206-8013.

    "... And Women Will Lead Us" Planning Committee

Economic and demographic changes in California are influencing the restructuring of public education. The 1990s will see the creation of a variety of educational innovations adapting to the new social and economic realities of our state. By the 21st Century these innovations will greatly determine who has access to higher education and who does not. Planning for higher education in the next century must start now and it must include the perspectives and accommodate the needs of California's ethnic and economically diverse population. Inclusive and economically feasible educational policy will require knowledgeable decision makers informed of community needs and institutional resources who can successfully transform their differences into a firm foundation of support for the educational aspirations of all students.

You are invited to join with other women community leaders and administrators from higher education institutions in an unique venture to:

Develop Recommendations for Higher Educational Policy

Improve the Educational Delivery System to California's Children

Contribute to New Models for Inclusive Decision Making in California

Identify Partners for Collaborating on New Projects and Activities

Extend Your Community Organization's Network

Fill out the enclosed registration form and return in the stamped envelop. Make sure to select and rank your workshop preferences. If you wish additional information, contact me at 310/206-5718.
"And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st Century"

IDENTIFYING OUR COMMUNITY'S EDUCATIONAL NEEDS AND RESOURCES

UCLA
JANUARY 21-23, 1994

Women administrators from higher education and leaders from community based organizations will jointly assess the current state of higher education, explore community needs and expectations for education, formulate recommendations for policies, and develop projects to insure that in the 21st Century higher education in California will effectively meet the needs of its ethnically and economic diverse women.

Inclusive solutions require inclusive decision making. But our legacy of gender, ethnic, and class exclusions leave us with little experience in recognizing our common interests or using the richness inherent in our differences to expand our common ground. Successful leadership in an organizational setting requires working around, across, and through differences. It is this experience which provides the common ground uniting women administrative leaders from the academic and local communities and it is from this common ground that they can embark upon chartering educational terrain for the 21st Century.

Pooling the administrative expertise accumulated by women leaders creates a reservoir for inclusive planning that capitalizes on the differences that once separated us. Nowhere is the need for such planning greater than in education and nowhere is the promise of success more rewarding.

By sharing the perspectives acquired from different loci in our system, we can fashion strategies responsive to a range of changes greater than a single locus offers. Through collaborations among community and educational organizations it is possible to insure that the needs of diverse students are identified and met through more informed use of the shrinking public financial pie.

The workshop format is used to provide a framework familiar to participants that is easily adaptable to the evolving needs of each group. Five problem areas of community education needs, in particular, will be addressed through the workshops:

- Partnerships for education
- Leadership for charting the future
- Assuring access
- Financing education
- Learning in a diverse society.

The workshops will directly result in policy recommendations for public officials, educators K-16, and community organizations. Indirectly, through projects and partnerships created by participants, the weekend's collaborative experiences will deepen over time as our common ground expands into a truly inclusive community.

1994-95 AFFILIATED SCHOLARS PROGRAM

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women invites applications to its Affiliated Scholars Program for 1994-95. The program seeks to support local scholars conducting gender-related research. No stipends are available.

Affiliated Scholars will receive formal affiliation with the Center, UCLA library privileges, stationery, access to a laser printer, assistance in developing funding proposals and an opportunity to participate in Center activities and programs. Scholars are appointed for one year, but affiliation may be extended.

Eligibility: Participation in the program is open to faculty early in their careers and to independent scholars who are conducting research on women. The program is primarily designed to support women of color and scholars with limited institutional access to research support. Participants will be selected on the basis of both proposed research and past scholarly work. UCLA Senate faculty are not eligible.

Application Process: Applications should include the following:

1. A 3-4 page letter of intent which briefly describes the proposed research project and gives the specific objectives, methodology, timetable, library or other resources required, and proposed end product.

2. Curriculum vitae which includes current organizational or institutional affiliation (if any), publications, and names of references.

SEND FOUR (4) COPIES OF THE APPLICATION TO THE ADDRESS BELOW BY MAY 1, 1994

AFFILIATED SCHOLARS PROGRAM
UCLA Center for the Study of Women
405 Hilgard Avenue, 276 Kinsey Hall
Los Angeles, California 90024-1504

Applicants may be asked to submit additional information. Final selection of scholars will be made and all applicants notified by June 1, 1994. Scholars may commence their affiliation on or after July 1, 1994.

For more information call (310) 825-0590.

August 31, 1993

Dear CSW Faculty Member:

Please join the 1993-1994 Feminist Research Seminar sponsored by the UCLA Center for the Study of Women. You will notice that the Seminar has a new format. After our Fifth Year Review last spring, the Faculty Advisory Committee decided that the Seminar needed to be rethought. Faculty felt that the seminar had drifted away from its original purpose and become a lecture, rather than a discussion series.

In the interest of encouraging discussion, papers will once again be precirculated. We ask that faculty and administrators pay $25 to defray xeroxing costs. There is no cost for Affiliated or Research Scholars. Graduate students may obtain papers free at the Center for the Study of Women office (Kinsey 276), but we would still like to have your name and campus address so that we can notify you of any changes in the schedule. All who join the Seminar will receive each of the seven papers about two weeks before the seminar.

To enhance the interdisciplinary content of the Seminar, two commentators/discussants from a variety of departments will lead the discussion. Commentators will expect the participants to have read the papers carefully; come prepared. The outcome should be a truly stimulating intellectual experience.

Please note that the Seminar will now meet in Kinsey 288 in the CSW conference room. This year we have an abundance of exciting talks. Please join and participate.

Sincerely,

Kathryn Norberg

INDIAN WIDOWS SPEAK OUT IN THIS NEW DOCUMENTARY
MOKSHA MEANS SALVATION! IS IT?
JUDGE FOR YOURSELF

The UCLA Center for Study of Women, UCLA Writing Programs, and the Curriculum Transformation Project are pleased to sponsor this showing of Pankaj Butalia's

MOKSHA
WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 6TH
5:30-8:00 PM
MEDIA LABORATORY
270 POWELL LIBRARY

In some sections of India's traditional Hindu society a woman's life changes drastically after her husband's death. While the practice of widow burning in India is still publicized in the United States, it is illegal in India. Other legal alternatives exist which, however, continue to marginalize widows.

MOKSHA is a documentary about one such alternative: pilgrimage to holy places in pursuit of salvation. This spiritual quest results in the permanent relocation of widows since it is understood that such pilgrimages are for life. Vrindavan is a holy city whose large population of widows reflects this 200 year old practice. Pankaj Butalia's ethno-documentary enables the women residing in Vrindavan today to speak directly about their lives.

Margaret Sanger went to jail in 1917 for distributing contraceptives to immigrant women from a makeshift clinic in a tenement storefront in Brooklyn. She lived to see the Supreme Court decision that guaranteed Constitutional protection to the use of birth control in America. She left as her enduring legacy an international family planning movement.

Ellen Chesler is the author of Woman of Valor: Margaret Sanger and the Birth Control Movement in America. She holds a Ph.D. in history from Columbia University. Ellen spent years researching Sanger's life and her battle against a formidable, conservative opposition. She will talk about this fascinating history and its relevance to contemporary policy issues in the fields of family planning, abortion, population and public health.

Protest Sexual Slavery:
Protect Women's Human Rights

From the Philippines, Korea, China, Bosnia and Saudi Arabia, women are standing in solidarity to fight violence and injustice.

During World War II about 200,000 Asian women were conscripted by the Japanese Imperial Army to forcibly provide sexual services to their military personnel throughout areas of Asia occupied by the Japanese military. These young women (girls ages 12-20), called "comfort women," came from Korea, Philippines, China, Taiwan, and other Asian countries. Raped repeatedly, many of them had to "service" up to 30 soldiers a night.

"When I was 14 years old, the Japanese kidnapped me and kept me imprisoned in their headquarters for eight days. During my first day, I was raped seven times by the same man who did all sorts of things."

-Amonita Balajadia, Pilipina "comfort" woman entitled

"Masculinity on Display"

Wednesday February 23, 1994
4:00 to 6:00 p.m.
in Dickson Art Center 3273

Mary Kelly, perhaps best known for her Post-Partum Document, continues to work compellingly in the otherwise derelict space where art practice and theoretical rigor intersect. She has shown her work internationally and has published articles and reviews.

Undergraduates, Graduate Students, and Faculty are invited to attend.

AFTERNOON PROGRAM

During the afternoon program, participants are invited to attend four different workshops. The workshops are organized along two different tracks, Track A and Track B. Track A is designed to provide basic information on HIV/AIDS. It is for the woman who is perhaps recently diagnosed HIV-positive, or for the service provider who is new to the field. Track B moves beyond the basics of HIV for those individuals who are already knowledgeable about the epidemic and perhaps have already attended one or more of these conferences. PLEASE NOTE, however, that participants can choose to attend a combination of workshops chosen from both Track A and Track B.

TRACK A

A conference for policy makers and change agents in the public and private sectors

Attention has been focussed on the glass ceiling, the invisible barrier to advancement to top jobs. This conference will explore the nature of this barrier, whether it is based only on gender discrimination or are there other factors that are relevant as well. We will look at workplace changes that will help our increasingly diverse workforce to experience success and satisfaction on the job, and that will contribute to maintaining healthy organizations in an increasingly competitive global environment.

Major funding for this conference has been provided by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Additional funding provided by the Bank of America, Joan Palevsky and the Roth Family Foundation.

ANNOUNCE

THE FOURTH ANNUAL
GRADUATE STUDENT
RESEARCH CONFERENCE

CALL FOR PAPERS

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION OF ABSTRACTS

TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1994

This year, the UCLA Center for the Study of Women and the USC Center for Feminist Research are jointly organizing this conference to give graduate students doing research on women and gender an opportunity to present their work-in-progress as well as to promote interaction and build community among students from the two universities. The program is scheduled for Friday, March 4th, in Royce Hall 314 on the UCLA campus. Concurrent workshops will run throughout the day. To allow time for discussion, each speaker will be asked to limit her/his presentation to twenty minutes. Lunch will be provided.

If you would like to present your research at this conference, please submit a one-page abstract of your paper by January 18, 1994 to the Graduate Programs Committee, Center for the Study of Women, 276 Kinsey Hall, 150405. Include your name, department/school affiliation, level of graduate study, faculty advisor, home address, and home/work phone numbers. A joint student/faculty committee will review the abstracts for inclusion in the conference. You will be notified of the committee's decisions by January 28.

Although we are interested in original research, it is not necessary to write a new paper especially for this conference. A seminar paper, a chapter from your master's thesis or dissertation, or a paper presented at a conference held elsewhere are equally welcome.

For further information, please contact

Dear Graduate Student:

The Center for the Study of Women would like to invite you to attend the Fourth Annual Graduate Student Research Conference on Friday, March 4 from 8 am to 5 pm. The conference this year is being co-sponsored with USC. There will be 14 panels with 50 papers presented. Each panel will be chaired by a UCLA or USC faculty member, and there will be ample time for discussion. As you will see from the enclosed schedule, the program is excellent. Please come and support your fellow students.

There is no registration fee for the conference, but there is a $5 charge to help defray the cost of the buffet lunch. Following the conference, there will be a reception from 5-6 pm at the Wight Art Gallery, with a personal tour of the art exhibit Bad Girls West at 5:30. This special tour and commentary will be given by Sondra Hale, Professor of Anthropology and Women's Studies. The Wight Art Gallery is also presenting a free program that evening at 7:30 entitled "Outrageous Women of Comedy." All are invited to attend this performance.

Please RSVP to the Center for the Study of Women if you would like to attend the conference. If you have any questions, you may call the Center at (310) 825-0590 or come by the office at 276 Kinsey Hall.

We hope to see you on March 4th!

Sincerely,

Kathryn Norberg

Dear Conference Attendee,

Thank you for attending the UCLA and USC Graduate Student Research Conference on Women and Gender co-sponsored by the Center for the Study of Women and the Center for Feminist Research. Your participation helped make this event a great success. To help us address any problems and ensure future success, we are asking you to please take a few minutes to answer the following questions.

1) In the past we have made an effort to create interdisciplinary panels. Do you like this approach or would you prefer panels where all of the presenters are from the same academic discipline?

2) This was the first year UCLA co-sponsored this event. Did you find it useful to meet and hear participants from another university? Should we continue to co-sponsor this event? Do you think it would be useful to open up the conference to include presenters from other UC campuses?

3) The conference was divided into 14 panels. Did you find this scheduling to be overcrowded? If so, in the future would you prefer that we reduce the number of presenters or that we expand the scope of the conference to cover a period of several days?

4) This year the lunch break was designed to encourage students to network and mingle. Did you like this approach or would you prefer to have a keynote speaker during lunch?

5) Non-presenters were required to pay a $5 lunch fee to offset the high costs of catering. Do you think this was a reasonable request? As a graduate student, would you be willing to pay more, perhaps up to $10 in the future?

6) Overall, was there anything that you particularly did not like about the conference and would like to see changed next year?

7) All constructive criticism is welcome. You may use the space on the back for additional comments.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR COOPERATION. PLEASE RETURN TO

Dear Colleague:

The Center for the Study of Women is pleased to announce the annual Mary Wollstonecraft Prize for an outstanding Ph.D. dissertation that focuses on women or gender and makes use of historical materials and methods. The $1,000 prize was endowed by S. Barbara Penny Kanner, a scholar of British women's history and a CSW Research Associate. The award is designed to make doctoral research on women and gender more visible and to assist students at a critical stage in their careers.

We invite you to submit nominations of UCLA graduate students who have completed their dissertations since June 1993, or will do so by June 30, 1994. Applicants from all departments are welcome. Please submit the following:

1) A letter of nomination from the dissertation chair (Please indicate how the dissertation meets the above criteria.)

2) A one-page, single-spaced dissertation abstract

3) The candidate's vita (Please enclose date of filing and of receiving Ph.D., social security number, and address and telephone number where the candidate can be contacted.)

4) One copy of the dissertation.

Materials should be sent to the CSW office, 276 Kinsey, 150405. All submissions must be received by Monday, May 16, 1994. A faculty committee will review the nominations and applicants will be notified by Friday, June 3. If you have questions, please call the Center at x50590.

We hope you will take this opportunity to honor an outstanding graduate student whose work addresses gender issues.

Sincerely,

Kathryn Norberg
Director
The Center for the Study of Women is pleased to announce its competitive travel grant program for UCLA GRADUATE STUDENTS DOING RESEARCH ON WOMEN AND GENDER. The purpose of this program is to assist students with travel expenses related to their research and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences.

Funds will be awarded in the fall, winter and spring quarters. A joint student/faculty committee will review the applications and notify the recipients by the end of each quarter.

APPLICATION DEADLINES

NOVEMBER 15, 1993
FEBRUARY 14, 1994
APRIL 25, 1994

Application Forms and Program Guidelines Are Available at
The Center for the Study of Women
276 Kinsey Hall

The maximum amount a student may be awarded in any one year is $400. Awards may be used only for transportation costs to and from the conference or place of research, and travel must take place within one year of receiving an award. Awards will not be made retroactively to fund travel which has already occurred. Students will receive the funds from CSW as a reimbursement of travel expenses upon submission of an airline ticket stub or other proof of travel costs.

*The Travel Grant Program is funded by the Friends of the CSW.
For an application or further information, please call the CSW at (310) 825-0590.*

TRAVEL GRANTS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

Application Guidelines and Procedures

Travel grants for UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender are available for 1993-1994. The purpose of this program is to assist students with travel expenses related to their research (at either the dissertation or pre-dissertation level) and to enable them to present papers at professional conferences. In this way, the Center hopes to facilitate the academic and career aspirations of its graduate students.

Application deadlines are noted below. A joint student/faculty committee will review the applications and notify the recipients by the end of each quarter.

Application Deadlines

Fall Quarter: November 15, 1993
Winter Quarter: February 14, 1994
Spring Quarter: April 25, 1994

The maximum amount a student may be awarded in any one year is $400 (a student may apply more than once if the total of the separate awards does not exceed this amount). Awards may be used only for transportation costs to and from the conference or place of research. Travel must take place within one year of receiving the award. Awards will not be made retroactively to fund travel which has occurred prior to the time of application. Students will receive the funds from CSW as a reimbursement of travel expenses upon submission of an airline ticket stub or other proof of travel costs.

How To Apply:

Complete the attached Student Application Form and ask a faculty member familiar with you and your work to complete the attached Faculty Evaluation Form. Return these forms to the Center for the Study of Women, 276 Kinsey Hall, together with a Statement of Purpose which should be at least one page in length and include the following:

- A brief description of the research you plan to conduct or an abstract of the paper you will present.
- A discussion of the purpose of your travel proposal in relation to your broader research interests, experience, and goals.
- The significance of your conference paper or research project.
- An outline of your plan of research and/or methodology.
- A brief description of your background in women/gender studies and participation in relevant non-academic activities.

For more information about this program, please contact Edeliza Tumbocon, Center for the Study of Women, 276 Kinsey Hall, (310) 825-0590. We welcome your questions or comments.

THE JOY OF TEACHING UCLA undergraduates first drew the new Director of the Women's Studies Program, Law Professor Christine Littleton, to Women's Studies. "My life in the Law School has been greatly enriched intellectually and politically by my connections with Women's Studies," she says. Since Littleton first came to UCLA in 1983, she has regularly taught "Jurisprudence of Sexual Equality" and "Feminist Theories: Social and Political."

Littleton is the daughter of a Methodist minister and grew up in rural Pennsylvania. She attended Pennsylvania State University where she majored in Education and Theater. "Education," she remarks, "was deemed an appropriate major for a girl." Indeed, she spent three years as a secondary public school teacher in Connecticut before pursuing her interest in theater. She then moved to New York and appeared in Off-Off Broadway theater. To support herself, Littleton took a job as a clerk-typist at the Legal Aid Society in New York City. That was the beginning of her fascination with law.

Littleton decided to abandon the theater for the courtroom and entered Harvard Law School. As a former theater major, she had first wanted to "go to court, to be a litigator." But her interests became more abstract, and she turned to jurisprudence, especially feminist jurisprudence. "At Harvard," Littleton remarks, "I encountered many interesting people, especially feminists, and I spent most of my time working on the Harvard Law Review and the Harvard Women's Law Journal." After graduation, Littleton clerked for the Honorable Warren Ferguson of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Los Angeles.

Her feminism long predates her arrival in Los Angeles. As an undergraduate, she started a feminist underground newspaper. "It was very mild in retrospect!" Littleton laughs. "My decision to pursue law was a natural one," she explains. "As a feminist, the law allows you to do good things for women.” Indeed, Littleton does good things for women in California through her work with the California Women’s Law Center. She is a founding member of this legal collective and the current chair of the Board of Directors. The Center is involved in legislation, public policy and cases involving sexual harassment, pregnancy disability law, reproductive rights and family law. It also writes briefs for such cases and offers an extensive public education and training program.

Littleton thinks that as a lawyer she brings important qualities to the Women’s Studies Program. “Legal theorists,” she observes, “see the strong connections between theory and practice. Theory is to be used,” she says, “not stuck on a shelf. As a lawyer, you have the experience of taking feminism into the courtroom and getting results.”

The Women’s Studies Program will celebrate its twentieth anniversary in 1995, and the new Director is extremely optimistic about its future. “Women’s Studies is stronger than ever before,” Littleton observes, “and we now have more courses per quarter than we ever had. As a matter of fact, we have more courses in one quarter than we did during a whole year when the Program first began!” As head of Women’s Studies, Littleton hopes to develop the program in three areas. She plans to continue the work of former Director Karen Sacks, which focused on increasing diversity in the teaching staff and solidifying connections between Women’s Studies and the UCLA ethnic studies programs. She also intends to build on the work of the Program’s founding Director, Nancy Henley, by continuing to bring more faculty from the professional schools into the Program. Finally, she hopes to see the proposed Ph.D. in Women’s Studies made a reality. “We have an absolutely wonderful undergraduate program,” she observes, “and it is time to create a top-ranked graduate program with the diverse and devoted faculty that we have here at UCLA.”

Emily Apter

Emily Apter joins the French Department as Full Professor this fall. She comes to UCLA from UC Davis along with her husband, the newly appointed chair of the Art History Department, and her nine-month-old son, Nicolas. Her most recent work is a co-edited volume entitled Fetishism as Cultural Discourse (Cornell, 1993). An earlier book (Feminizing the Fetish: Psychoanalysis and Narrative Obsession in Turn-of-the-Century France [Cornell, 1991]) also deals with the concept of fetishism, broadly associated with a feminine culture of masquerade, erotic fixation, and objectification. “This book also develops a critique of misogyny through an examination of men ‘writing as women,’” explains Apter.
committed to public education and finds that the ethnic mix, particularly in a large public university, creates a genuinely interesting climate for learning. "It is important who is in the classroom," she notes. "It shapes my work." She believes that students in public institutions take less for granted and often have more of a stake in what they learn. "I was intellectually reinvigorated by my students at UC Davis," she notes. "They gave me a reason to do my job."

At the same time, Apter is concerned about the backlash against recent tendencies in feminist theory. The backlash is not only within the academy, but also among feminists themselves where one often finds "disunity, lack of optimism, and the risk of institutional marginalization." She believes that feminism within the curriculum needs to be rethought and asks whether or not we should move in the direction of integration rather than compartmentalization.

FEMINIST LEGAL SCHOLAR JOINS UCLA LAW SCHOOL

GILLIAN LESTER, WHO joins the faculty of Law this winter, brings an unusual background and wide interests to her new position. A native of British Columbia, she majored in Psychology at the University of British Columbia and did graduate work in experimental psychology. She ran a laboratory at UBC and published articles on the sexual receptivity of hamsters and the effect of hormones on the sex life of the female rat. In 1986, she abandoned psychology and rodents for law.

At that time, she entered the law school of the University of Toronto. Long a feminist, Lester believed (and still does) that "the law is a powerful tool for anyone with a progressive agenda." Public health law, labor law (especially collective bargaining) and the legal position of the disabled are a part of Lester's agenda.

Currently she is working on a Stanford Law School doctoral dissertation entitled "Self-Managed Temporary Agencies in the Culture of Contingency." The thesis focuses on the temporary worker, a fast-growing segment of the work force and one which is predominantly female. Clerical workers make up sixty percent of the temporarily employed, and the vast majority of these workers are, of course, women. Lester is interested in looking at the implications of this kind of work for the shape of the American economy. She will also survey psychological and sociological literature on how the temporary workers themselves view their work. She argues that temporary workers are not necessarily individuals who seek or desire such insecure employment. "Sixty percent of these workers work everyday, and sixty percent are in the process of seeking permanent employment," she observes.

As a legal scholar, Lester focuses on the ability of those temporary workers to bargain collectively. She plans to end her study by speculating on how conditions can be created that provide these workers with greater security and better working conditions, including benefits. She suggests that the union hiring hall may provide a good model.

Being Canadian, she finds American law and politics interesting. In the United States, labor law is, she observes, "less inclusive" and the political culture more committed to a free market economy. She thinks that her work on temporary employment and collective bargaining would have impact here. She looks forward to teaching at the UCLA Law School where there are "so many feminists. When I looked in the catalog," she says, "I gasped because there were so many feminist, legal scholars whose work I had cited."

Women take center stage in new professor's work

Judith Rosen is a newly appointed Assistant Professor in the Department of English. She comes to UCLA from UC Berkeley where she recently completed her Ph.D. Rosen's current work explores theatricality and female identity in Victorian culture, focusing not only on well-known works by Brontë and Eliot, but also on domestic conduct manuals, stage performances and working-class "penny magazines," where the actress is often a heroine. "Increasing anxiety about women's entry into the public sphere comes to crystallize around the figure of the actress," Rosen explains, "but it is that figure's dual position, as type and antitype of 'true womanhood,' that makes it particularly fascinating and helps explain its widespread use both in constructing and contesting new, politically strategic models of female subjectivity."

Rosen's interest in theater is not only academic. While working on her dissertation at UC Berkeley, she acted in a number of plays and even cross dressed in amateur productions of Epicene and Arden of Faversham. Although a late comer to academic feminism, Rosen has always been a feminist and an activist. She grew up in rural Connecticut where she "chopped wood and shoveled manure just like the boys." Encouraged by her parents, both English professors at the University of Connecticut, she always expected to have a career.

After graduating from Harvard with a major in History and Literature, Rosen worked as a writer for Let's Go Europe, and journeyed through France and Spain searching out hotels, restaurants and sights for budget-conscious travelers. "It was energizing and exciting, and also the most gruelling job I have ever had," Rosen recalls. It was only after a year of working with rare clocks and scientific instruments for Christie's in New York and a year at the Viking-Penguin Press that she decided to return to graduate school.

While at UC Berkeley, Rosen helped to revive the English Graduate Student Association, with amazing results. Working with departmental committees, the EGA succeeded in eliminating some...
Feminist Theory Series Welcomes Fregoso & Clark

In November, the University of Minnesota Press will publish The Bronze Screen: Chicana and Chicano Film Culture by Rosa Linda Fregoso. Fregoso, an Associate Professor of Women’s Studies and Chicano Studies at UC Davis, received her Ph.D. in Comparative Studies from UC San Diego. She has published numerous articles on the Chicana in film. She is the co-editor of Miradas de mujeres (Third Woman Press, forthcoming) and author of “Cultural Identity in Zoot Suit,” in Theory and Society (Fall, 1993) and “Chicana Film Practices: Confronting the ‘many-headed demon of oppression,’” in Chicanas and Film (University of Minnesota Press, 1992). A native of Texas, Fregoso was a TV producer and reporter before embarking on her academic career. Her presentation, “From Illegal to Legal Subject: Border Construction and Reconstruction,” is scheduled for Monday, October 25, at 5 pm in Royce 314. The public is welcome.

requirements for the Ph.D. and broadening others to reflect the field’s shifting boundaries, thus helping in the process to cut the average time-to-degree, which had grown to nine years. In 1992, she was involved in organizing Boundaries in Question, a three-day interdisciplinary conference for feminist graduate students and local activists. “Comparative literature students, union organizers and soil scientists feared they wouldn’t have much to say to one another,” she recalls, “but the debates and discussions were wonderful. Being able to see the value of feminism across disciplines as well as racial and class boundaries is vital,” Rosen says.

Although Rosen believes that feminist approaches to literature are becoming more inclusive in terms of race and class, she contends that there is still a long way to go. “Whereas ‘race’ is becoming a central term in feminist interpretation, it is often used as a catchword, and we haven’t even begun really to look at issues of class.”

Feminist Theory Series begins its second year

THE FEMINIST THEORY Series is organized by Professors Janet Bergstrom (Film), Anne Mellor (English) and Valerie Smith (English/Afro-American Studies). The series brings prominent feminist theorists to UCLA and constitutes a platform for feminist theorizing. The aim is to enrich the work of CSW scholars and expose the broader campus community to feminist approaches in the Humanities.

In its first year, 1992-1993, the Feminist Theory Series focused on women and film. Among the speakers were E. Ann Kaplan, Mary Ann Doane, Jacqueline Rose and Trinh T. Minh-ha. Presentations dealt with fetal images in recent films, cross-dressing and Marcel Duchamp, multiculturalism in the cinema, south African writer Bessie Head, and the feminine and visuality in Busby Berkeley.

In 1993-1994, the series will focus on feminist theories of race and gender. Presentations will deal with the Mexican-American border in film, African-American women on stage, new theoretical approaches to Black women’s history, multicultural feminism, and post-colonial perspectives on culture. Among the speakers will be Rosa Linda Fregoso (Women’s Studies and Chicano Studies, UC Davis), Vévè Clark (African and Caribbean Literatures, UC Berkeley), Gayatri Spivak (English/Comparative Literature, Columbia University), Ella Shohat (Film, CUNY Staten Island), and Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham (African-American Studies, Harvard).
woman who was Indian, and Sharpe went to see Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak, one of the most important feminist proponents of post-colonial criticism. Sharpe had already decided that her graduate career would be "feminist," but she now resolved "to deal with colonialism in some way or another." She proceeded to enroll in the comparative literature program, having ironically "dropped out of English in the first semester as an undergraduate. I liked literature," she remarks, "but I was restless in an English Department; my interests were more interdisciplinary, more varied." As a graduate student, she hoped to work on neo-colonialism in Cuba, but she changed her mind while reading E. M. Forster's A Passage to India.

Indeed, her book, Allegories of Empire, does contain a chapter on Forster's novel, but it also deals with texts as varied as Jane Eyre and the popular TV series The Jewel and the Crown. In her work, Sharpe uses feminist theories of race and sexual difference to analyze racism and colonial discourse. Much of the book deals with the Mutiny of 1857 and the myths that it spawned of white women being savagely raped by seditious Indians. These stories, though quickly discredited, continued to haunt the British imagination, and her book traces how notions of (violated) Victorian womanhood are imbedded in colonial dominance.

Sharpe is now working on a study of Caribbean literature. Her new book will focus on the slave woman and how race and gender are articulated within the discourse of slavery. She uses not just literary texts, but also historical documents, continuing the interdisciplinary approach of her first book. Sharpe insists that feminist theory must

JENNY SHARPE COMES TO THE UCLA English Department via Bombay, Beirut and Austin, Texas and after a series of jobs and positions as rich and varied as her intellectual interests and her heritage. Daughter of Anglo-Indian parents, Sharpe grew up in Bombay where her father worked for Air India. There she attended a Catholic school and received a western-style education. But her parents filled her with "stories of an Indian past," which served as an inspiration for her new book Allegories of Empire: The Figure of Woman in the Colonial Text (Minneapolis, 1993).

When her father changed jobs, the family moved to Beirut where Sharpe graduated from high school. She then became a flight attendant, married an American and moved to Princeton, New Jersey. After working as a sales clerk in Woolworths and an accounting clerk for a Cadillac dealer, she decided to continue her education.

Sharpe enrolled in the University of Texas at Austin largely because it was "so affordable." There she wrote her senior thesis on the gentrification of a Black neighborhood in Austin and considered majoring in urban anthropology. But fate intervened. One day, a secretary told her that the English Department had hired a

UC COUNCIL OF WOMEN'S AFFAIRS ANNOUNCES CONFERENCE
The UC Council of Women's Programs is sponsoring a Transnational Perspective from California conference. The conference is being held at the Department of Women's Studies. The conference is open to the public and the Workplace, and the Academic registration is October 15. All inquiries should be directed to the conference organizers.

ART EXHIBIT AT ARMAND HODGE GALLERY
"THE ART OF ATTACK: SOCIAL COMMENTARY" One of the first exhibitions to explore the social and cultural impact of art and cultural expression, this exhibition presents the UCLA Wight Art Gallery and the Grunwald Center with the Armand Hammer Museum of Art. The exhibition features works by George Cruikshank, the English caricaturist whose work continues to be influential today. The exhibition also features works by Georges Seurat, Los Angeles-based artist, and Robbie Conal, who presents "The Art of Attack: Social Commentary," which will be presented alongside prints, posters, and other graphic art. The exhibition is open to the public and admission is free. For more information, please call the Wight Art Gallery.

FEMINIST PERFORMANCE CONFRONT THE ART WORLD "GUERRILLA GIRLS LIVE!" November 5, Friday, in conjunction with the exhibition "The Art of Attack: Social Commentary," the Guerrilla Girls will be presented by the Women's Studies Department. The Guerrilla Girls are known for their work in the art world. This exhibit offers a comparative view of art from high fashion to the abuses of power. Prints by the Guerrilla Girls will be presented alongside prints, posters, and other graphic art. The exhibition is open to the public and admission is free. For more information, please call the Wight Art Gallery.

PHILOSOPHY, FEMINISM AND "FUTURE PEOPLE"

SEANA SHIFFRIN, NEW Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy, has a unique approach to the ethics of procreation. She is interested in the way we think about "future people," and she asks what justifications there are for procreation. "While there are a few sociological studies investigating parents' reasons for procreating, philosophers have not really asked this question. Even the reasons that people give for not procreating are framed from the perspective of those people who already exist rather than the perspective of "future people,"" notes Shiffrin. Her forthcoming book, Consent and the Morality of Procreation, will have implications for such issues as surrogacy, genetic engineering and cloning. Not surprisingly, her ideas have met with various reactions -- from interest to consternation to downright hostility.

Shiffrin grew up in Los Angeles and comes from a family of feminists. Her mother is a Women's Studies Professor and her father is a Professor of Law. "My parents are my good friends," she says, "and my mother has been one of the most influential women in my life." Shiffrin has had a long involvement with feminist issues. At UC Berkeley, she wrote her undergraduate honors essay on pornography in which she argued that the kind of restrictions that feminists have placed upon pornography (e.g., the St. Paul regulations) are not only consonant with but required by liberalism, a position later adopted by other feminist scholars.

She then went on to do her graduate work at Oxford University as a Marshall Scholar. "The move from Berkeley to Oxford was wrenching," recalls Shiffrin. She found the college to be very misogynistic and feminist consciousness among women more latent than actively voiced. Being outspoken was problematic. "The faculty, by and large, is still committed to an all-male enclave, and women threaten this view of the world," she observes. Needless to say, her feminism only deepened during her stay at Oxford.

A Visiting Lecturer at UCLA last year, Shiffrin is excited about her appointment in the Department of Philosophy. She is committed to public education and finds the students very interesting and motivated. In her spare time, Shiffrin is pursuing a law degree at Harvard Law School. She is interested in jurisprudence and considers law "a powerful tool for those with a progressive social agenda."

HISTORIAN STUDIES WORLD OF HIGH ENERGY PHYSICS

WHEN SHARON TRAWEK was a junior math major at UC Berkeley, her advisor told her that women did not become scientists, "they become elementary school teachers." In Traweek's case, the advisor was both right and wrong. In January 1994, Traweek joins the UCLA Department of History as an Associate Professor where she will teach an array of courses. And she has an ongoing interest in science instruction from kindergarten to Grade 12. But she is also a scientist, albeit a social scientist, who observes nature from the perspective of a feminist, cultural historian and anthropologist.

Seven
Feminist Research Seminar Adopt New Format

SINCE ITS INCEPTION IN 1984, the Center for the Study of Women has sponsored a multi-disciplinary seminar where members of the CSW community share their scholarship and exchange ideas. In 1993-1994, the Feminist Research Seminar will adopt a new format. The papers will be predistributed in order to facilitate discussion. Seminar participants will be expected to read the papers carefully, and two faculty members will be designated to lead the discussion. These discussants will come from departments different from that of the presenter in order to assure a multi-disciplinary approach.

Presenters this year are Professors Carrie Menkel-Meadow (Law), Katherine Hayles (English), Anne Mellor (English), Ellen Dubois (History), Sharon Traweek (History), Valerie Smith (English/Afro-American Studies) and Nancy Hanley (Psychology). Presentations will deal with the impact of feminism on American jurisprudence, gender in cyberspace, the “female Shakespeare” Joanna Baillie, prominent suffragist Harriot Stanton Blatch, the gendered production of knowledge, and feminist attitudes and women's lives.

In order to receive the papers presented in the Seminar, it is necessary to join. The membership fee is $25 and covers the cost of duplication. There is no charge for graduate students or CSW Affiliated and Research Scholars. To join the Seminar or to obtain further information, please call the CSW office at (310) 825-0590.
CSW ANNOUNCES NEW PROGRAM WITH FOCUS ON GENDER AND SCIENCE

This year will see the birth of a new program at the Center for the Study of Women—the Gender and Science Project organized by Professors Sandra Harding (Philosophy), Katherine Hayles (English) and Sharon Traweek (History). All three are relatively new additions to the UCLA faculty. Sandra Harding is a world-renowned specialist in epistemology and the philosophy of science and the author of several works including The Science Question in Feminism (Cornell, 1986), Whose Science? Whose Knowledge? Thinking From Women’s Lives (Cornell, 1991) and editor of a new collection entitled, The ‘Racial’ Economy of Science: Towards a Democratic Future (Indiana, 1993).

The Gender and Science Project is designed to bring together faculty and graduate students interested in the intersections of gender, race and science. The organizers will cooperate closely with the Center for Cultural Studies of Science, Technology and Medicine and will organize speakers and seminars on issues such as: When does science unwittingly serve racist and sexist ends? How can it be reshaped to accommodate ethnic and gender difference? How do national cultures and ethnic bias surface in science? How do scientific texts themselves bear the marks of culture? How does science exclude women and minorities, and how can this be changed?

The organizers hope to bring humanists and scientists together. They also plan to draw on the rich resources of southern California and involve scholars from other UC campuses and local institutions. Through speakers, seminars and informal lunches, the Gender and Science Project should create a network of researchers and an ongoing discussion among scientists and feminists.

On the schedule for spring are Naomi Scheman, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Minnesota, and Elisabeth Lloyd, Professor of Philosophy at UC Berkeley. Scheman will give two lectures: “Privileged Marginality or: Can Feminists Breed in Captivity?” and “Closets, Margins and Forms of Life: A Feminist Reading of Wittgenstein.” Lloyd’s presentation is entitled, “Objectivity and Philosophy of Science: Feminist Critiques.” Anyone interested in participating in the Gender and Science Project should call the CSW office at (310) 825-0590 in order to receive announcements of events and invitations to Project functions. Participation is not limited to the UCLA community.

AND WOMEN WILL LEAD US: STEERING HIGHER EDUCATION INTO THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY
January 21-23 [4 pm Friday-12 noon Sunday, UCLA Sunset Village]
This conference will assess the status of women in higher education today and develop recommendations for policy changes that will insure that higher education in California meets the needs of all its women in the next century.
Organized by Norma Rice, Project Manager, The Curriculum Integration Project.
Sponsored by CSW.
For information, please call (310) 825-0590.

GRADUATE STUDENT RESEARCH CONFERENCE
March 4, Friday [9 am-5 pm, Royce 314]
UCLA and USC graduate students conducting research on women and gender will present their work at a series of interdisciplinary workshops. A reception will follow.
Organized and sponsored by CSW.
Co-sponsored by the University of Southern California.
For information, please call (310) 825-0590.

WOMEN IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE: NATIONALISM, FEMINISM AND POSSIBILITIES FOR THE FUTURE
April 8-10
[7 pm Friday-12 noon Sunday, Royce 314]
This international conference will examine how the governmental changes in Central and Eastern Europe have often occurred at the expense of women and will explore the relationship between nationalism and feminism.
Organized by Professor Frances Olsen, UCLA School of Law. Sponsored by CSW.
For information, please call (310) 825-0590.
Feminist Perspectives on Race in Los Angeles

Professor Karen Sacks, Anthropology and Women’s Studies, and Professor Vilma Ortiz, Sociology and Chicana/o Studies, are in the process of forming an informal reading/discussion group that will focus on issues of race and gender. Various approaches will be utilized including discussion of specific books, presentation of working papers, and even plays and field trips. The goal is to educate, sensitize and develop community. The group will have its initial meeting in October and plans to meet once a month. It is open to all interested faculty and students. For further information, please contact the CSW at (310) 825-0590.

Sharon Trawee

try to unify these themes and place them within a comparative context.

Trawee believes that UCLA and Los Angeles are good sites for this marriage to occur. “The awareness of global transformations, the diversity of the community and the sheer number of scholars interested in figuring out science and technology” make UCLA, she says, a good home for her. “Demographic changes are particularly clear in Los Angeles, and the pull of other cultures, especially those on the Pacific Rim, is very strong.”

Whether in Los Angeles or Tokyo, Trawee believes the time is ripe for a new approach to the study of science. The kind of history of science that Trawee endorses takes into account gender, race and differences in culture.

“Today,” she observes, “most scientists and engineers are white men from North America and Europe, but their proportion is declining, both inside and beyond the United States.”

UCLA and USC Co-Sponsor the Fourth Annual CSW Graduate Conference

On March 4, the UCLA Center for the Study of Women will welcome feminist faculty and graduate students from the University of Southern California. The occasion is the annual CSW Graduate Student Research Conference. For the past four years, it has provided a forum at which approximately thirty UCLA graduate students working on issues of women and gender have presented their work. This year, the USC Center for Feminist Research has joined the CSW in organizing this one-day joint conference for feminist graduate students from both campuses.

For the past four years, the UCLA Center for the Study of Women has provided programs and grants to help feminist graduate students navigate the academic waters. In addition to the annual conference, the CSW sponsors special events dealing with issues such as coping with academic stress and writing grant proposals. The CSW also administers a small graduate travel grant competition through which many UCLA graduate students have received grants to travel to research collections, libraries or conferences. This year, the CSW initiated a monthly informal luncheon at which graduate students can meet to exchange information and discuss concerns.

The USC Center for Feminist Research (previously the Institute for the Study of Women and Men), established in 1987, grew out of the USC undergraduate Women's Studies Program—the Program for the Study of Women and Men in Society. Like the CSW, USC's Center for Feminist Research supports and encourages feminist research through regular faculty research seminars and an affiliated scholars program. The Center for Feminist Research at USC has also organized important conferences such as "Politics '92: Who Speaks for All the People" and "Women and Reason" (1992). The Center also

- GRADUATE CONFERENCE Continued on page Two
Dressing the Renaissance Woman

Friday, May 6, the UCLA Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies and the UCLA Center for the Study of Women will jointly sponsor a conference entitled, "Dressing the Renaissance Woman." The conference will be held in the UCLA Faculty Center from 8:30 am-5:30 pm.

The Renaissance was the first era in European history since Roman antiquity in which there was a concern for fashion. It was also a period in which there was great technical progress in the construction and elaboration of clothing, which then became enormously costly--frequently a major household expense. "Dressing the Renaissance Woman" will enable scholars from a variety of disciplines to investigate the meaning of this elaborate Renaissance dress, concentrating on female dress, since the Renaissance was an era in which women's economic power and personal independence became increasingly subjected to patriarchal structures and ideology at the same time that their external adornment became more complex and expensive. The conference will thus address a number of issues such as what women wore and why, how female dress was visually depicted, how it was verbally represented in the many intense discussions that took place on the role and meaning of female dress, and how women viewed themselves as makers as well as wearers of clothing. The conference will conclude with an explanation of how Renaissance female dress is interpreted and constructed for film, television and theater audiences today.
ON WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, from 12-1 pm in Kinsey 288, the Center for the Study of Women will feature Visiting Scholar Marie Harvey as part of its lunch series. Harvey is Research Director for the Center for the Study of Women in Society, and Associate Professor of Public Health in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Oregon. The title of her talk is “Attitudes About Condoms and Condom Use Among African-American University Students.” During 1993-1994, Professor Harvey will spend her sabbatical leave at the UCLA Center for the Study of Women working collaboratively with Dr. Linda Beckman of the School of Public Health on a study of condom use among African-American college students.

A longtime specialist in women’s health and reproductive issues, Harvey has published articles on childbirth methods, the contraceptive sponge, and prenatal care. A graduate of UCLA’s School of Public Health, Harvey has recently begun to study alcoholism and its relation to contraceptive use and AIDS. Her presentation will deal with data from a questionnaire administered to 300 students at a predominantly black university. Harvey and Beckman chose to study African-American students because people of color, especially those in urban areas, have been disproportionately affected by the HIV/AIDS epidemic. In 1992, African-Americans and Hispanics/Latinos accounted for just under half of the males and more than three-quarters of the females diagnosed and reported with AIDS in the United States. The goal is to determine how men and women differ in their attitude toward condom use and “safe sex.”

COMMEMORATING THE ANNIVERSARY OF ROE V WADE

EACH YEAR IN JANUARY, THE CSW features speakers whose work deals with reproductive rights. This year there will be two opportunities to commemorate the anniversary of Roe v Wade. On Wednesday, January 12, Abby Liebman, Executive Director of the California Women’s Law Center, will speak on “Reproductive Rights: Where Have We Been? Where Are We Going?” The talk will be held from 12-1 pm in Kinsey 288.

On Thursday, January 13, Professor Rayna Rapp from the Department of Anthropology at the New School for Social Research in New York City will give a lecture entitled, “Chromosome Stories: Prenatal Diagnosis and the Facts of Life.” Rapp’s work grew out of a decade of research, “…watching how genetic counselors (a new group of female health professionals) explain issues of genetic counseling and prenatal testing to women, especially women from diverse ethnic, race, class and religious backgrounds.” Rapp’s extensive research examines many of the different yet related aspects of genetic counseling and testing, and she brings socio-cultural research to a field that has been dominated by the medical profession. “Amniocentesis means different things to different people, I would not argue against it… but I would say that people need to be far better informed about what disabilities are. People have very little consciousness about the variety of disabilities that exist, and when we talk about prenatal screening, there is an assumption that a child with a disability is unwanted.” Of course, genetic counseling is intimately linked to reproductive rights and abortion, and Rapp is interested in the point at which reproductive rights and disability rights intersect. The lecture will be in Royce 314 from 4-6 pm. All are welcome.

THE UCLA FILM AND TELEVISION Archive presents SCARY WOMEN, a multi-faceted program that addresses the role of the female monster in American film. The program’s main event is a symposium dedicated to the critical consideration of films which feature women as menacing characters. Frightening females in horror films have been brides or daughters of gothic monsters, satirically possessed, sexually hypnagogic, and reproductively aberrant. They have wreaked nuclear-powered revenge, murdered from the grave and ruined senior proms. The program also features these creatures in a film series that chronicles the history of female monsters and fiends from classic horror and science fiction to the contemporary horror/thriller.

With the support of the Center for the Study of Women, the Archive Research and Study Center will sponsor an all-day symposium devoted to the consideration of the filmic scary woman. This event, scheduled for Saturday, January 29, will feature some of the most important figures in feminist film scholarship. Vivian Sobchack (Associate Dean, Department of Film and Television, UCLA) will discuss what made women monstrous in the fifties science-fiction films "Attack of the Fifty Foot Woman" and "Leech Woman." Rhona Berenstein (Assistant Professor, Program in Film Studies, UC Irvine) will analyze the not-so-
GOING PUBLIC:
WOMEN
PUBLISHING
MODERN FRANCE

ON FEBRUARY 4-5, THE CENTER for the Study of Women will host a conference entitled "Going Public:
Women and Publishing in Early Modern France."
The conference will bring together feminist scholars from across the United States to analyze one of the most distinctive features of French literary culture: the prominence of women writers. Under the Old Regime, French women "went public," that is they took their private thoughts into the public sphere via published memoirs, novels, judicial documents and scientific tracts. Just how and why this occurred is the subject of the conference. Participants will examine the social and political conditions that encouraged—or discouraged—women from participating in the "Republic of Letters". Celebrated authors like Madeleine de Scudéry will be analyzed but so too will less well-known writers like Felicité de Choisel-Meuse.
Even common guildswomen and midwives who published their thoughts will receive attention.

Funding for the conference is provided by the Florence Gould Foundation with additional support from the UCLA
Center for 17th- and 18th-Century
Studies and the Center for the Study of Women.
Conference papers will be published by Cornell University Press.

The public is cordially invited to attend "Going Public." To receive the complete
conference schedule and reserve a place, please contact the UCLA
Center for the Study of Women at (310) 825-0590.

Feminist Theory Series: Highlights for the Winter Quarter

Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak
January 27, Thursday
(7:30-9:30 pm, Royce 314)

Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak's lecture "Thinking Women Together" is an important addition to the CSW's Feminist Theory Series roster. Spivak's work in post-colonial theory (she identifies Marxism and feminism as two of her main concerns) has been integral to its formation as a major tenant of critical theory in the postmodern era. Spivak is author of Imaginary Maps (forthcoming), Outside in the Teaching Machine (1993) and Thinking Academic Freedom in Gendered Post-Coloniality (1992) as well as many other important works in the field of critical theory. She is Professor of English and Comparative Literature and Adjunct Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University. Spivak's talk is co-sponsored by the Critical Studies Program and is free and open to the public.

Ella Shohat
March 10, Thursday
(5-7 pm, Melnitz 1422)

Ella Shohat's talk "Unthinking Eurocentrism: Toward a Multi-Cultural Feminism" will be a 'sneak preview' into some important aspects of her new book. Ella Shohat is author of the forthcoming book Unthinking Eurocentrism: Multi-Cultural Studies in the Media Age (co-authored with Robert Stam) and author of Israeli Cinema: East/West and the Politics of Representation (1989). Shohat's impressive body of work has established her as one of the foremost feminist theorists on colonialism, cinema, identity and the Middle East. She is Professor of Film, Theater, Women's Studies and Cultural Studies at CUNY-College of Staten Island. Her presentation is free and open to the public.

Announcements

Women's History Month Reception
We're having another party! The CSW celebrates Women's History Month with its annual reception on March 1 from 4-6 pm in Kinsey 288. All are welcome! Please RSVP to the Center at (310) 825-0590.

Feminism, Race and Class reading and discussion group welcomes all faculty and students. The group meets every two weeks from 4-6 pm in Kinsey 286. The next meeting will be on January 19, and the reading is the prose section from Cherrie Moraga's The Lost Generation. Readings are on reserve in Women's Studies, Chicano Studies, Sociology and History.

Las Doñas Group Highlights CSW in Their Annual Program
Las Doñas, a "friend-raising" group of women alumnae, is highlighting the CSW in their annual program, "Morning at UCLA." The program is scheduled for March 24 from 9 am-1 pm at the Sunset Village Conference Center on the UCLA campus. Various CSW faculty will be speaking. For reservations and information, please contact Janet Stitz, co-chair, at (818) 883-8168.

Congratulations!

Anne K. Mellor (English) received a grant of $100,572 from the National Endowment for the Humanities to direct a summer seminar entitled, "Gender and Romanticism."

Kathryn Norberg (History) received a grant of $20,300 from the Florence Gould Foundation for a conference entitled, "Going Public: Women and Publishing in Early Modern France." (See article in this issue.)

Karen E. Rowe (English) received $25,000 from the Office of the President to continue her Curriculum and Writing Integration Project (CWIP) which provides seminars for Writing Programs Faculty.

Patricia Greenfield (Psychology) and Catherine Raess (Post-Doctoral fellow in Applied Human Development) received a grant of $11,259 from UCLA's Urban Education Studies Center (UESC) Seed Grant Program for their project entitled, "The Presence of Cultural Values Among Teachers, Students, and Parents, and Integrating Different Cultural Values in the Classroom Through Intervention Workshops."
ON JANUARY 21-23, THE CSW will sponsor a symposium entitled, "And Women Will Lead Us: Steering Higher Education into the 21st-Century." California community leaders and university administrators will come together at UCLA's Sunset Canyon Conference Center to discuss how higher education can meet the needs of women in the 21st-century. Discussion will focus on higher education’s need to work collaboratively with the community and develop strategies appropriate to a more diverse society. In a series of workshops, community leaders and administrators will develop strategies and recommend policies that will make the university more responsive to the needs of the community and a changing urban environment.

The symposium was organized by Norma Rice (Coordinator of the Curriculum Transformation Projects) and Professors Karen E. Rowe (English) and Helen Astin (Education). Featured speakers will include: State Assemblywoman Marguerite Archie-Hudson; Alison Bernstein, Director of Education and Culture at the Ford Foundation; Claudia Mitzel-Kernan, Vice Chancellor of UCLA's Graduate Division; Blenda Wilson, President of Cal State Northridge; Donna Shavlik, Director of Women and Higher Education, American Association of Colleges; Joyce Justus, Assistant Vice President, University of California, Systemwide. For further information or to register, please call the CSW at (310) 825-0590.

Proctor and Schiebinger Launch New Gender And Science Program

"What Causes Cancer? A Political History of Recent Debates"

Is cancer research shaped by politics? In the first event sponsored by the new Gender and Science Program, Robert Proctor, Historian of Science at Penn State, will argue that it does. In a forthcoming book entitled The Great Cancer Wars, he shows how twentieth century debates over cancer causation have mirrored political debates over gender and the workplace. Proctor has found that left-leaning researchers have pointed to a hazardous workplace as the source of cancer, while conservative scholars have preferred to attribute cancer to lifestyle, infectious agents, or genetics. In the nineteenth century, studies of cancer focused on women's cancer, but during this century, the rise of lung and other cancers among men—caused by exposure to what are now known as indoor air pollutants, for example—served to focus attention way from women's cancer.

Genetics is the link between Proctor's current and previous research. His first book Racial Hygiene: Medicine Under the Nazis (Harvard, 1988) traced how biomedical science came to serve the racial policies of Nationalist Socialism. His second book, Value- Free Science? Purity and Power in Modern Knowledge (Harvard, 1991) also deals with the intersections between politics and science. His new research, funded by the National Center for Human Genome Research of the NIH, again looks at how government, industry and research biases shape biomedical research.

Proctor will speak on Friday, January 26, from 12-2 pm in the Law School, Room 2445. The title of his talk is "What Causes Cancer? A Political History of Recent Debates." His presentation is co-sponsored by the UCLA Center for Cultural Studies of Science, Technology and Medicine and is open to the public.

"The Gendered Ape: Gender in Scientific Culture"

Londa Schiebinger, Professor of History and Women's Studies at Pennsylvania State University, analyzes the impact of gender on science. The question of women engaging in science is not just a question of equality or "manpower" (having enough scientists to sharpen a chosen nation's competitive edge—it is a question of knowledge. Only recently have we begun to appreciate that who does science affects the kind of science that gets done. Schiebinger's work investigates how the politics of participation mold the natural sciences and human knowledge in general. How has our knowledge of nature been influenced by political struggles determining who is included in science and who is excluded, which projects are pursued and which ignored, whose experiences are validated and whose are not, and who stands to gain in terms of wealth or well-being and who does not? Schiebinger's new book, Nature's Body: Gender in the Making of Modern Science (Beacon, 1993), documents telling case studies of how gender has molded modern science by ascribing (hetero)sexuality to the plant kingdom, casting sexually and racially charged taxonomic terms, such as Mammalia and "Caucasian," and imputing to female primate the modest demeanor of English matrons but to males, wild fantasies of interspecies rape.

Schiebinger will speak on Monday, January 31, from 12-2 pm in Bunche Hall, Room 6275. The title of her talk is "The Gendered Ape: Gender in Scientific Culture." The event is co-sponsored by the UCLA Center for Cultural Studies of Science, Technology and Medicine and is open to the public.

Gender and Science Program Announces Workshop Series

The new Gender and Science Program, organized by Professors Sandra Harding (Philosophy), Katherine Hayles (English) and Sharon Traweek (History), will sponsor a series of informal workshops on gender issues in science, technology and medicine during the spring quarter of 1994. "At this moment in the history, philosophy, sociology, anthropology and political economy of science, technology and medicine," the organizers ask, "what are (or should be) the most challenging theoretical issues about gender?" The goal of the discussions will be to explore the intersections of science, race and gender and to create a community of scholars with common interests. Topics to be discussed will include scientific "culture" in different national contexts and the impact of postmodernism on scientific studies.

This series of five workshops will begin on Wednesday, April 6, from 4-5:30 pm in Kinsey 288 and will continue on alternate Wednesdays through June 1st. The topic of the April 6th discussion will be "Science, Technology and Medicine as Cultural Production." Faculty, staff, students and friends are all invited to participate in what promises to be a stimulating program. The format is informal and refreshments will be served. For more information, please contact the Center for the Study of Women at (310) 825-0590.
DRESSING THE RENAISSANCE WOMAN

Friday, May 6, the UCLA Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies and the UCLA Center for the Study of Women will jointly sponsor a conference entitled, "Dressing the Renaissance Woman." The conference will be held in the UCLA Faculty Center from 8:30 am-5:30 pm.

The Renaissance was the first era in European history since Roman antiquity in which there was a concern for fashion. It was a period in which there was great technical progress in the construction and elaboration of clothing, which then became enormously costly—frequently a major household expense. “Dressing the Renaissance Woman” will enable scholars from a variety of disciplines to investigate the meaning of this elaborate Renaissance dress, concentrating on female dress, since the Renaissance was an era in which women’s economic power and personal independence became increasingly subjected to patriarchal structures and ideology at the same time that their external adornment became more complex and expensive. The conference will thus address a number of issues such as what women wore and why, how female dress was visually depicted, how it was verbally represented in the many intense discussions that took place on the role and meaning of female dress, and how women viewed themselves as makers as well as wearers of clothing. The conference will conclude with an explanation of how Renaissance female dress is interpreted and constructed for film, television and theater audiences today.

Conference speakers will include: Carole Frick (History, UCLA), Mela Hoyt-Heydon (Theater, Fullerton), Christy Junkerman (Art, Stanford), Ann Rosaiind Jones (Comparative Literature, Smith College), Sharon King (Comparative Literature, UCLA), Claire McEachern (English, UCLA), Kathryn Norberg (History, UCLA) and Peter Stallybrass (English, University of Pennsylvania).

In conjunction with the conference, the UCLA University Research Library is sponsoring an exhibit of Renaissance costume books in its main floor display cases from March 29-May 8.

For further information or to obtain a brochure, please contact Debby Kenne at the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies at (310) 206-3113.
Women in Central and Eastern Europe: Nationalism, Feminism and Possibilities for the Future

On April 8-10, prominent feminists from Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria, England and the United States will gather at UCLA to discuss the status of women in central and Eastern Europe today. Public presentations on Saturday, April 9, will focus on the status of women’s participation in the new democracies and the impact of recent changes on women’s labor and reproductive rights. Special attention will be paid to nationalism—its impact on women’s rights and women’s impact on it.

Speakers will include:

Petra Bläss, Chair of the commission that organized the elections in East Germany which led to unification; Member of the Bundestag (German Federal Parliament); founding member of the Independent Women’s Association of the former East Germany; Member of the parliamentary commissions for labor market and social affairs, women’s affairs and abortion rights.

Penka Angelova, Professor of German and Slavic at the St. Cyril and Method University, Veliko Tarnovo, Bulgaria; Visiting Professor at the University of Wisconsin at Shumen, Bulgaria; Founder of the Elias-Caenetti Research Center in Rousse, Bulgaria.

Krisztina Morvai, Hungarian lawyer specializing in civil rights, constitutional law and feminist legal theory; Fulbright Visiting Scholar at the Law School of the University of Wisconsin, Madison; Former clerk at the Supreme Court of Hungary.

Eva Malek-Lewy, Co-founder of the East German Unabhängiger Frauenverband (UVF) and of the first "Netzwerk politikwissenschaftlicher und politisch arbeitender Frauen" in Germany; Research Fellow at the American Institute for Contemporary German Studies, Washington D.C.

Nicola Lacey, Law Fellow and Lecturer at Oxford University; Legal and political theorist specializing in women in Europe; Author of State Punishment: Political Principles and Community Values (1988), Reconstructing Criminal Law: Critical Perspectives on Crime and the Criminal Process (1990) and Politics and Community (with Elizabeth Frazer, 1993).

Hermine G. De Soto, Socio-cultural anthropologist; Honorary Research Fellow in Women’s Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison; Co-editor of The Curtain Rises: Rethinking Culture, Ideology, and the State in Eastern Europe (1993).

The public sessions will take place on Saturday, April 9, from 9 am-6 pm in the UCLA Law School, room 1430, with a continental breakfast beginning at 8:30. This event is free and open to the public. Parking is available in lot 2 for $5 (enter at Hilgard and Westholme). For further information or to obtain a schedule, please call the Center for the Study of Women at (310) 825-0590.

This conference was organized by Frances Oliner, UCLA Law Professor, and Hermine G. De Soto, Research Fellow, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women is the primary sponsor with additional support provided by the UCLA Law School and the UCLA Center for Russian and East European Studies.

Feminist Theory Series: Highlights for Spring Quarter

Deborah McDowell
April 22, Friday [3-5 pm, Faculty Center, Sierra Room]

Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham
May 16, Monday [4-6 pm, Faculty Center, Hacienda Room]

“The Subject of Resistance in African American Women’s History” will be the topic of the lecture by Evelyn Brooks Higginbotham. Higginbotham is author of Righteous Discontent in the Women’s Movement in the Black Baptist Church, 1880-1920 (Harvard University Press, 1993). She is Professor of Afro-American Studies at Harvard University. This event is co-sponsored by the UCLA Center for Afro-American Studies.

Three
On Thursday, April 21-Saturday, April 23, UCLA will be the site for a conference entitled, "Comparative Fundamentalism: Gender, Politics, and Beyond." This conference will offer international and cross-cultural perspectives on the phenomenon of religiosity in the late twentieth-century. The focus on gender and politics underscores the centrality of these components to nearly all contemporary fundamentalisms. Martin Marty (University of Chicago, Divinity School) will give the keynote address on Thursday evening. Specific to gender, distinguished scholars will discuss issues related to fundamentalism and women in the United States, India, Egypt, Iran, Syria, Pakistan, and the Sudan. Speakers include Rebecca Kitch (UC San Diego), Shahla Haeri (Boston University), Mary Hegland (University of Santa Clara), Sucheta Mazumdar (Duke University), Eliz Sanasarian (University of Southern California), Sondra Hale (UCLA) and Sherifa Zuhur (UC Berkeley).

The Thursday evening keynote will be held in the James West Alumni Center at 8 pm. Friday's sessions will be in the California Room of the Faculty Center beginning at 9 am. The morning will focus on issues of gender. Politics will be the topic of the afternoon sessions. Saturday's roundtable will be in 170 Dodd Hall from 9 am-1 pm. The conference is free and open to the public. Parking at UCLA is $5. For more information or to obtain a brochure, please call (310) 206-8631.

The conference was organized by Professor Nikki Keddie (Professor of History and editor of Contention) and sponsored by: UCLA International Studies and Overseas Programs, College of Letters and Science, G. E. von Grunebaum Center for Near Eastern Studies, Center for the Study of Women, Center for Social Theory and Comparative History, Center for International Relations, J. S. Coleman African Studies Center, Jewish Studies Program, Hillel Council, University Religious Conference, Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (UC San Diego), Global Peace and Security Program (UC Santa Barbara) and Contention: Debates in Society, Culture and Science.
Feminist Physicist is Visiting Scholar at CSW

The CSW welcomes Professor Karen Barad as a Visiting Scholar during winter and spring quarters 1994. Barad received her Ph.D. in theoretical physics from SUNY Stony Brook where she worked on particle theory. Her dissertation concerned fermions in lattice gauge theory, and after five years at Barnard College, she joined the Department of Physics at Pomona College.

At Pomona, Barad teaches in both the Physics Department and in Women's Studies and has been instrumental in establishing a new concentration in Women's Studies and the sciences. She has also been the co-organizer of two conferences which have brought women scientists together with feminist scholars. Barad believes that feminists have much to learn from physics just as scientists have much to learn from feminism. She has recently completed several articles on the intersections of physics and feminist theories and is currently working on a manuscript entitled, "Meeting the Universe Halfway: Discontinuous Interactions in Quantum Physics, Feminist Epistemologies and the Politics of Scientific Knowledge Construction."

On Monday, April 18, at 12 noon in Kinsey 288, Barad will give a presentation in the CSW lunch series entitled, "A Feminist Reading of Niels Bohr's Philosophy of Quantum Mechanics." A light lunch will be served.

What's Happening Down the Hall

Most readers of the CSW Newsletter probably know that the second floor of Kinsey Hall is home to another campus unit devoted to the study of women—the Women's Studies Program. At 240 Kinsey you will find a hub of activity as the staff field questions from over sixty majors and nearly one-hundred seniors. Our mission is to provide the best quality undergraduate curriculum in women's studies. To do so requires the efforts, not only of the Program staff and graduate teaching assistants, but of dozens of dedicated faculty from various departments who teach courses both in the core curriculum and in related fields.

Last year, two Women's Studies Program faculty were awarded the prestigious Luckman Distinguished Teaching Award. Katherine Day received the award for Academic Senate Faculty, and Sondra Hale received the lecturer award. We are very proud of both of these gifted and hard-working teachers.

This year, Sondra Hale has become more formally associated with the Program, as she has recently been appointed to a permanent part-time adjunct position in the Department of Anthropology. Her time is shared with Cal State Northridge where she directs the Women's Studies Department. At the same time, Sandra Harding, the internationally known feminist philosopher of science, has also become a permanent part-time addition to the UCLA community with an appointment in the Philosophy Department. Her year is divided between UCLA and the University of Delaware. The Program is sure to benefit from the permanent affiliation of these two outstanding professors.

What can you expect to hear from Women's Studies in the near future? Several projects are underway that promise to expand on the Program's prior and current achievements. This spring, we will co-sponsor several outstanding speakers in the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Series (see page 7 for further information). At noon on Saturday, June 18, we will gather on the north side of Kinsey Hall for the annual graduation reception for students receiving degrees and specializations in Women's Studies. We also hope that by the end of the spring quarter a proposal for graduate coursework in Women's Studies will be ready for submission.

With the Center for the Study of Women at one end of Kinsey Hall and the Women's Studies Program at the other, you could say the building is firmly anchored in the rich streams of feminist teaching and research.
On Friday, May 6, Naomi Scheiman will give two lectures at UCLA. “Feminism and the Discourse of Marginality” will be the topic of her noon talk in Kinsey 288. From 3–5 pm in Dodd 399, she will give a presentation entitled, “Closets, Margins and Forms of Life: A Feminist Reading of Wittgenstein.” Scheiman has degrees in philosophy from Barnard College and Harvard University. She has taught at the University of Ottawa and is currently Professor of Philosophy and Women's Studies at the University of Minnesota. Her papers in feminist epistemology are collected in Engenderings: Constructions of Knowledge, Authority, and Privilege (Routledge, 1993). These lectures are pieces of a conversation she is currently constructing between feminist and other liberatory theorists and Ludwig Wittgenstein, an interest that goes back to her dissertation, much of which was written in UCLA’s Philosophy Reading Room in the summer of 1978.

“Objectivity and Philosophy of Science: Feminist Critiques” will be the topic of Elisabeth Lloyd’s talk on Thursday, May 19, from 4–6 pm in Dodd 399. Lloyd is Associate Professor of Philosophy at UC Berkeley. She did her graduate work in genetics at Harvard and received a Princeton Ph.D. in philosophy in 1984. Her first book, The Structure and Confirmation of Evolutionary Theory, first published in 1988, is being brought out by Princeton University Press as a paperback (1994). She also co-edited, with Evelyn Fox Keller, Keywords in Evolutionary Biology (Harvard University Press, 1992). Her current projects include: a model in probability logic concerning the variety of evidence; an examination of the uses of the term “objective” in analytic metaphysics and epistemology; and a book manuscript, All About Eve: Bias in Evolutionary Explanations of Women’s Sexuality, for Harvard University Press.

Both events are co-sponsored by the UCLA Department of Philosophy. The public is invited to attend.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The CSW Affiliated Scholars Program is soliciting applications for 1994-95. The program is open to independent scholars with limited institutional support. It provides a UCLA affiliation and library privileges, but no stipends are available. For further information or to obtain an application, please contact the CSW office at (310) 825-0590. Applications are due May 1st.

The deadline for UCLA faculty mini-grant applications is May 13th. Applications are available in the CSW office.

The CSW is soliciting nominations for the Wollstonecraft Dissertation Prize. The deadline is May 16th. For more information, please call the Center.

UCLA graduate students doing research on women and gender can apply for CSW travel grants. Applications are available in the CSW office. The deadline for spring quarter is April 25th.

"Preparing for the Job Market: What To Do and What Not To Do" will be the topic of a workshop for graduate students tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, May 24, from 12-2 pm in Kinsey 288. Save the date! For further information, call the Center at (310) 825-0590.
CSW MINI-GRA nt Program Provides Seed-Money for UCLA Faculty Research

The Center for the Study of Women has an annual mini-grant competition each spring that provides seed-money for UCLA faculty doing work on women and gender. Recent recipients include Nadine Peacock (Anthropology), Judith Siegel and Sarah Ullman (School of Public Health) and Cecile Whiting (Art History).

Nadine Peacock received a mini-grant to conduct a pilot study entitled "Hormonal Assessment in Pregnant and Non-pregnant Women." The grant was used as seed-money for a proposed project in which Peacock intends to monitor women in order to assess individual variability in physical, emotional and psychological changes accompanying pregnancy. The premise for the study is that the medicalization of pregnancy and birth, while producing a number of benefits for women and children, has had the unfortunate effect of trivializing potentially valuable traditional and folk knowledge surrounding reproduction.

Judith Siegel and Sarah Ullman's project, "Coping Strategies, Social Support and Recovery from Rape," surveys women survivors of sexual assault in an effort to determine the impact that the assault situation, the victim-offender relationship, coping strategies, and social support have on recovery. Recovery will be assessed in several ways including psychological symptoms, physical health status, and the women's self-rating of their recovery. Siegel and Ullman are particularly interested in exploring the effects of both positive and negative social reactions survivors have experienced from members of their social networks and professional support providers.

Cecile Whiting is using her mini-grant to fund work on a book she is currently writing entitled, A Taste for Pop: Pop Art, Consumerism, Gender (forthcoming, Cambridge University Press). Her book examines how Pop art and the cultural practices adjunct to it—the movement's mass media sources and its commercial emulators, art criticism and contemporary assessments of cultural dynamics—contested the dividing line between high art and consumer culture. Since the commercial motifs and techniques borrowed by Pop art (as well as the household and fashion items sold by pop-derived advertisements) were associated with the feminine world of domesticity and shopping, and since the world of high art and its collectors was considered primarily a masculine domain, this book necessarily also explores the negotiation of the boundary line between genders in the United States during the 1960's.

The CSW mini-grant competition is open to all UCLA faculty doing research on women and gender. Grants range from $1,500 to $5,000. Preference will be given to those whose projects have the potential to generate extramural funding. Mini-grant applications may be obtained by calling the CSW office at 825-0590. The deadline for submissions is May 13th.

UCLA CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF WOMEN
276 Kinsey Hall, 405 Hilgard Avenue
Los Angeles, California 90024-1504
WHO WE ARE

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women (CSW) is a nationally recognized center for research on women and gender. Established in 1984, it is the only unit of its kind in the University of California system, and it draws on the energies of more than 200 faculty from 12 UCLA professional schools and 27 departments. The Center works closely with the UCLA Women’s Studies Program to develop curriculum and promote feminist learning among both undergraduate and graduate students. Together, the Center for the Study of Women and the Women’s Studies Program constitute an important platform for women’s concerns in Southern California.

WHAT WE DO

The UCLA Center for the Study of Women contributes to the advancement of women by expanding and disseminating knowledge. As an advocate for women, the Center . . .

DISCLOSURES TO PROSPECTIVE DONORS DURING SOLICITATION

PRIVACY NOTICE
The 1977 California Information Practices Act requires UCLA to inform individuals asked to supply information about themselves of the following:

UCLA is requesting this information to update the general resource files of its University Relations Department. Furnishing the information is strictly voluntary and will be maintained confidentially. The information may be used by other University departments in the regular course of business but will not be disseminated to others except if required by law.

You have the right to review your own data file. Inquiries should be forwarded to the Assistant Vice Chancellor-Finance and Information Management, University Relations, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, California 90024.

DONOR’S CONSENT TO USE PERSONAL INFORMATION
The University is grateful for the support it receives from friends and alumni. One of the ways our thanks is expressed is through listing the names of donors in various publications. Should you wish that your name not appear as a donor, please notify us if you have not already done so.

FIDUCIARY RESPONSIBILITY OF THE UCLA FOUNDATION
The UCLA Foundation is a California non-profit public benefit corporation organized for the purpose of encouraging voluntary private gifts, trusts, and bequests for the benefit of the UCLA campus. Responsibility for governance of The Foundation, including investments, is vested in its Board of Trustees.

RECOVERY OF OPERATING COSTS FROM PRIVATE GIFTS
The Foundation’s policy is to invest on a short-term basis all gifts until five percent (5%) of the principal is earned for the support of UCLA development and related programs, unless gift instructions or appropriate campus administrators elect to provide this amount immediately.

With the exception of gifts for endowment purposes, additional investment income will also support these activities.
RESEARCH

The GSW sponsors research in the following areas:
- Women and the Arts
- Women of Color
- Women's Health
- Women and the Law
- Women and Science

Research Projects

Major research projects are funded by federal and state agencies, private foundations and corporations. Funded projects include:
- AIDS Education and Risk Reduction. (Funded by the Center for Disease Control-Department of Health and Human Services) Explores means of reducing AIDS risk among prostitutes and female heterosexual drug users.
- Companionship Practices in Hispanic and Anglo caregiver families. (Funded by the National Institute of Mental Health) Examines the social and psychological causes of sexual abuse.
- Client Bureaucracy in the Governance of Head Start. (Funded by the National Science Foundation) Examines the interplay between legal framework and local culture in three contrasting settings of Project Head Start.

CSW Seed-Money Grants

The CSW awards seed money competitively for UCLA faculty working on women and gender. Each issue, small grants ($1,000- $5,000) are awarded to 7-9 researchers. Funded projects include:
- Dealing the Line: Pop Art, Mass Culture and the Growing of Their Difference. Explores gender in the formation of contemporary taste and investigates the role of women-as-actors, symbols and parents.
- Long Arm Aftermath Following Desert Storm: means of diagnosing and alleviating women's stress after disaster.
- Caging Strategies: Sexual Support and Resilience from Rape. Investigates how women cope with sexual assault and establishes better means of counseling rape survivors.

CONFERENCES & LECTURES

The CSW sponsors a number of small study groups that focus on specific topics relating to women.

CONFERENCES

The CSW organizes and funds conferences on a variety of topics that deal with women and their representation. Past conferences have included:
- The Dark Inside Out: Women, Culture and Community Rituals. (Funded by the California Council for the Humanities and the Del Amo Endowment) Analyzed the role of women in ancient and contemporary folk culture.
- The Way We Look, The Way We See: Art Criticism for Women in the 90's. (Co-sponsored with the L.A. Women's Building) Explored how women are portrayed and portrayed themselves in contemporary art and film.
- Learning From Latin America: Women's Struggles for Liberdad. (Funded by the Ford and MacArthur Foundations, National Science Foundation, Inter-American Foundation) An international conference on women's experiences and empowerment in Latin America.

LECTURES

In order to disseminate feminist knowledge at UCLA and throughout the community, the CSW sponsors a faculty visitor, two speakers series as well as special events.

Feminist Research Seminar. Explores the frontiers of research on women and gender being done by UCLA faculty.

Feminist Theory Series. Brings internationally known feminist scholars to UCLA. In past years, the series has focused on women and film and perspectives of women's work.

Long Arm Aftermath Following Desert Storm: means of diagnosing and alleviating women's stress after disaster.

COMMONWEALTH TRANSFORMATION PROJECTS (FEMW)

Originally funded by the Ford Foundation, this project, directed by Professor Karen E. Rower, has launched an ongoing series of projects aimed at incorporating research into and about American women's cultural influences on undergraduate curricula and secondary education. Through its syllabi, bibliographies and databases, the project makes research on women's cultural influences available to national and international scholars.

WORKING GROUPS

The CSW sponsors a number of small study groups that focus on specific topics relating to women.

- Gender and Science. Brings scientists and humanities together to explore how gender shapes scientific thinking and why women and minorities are underrepresented among scientists.
- Gender and Politics. An interdisciplinary project that examines the role of gender within the political system.
- Feminism, Race and Class. Explores issues of gender, race and class through readings and seminars.

RESEARCHERS

- Affiliated Scholars. Provides a temporary intellectual home for women who have recently received their Ph.D.
- Resident Scholars. Provides a formal affiliation for independent scholars.
- Visiting Scholars. National and international visiting scholars working on women and gender receive research privileges.

CURRICULUM

The UCLA Women's Studies Program

The Center for the Study of Women works closely with its sister division, the Women's Studies Program, which is one of the largest and most distinguished Women's Studies programs in the nation. Through its lower-division, general education survey course, the Women's Studies Program brings feminist theory and practice to over 600 UCLA students annually. Upper-division courses and senior seminars provide Women's Studies majors with an interdisciplinary perspective and close faculty contact.

The FORD ETHNIC WOMEN'S CURRICULUM TRANSFORMATION PROJECTS (FEMW)

Originally funded by the Ford Foundation, this project, directed by Professor Karen E. Rower, has launched an ongoing series of projects aimed at incorporating research into and about American women's cultural influences on undergraduate curricula and secondary education. Through its syllabi, bibliographies and databases, the project makes research on women's cultural influences available to national and international scholars.

GRADUATE EDUCATION

The CSW provides an intellectual home for feminist graduate students from all 3 of UCLA's departments and schools. By offering small seminars, the CSW faculty helps women graduate students reap the benefits of feminist professional networks and social networks in their future careers. The Center also provides graduate students with a friendly environment in which to grow and acquire the necessary professional credentials.

THE GRADUATE TRAVEL GRANT PROGRAM

Graduate Students working on women and gender may apply for small travel grants ($200-$400) to present papers at scholarly conferences or travel to research sites. These grants are awarded to 16-20 students annually. Topics have included: feminism in the environment, women and religion in Northern Ireland, and a sociological analysis of women's liberation in Los Angeles.

STANDUP COMEDY AWARD

This award is given annually for the outstanding dissertation on women and gender that utilizes historical materials and methods.

THE GRADUATE RESEARCH CONFERENCE

Annually, the CSW organizes a Graduate Student Research Conference that draws between 30 and 50 graduate students share their research with the UCLA community.

GRADUATE STUDENT NETWORK

The CSW hosts a monthly graduate student lunch that provides students the opportunity to network, build support systems and discuss concerns.

PUBLICATIONS

The GSW disseminates feminist knowledge through conference proceedings, bibliographies and working papers. Networking among UC researchers is facilitated by periodic directories that list research on women and gender by University of California scholars. The Center also publishes the proceedings of its annual Graduate Student Research Conference as well as a quarterly Newsletter and an annual Calendar of Events.

A Coming Together of Women's Studies Scholars in California

The Council of University of California Women's Programs is sponsoring this conference at Lake Arrowhead to bring together those teaching and doing research in Women's Studies for a weekend of debate and discussion of the future directions of feminism. The Conference is organized around four important sites of feminism – the State, Popular Culture, the Workplace, and the Academy. The perspective is comparative.

This conference is set-up to maximize discussion. No papers will be read. All will be circulated in advance to registered participants and should be read prior to coming to the conference. The papers will serve as a focus for the sessions and will furnish participants with examples of the newest research on feminist issues in a wide variety of fields. During each session, we will break into smaller discussion groups and then reconvene as a group.

The UCLA Conference Center at Lake Arrowhead is an ideal location for a meeting of this type. Situated in the San Bernardino National Forest, it is a stunningly beautiful resort on the lake. It has a main lodge, conference rooms, guest cottages, many with fireplaces, tennis, nature trails, jacuzzi, and 40 acres of pine forest. We suggest you dress warmly. The weather is brisk in the fall.

CSW DEVELOPMENT FUNDS
1993-1994

Funds raised by the Center and its Friends group, if unrestricted, were placed in CSW's general UCLA Foundation account #5722 or in the UC Regents Various Donors fund #53073. As of November 1993, all solicited and unrestricted funds were placed in the new General Fund (#6167) to be used at the discretion of the director. All other gifts have been placed in the appropriate restricted Foundation accounts. Funds were transferred from Foundation accounts to the UC Regents linking funds to offset expenses.
