I. MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR, RACHEL C. LEE

What a year it has been with unexpected and unprecedented changes that no one could have predicted. From a worldwide pandemic to a nationwide uprising against structural racism, I have been inspired by the resilience of our feminist community, fighting every day to promote a more just world. Over the past five years, it has been my pleasure and honor to serve as the 12th Director of the UCLA Center for the Study of Women. While I plan to stay involved with the Center’s fundraising efforts in the coming years, I have completed my term as CSW’s Director as of July 1, 2020.

The 2020 calendar year marks our Center’s 35th Anniversary Celebration and the 100th anniversary of US women’s suffrage. Though our 35th Anniversary Celebration and annual Awards Reception featuring Supremacy Co-Lead and Black Lives Matter Co-Founder Alicia Garza were postponed, we look forward to offering these events in the next academic year. Nevertheless, we continued to make tremendous progress on our research streams.

- Chemical Entanglements focused on the Oral History of Environmental Illness project, which accomplished its 60-interview goal to elevate and highlight the stories of people who experience chemical illness. In Spring 2020, we also published in Catalyst: Feminism, Theory, Technoscience, a special section on “Chemical Entanglements: Gender and Exposure,” grown out of the 2017 UCLA Symposium of the same name.

- As part of Associate Director Grace Hong’s Sexual Violence and Intersectionality research stream, we were fortunate to have held the 30th Annual Thinking Gender Conference a week before the COVID-19 Safer at Home Order was put in place, and it drew a record number of attendees and co-sponsorships.

- Under the leadership of CSW Advisory Committee Chair Sarah Haley, the inaugural year of the Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) organized an active Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group, awarded graduate fellowships in Black feminist research, offered timely lectures and workshops, and provided much-needed summer support for graduate students focused on social justice work. Most importantly, they appealed to Chancellor Gene Block and Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Emily Carter to permanently endow BFI as an integral program to foster Black study and life at UCLA.

- Based on the Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies research stream, Hong and Haley selected six Policy Briefs on the topic of “Confronting the Carceral State, Reimagining Justice.” For the first time, we accepted submissions from graduate students at all UCs and prison system-impacted authors.
Senior Faculty Research Associate Jessica Cattelino and her student research team published the Gender and Water Working Papers, which featured preliminary results on the important but understudied role of gender—as it intersects with race and class—in residential water use in Los Angeles.

I would like to express my gratitude to the wonderful staff, graduate and undergraduate student workers, and trio of faculty Associate Directors of the Center—Jessica Cattelino (2015-2017), Sarah Haley (2017-2019), and Grace Hong (2019-2020), under whose leadership CSW has inaugurated four key research streams that demonstrate the importance of gender to questions we ask about environmental issues like water use and chemical pollutants and that take an intersectional approach to urgent interventions in sexual violence and women’s imprisonment. With the support of our constituents, stakeholders, and donors, we are looking forward to building a foundational endowment to ensure that groundbreaking scholarship on women, gender, and sexuality continues to be robustly supported at UCLA well past 2050.

In a time of significant budgetary constraints, CSW continues to offer our research and programming at no cost to the general public, which allows us to collaborate with the community in unique and vital ways. As UCLA’s feminist nucleus, CSW is a hub for multi-disciplinary scholarship and collaboration, a needed research incubator placing gender at the fore to ask vital questions and to identify innovative solutions. Our faculty conduct world-changing research that breaks barriers and challenges the status quo. At a time when gender equality is under attack, I urge you to support CSW through a financial contribution, large or small, at www.csw.ucla.edu/give-to-csw35. Your generosity can help sustain and advance the transformative changes that our research has produced over the past 35 years. Even more importantly, it will enable our faculty and students to drive future change, so that 35 years from now, gender equity will be a reality.

II. ABOUT CSW

Established in 1984, the UCLA Center for the Study of Women is the first organized research unit of its kind in the University of California system and an internationally recognized center that creates and sustains a productive intellectual community dedicated to research on gender, sexuality, and women’s issues. Though CSW is housed under the Division of Social Sciences, it is directly supported by the Office of the Chancellor and serves the entire university.

CSW’s mission is to work towards a world in which education and scholarship are tools for social justice feminism, improving the lives of people of all genders. It is committed to gender equity and research parity at UCLA, and develops and fosters research, facilitates productive scholarly relationships, and aids in recruitment and retention efforts. It draws on the expertise of more than 200 members from 34 departments and 10 professional schools. CSW produces original, innovative research; administers research grants for faculty and students; organizes research projects, conferences, seminars, working groups, and public lectures; trains undergraduates and graduate students in best practices of collaborative research; and publishes policy briefs, special journal editions, articles, and blogs that feature research updates, conference reports, faculty profiles, bibliographies, field reports, book reviews, and announcements.

III. CHEMICAL ENTANGLEMENTS: GENDER AND EXPOSURE

A. What is Chemical Entanglements?
Led by CSW Director Rachel C. Lee, the Chemical Entanglements: Gender and Exposure research stream uses approaches from the social sciences, sciences, and humanities to better understand the gendered outcomes of exposure to endocrine-disrupting chemicals. Endocrine disruptors are a very common type of chemical found in everything from personal care products to industry waste. They impact human metabolism and reproduction, and are tied to chronic illnesses such as Multiple Chemical Sensitivity (MCS). Researchers have found that the impacts of such chemicals are compounded by socioeconomic factors that intersect with race, immigration status, gender, and sexuality. For instance, low-income communities of color have higher body burdens of endocrine-disrupting chemicals, due to a variety of factors including their often being housed in neighborhoods that are near refineries, high-traffic transportation corridors, and agricultural fields where pesticides are used.¹ Women, meanwhile, purchase and use the majority of household cleaning and personal care products that constitute a significant source of exposures. Because of these and many other factors, CSW argues that an intersectional feminist approach to public health and environmental justice is necessary to fully understand and remedy the impact of exposure on human health.

B. Oral Histories of Environmental Illness
In 2019-2020, CSW continued the Oral Histories of Environmental Illness (OHEI) initiative in partnership with the UCLA Library’s Center for Oral History Research. The initiative preserves the stories of people with environmental illnesses so that researchers and activists might draw on them to advance future work. The interviews collected will become an archival resource housed at the Center for Oral History Research.

Research Team
The oral history project benefits from a talented, highly motivated research team, comprised of over a dozen graduate and undergraduate students and three key CSW staff members. This project has trained two undergraduate student cohorts in best practices in outreach and recruitment, oral history ethics, and hands-on interviewing experience. Graduate student researchers have been trained in mentoring undergraduates in team-based research and streamlining workflow and project management.

The project managers oversaw all aspects of the research project, including outreach, engaging with potential participants, assigning interviewers, coordinating transcriptions, and procuring legal agreements needed by the UCLA Library. We are grateful to our 60+ interviewees, who shared their personal stories and in so doing, created a rich and powerful archive that will be a resource for future scholars and students exploring the role of gender in social movements around health, illness, and justice. These stories articulate how environmental factors play a role in the disabling of individuals’ health, how conventional medicine serves these populations poorly, and how these disabled persons build care networks attentive to chronic conditions resistant to pharmaceutical and/or surgical “cure.”

The project managers in 2019-2020 were as follows:

- Rachel C. Lee, Principal Investigator
- Alexandra Apolloni, Program and Research Developer (through October 2019)
- Gillian Gower, Interim Program and Research Developer (October-December 2019)
- Katja Antoine, Program and Research Developer (as of February 2020)

Graduate student researchers, undergraduate student researchers, and employees contributed to the project by conducting outreach and interviews, and translating and transcribing materials. Contributing to the OHEI project during 2019-2020 were the following students:

Graduate Students
- Blair Black, Ethnomusicology (interviewing)
- Rebecca Chhay, English (transcription)
- Abraham Encinas, English (interviewing, translation)
- Ash Farnan, Social Welfare (transcription)
- Kelsey Kim, Anthropology (outreach, interviewing, transcription)
- Tony Wei Ling, English (transcription)
- Samantha Solis, English (translation, transcription)
- Wei Si Nicole (Nic) Yiu, Gender Studies (outreach, interviewing, translation, transcription)

Undergraduate Students
- Rachel Forrest, Political Science (transcription)
- Megan LeGresley, Economics, Political Science (translation, transcription)
- Joycelyn Liu, Pre-Cognitive Science (transcription)
Hong Phan, Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology (translation, transcription)

Aye Pyae, Pre-Business Economics (transcription)

The Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Student Group, first established in 2017, provided undergraduate students an opportunity to develop oral history interviewing and transcription skills. Students enrolled in a 99/199 independent study course and met weekly with staff, faculty, and graduate student researchers. As part of their work plan, students observed and transcribed interviews, conducted an interview with supervision, and had the opportunity to conduct an unsupervised interview. Copies of the work plans are available in Appendix 3.

The 2019-2020 Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Student Group lead advisor was:

- Kelsey Kim, Graduate Student Researcher

The following team members also advised the Undergraduate Student Group:

- Rachel C. Lee, Principal Investigator
- Gillian Gower, Interim Program and Research Developer (Fall 2020)
- Katja Antoine, Program and Research Developer (Spring 2020)

Students attended an oral history interview training offered by the UCLA Library Center for Oral History Research. They also received an in-class informational session about copyright agreements. Both the training and informational session were provided by:

- Teresa Barnett, Director, UCLA Library Center for Oral History Research

The 2019-2020 Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Student Group members were as follows:

- Joselyne Franco, Spanish and History of Science (enrolled in Fall 2019, volunteer in Winter 2020)
- Miranda Le, Human Biology and Society (enrolled in 2019-2020)
- Lillian Nguyen, Anthropology and Digital Humanities (enrolled in Fall 2019 and Winter 2020, volunteer in Spring 2020)
- Hong Phan, Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology (enrolled in Winter and Spring 2020)
- Cheyenne Walker, Anthropology (enrolled in Fall 2019 and Winter 2020, volunteer in Spring 2020)
UCLA Undergraduate Research Week

During the Spring quarter, two students in the Undergraduate Student Group collaborated and presented some of the OHEI findings during UCLA Undergraduate Research Week.

The presentation was titled “Environmental Illness and Social Isolation: A Comparative Analysis of Lifestyles Restricted by Illness” and was given by:

- Miranda Le, Human Biology and Society
- Cheyenne Walker, Anthropology

Recruitment and Outreach

Team members engaged in continuous recruitment and outreach efforts throughout the year. We connected with prospective recruits through social media groups on Facebook and Instagram, a conference call with members of support group MCS Friends, and personal referrals.

In an effort to diversify the archive, substantial outreach efforts have focused on recruiting people with chemical sensitivities and environmental illnesses among communities of color and low-wage workers. With that objective in mind, the OHEI project partnered with the California Healthy Nail Salon Collaborative as well as the California Domestic Workers Coalition and the Coalition of Immokalee Workers (in Florida). Interviews with members of these organizations will take place during Summer 2020.
Status and Initial Findings of the Project
The OHEI project has reached the initial target of 60 interviews and will exceed this number by the time it concludes in September 2020.

Interviews conducted in Spring 2020 presented new and unanticipated themes as a result of the unprecedented conditions of living in the midst of a global pandemic. Numerous participants who have suffered from chemical sensitivities and environmental illnesses for years remarked that COVID-19 has not required them to change behaviors or daily practices to mitigate the risk of infection. They already wore facial masks when they left the house, avoided congregating with others in public indoor spaces (like movie theaters and grocery stores), maintained distance from others who may be “contaminated” (whether by an invisible coronavirus or fragranced products), and stayed at home as much as possible. Some explicitly stated that living with the threat of COVID-19 was easy compared to living with the threat of environmental and chemical toxicants.

Efforts to diversify the archive also brought to light how health concerns as a result of exposure to pesticides and household chemicals in the work place (e.g., through farm work, domestic work, nail salon work) have to be situated in contexts with multiple competing issues that impact an individual’s and a community’s wellbeing. For instance, while high pesticide levels on a field to be harvested are undeniably harmful and leave farmworkers ill, this is but one concern that significantly affects workers’ health and wellbeing. Precarious employment, undocumented legal status, exploitative wages and, for women in particular, pervasive long-term sexual abuse are additional concerns that both add to and rival physical health problems. Also noteworthy is the positioning of all these issues as ones that impact not just individuals, but families and their communities. Experiences of chemical sensitivities and environmental illnesses, then, need to be addressed not just as a set of physiological symptoms but in terms of a civil society’s apportioning of “risk” and toxicant exposure to sectors of society perceived as having little political clout.

Future Goals
Upon the conclusion of the collection phase of the OHEI project in September 2020, Rachel C. Lee plans to develop peer-reviewed articles that draw on this collection of data, focusing on the compelling stories of social movement activism, depleted health, resilient care networks, and creative artistry as they intersect with the history of circulating toxicant chemicals. We anticipate that students in Health Humanities, Disability Studies, Gender Studies, Environmental and Public Health, and Critical Race Studies will draw on this work. Furthermore, the qualitative data garnered from oral histories will complement the work done, and yet to be done, by Environmental Studies and Social Movement scholars who aim to influence policy makers and industrialists. Consequently, this project will also be a resource for legislators seeking to change policies on chemical pollution and environmental justice. These oral histories are particularly important as individuals with MCS and environmental illness are often physically limited in their own political activism due to their chemical sensitivities.

C. Special Section on Chemical Entanglements in Catalyst: Feminism, Theory, Technoscience

In May 2020, the open-source journal Catalyst: Feminism, Theory, Technoscience published an issue (6, no. 1) with a Special Section titled “Chemical Entanglements: Gender and Exposure” edited by Rachel C. Lee. The Special Section grew out of a symposium, “Chemical Entanglements: Gender and Exposure,” hosted by CSW in May 2017.

The Special Section features multidisciplinary research from an array of fields, such as anthropology, public health, legal history, environmental health sciences, poetry, bio-art, waste studies, queer theory, disabilities studies, and decolonial science and technologies studies. The introduction by Lee provides a map of the Special Section’s scholarship by way of four clusters:

- “Petro- and Agro-Wars by Chemical Proxy” focuses on the foreclosure of reproductive futurity for Indigenous and Brown settler populations by undeclared but de facto colonial “wars” conducted by the petrochemical, oil, and agricultural industries.
- Interviews, short essays, and a longer research article probing “Educational Entanglements” highlight how educational institutions (from K-12 schools to labs at public research universities), in their current dimensions, need reforming so that they do not extend chemical and social injury.
- Three of the essays, identified as “Vernaculars of Consumption,” address the chemical entanglements of “feminine” purchasing and waste circuits, in relation to beauty creams, menstrual technology, and various body-care and food options scrutinized by pregnant women.
- A final grouping, “Cognicizing Chemicals through Aesthetic Forms,” comes together by way of critical reflexivity on art as a mode to materialize and represent lateral movements toward disability justice among intoxicated subjects.

Additionally, in “A Lattice of Chemicalized Kinship: Toxicant Reckoning in a Depressive Reparative Mode,” Lee provides background on the toxic chemical events underlying Eve Sedgwick’s humanist theorizing of affective moods (such as paranoia, shame, depression, and joy).
The Special Section consists of the following contributions:

- “A Lattice of Chemicalized Kinship: Toxicant Reckoning in a Depressive-Reparative Mode” by Rachel C. Lee
- “EDC’s as Industrial Chemicals and Settler Colonial Structures: Towards a Decolonial Feminist Approach” by Reena Shadaan and Michelle Murphy
- “Naked in the Face of Contamination: Thinking Models and Metaphors of Toxicity Together” by Amelia Fiske
- “‘Keeping Them Down’: Neurotoxic Pesticides, Race, and Disabling Biopolitics” by Mayra G. Sánchez Barba
- “Troubling Figures: Endocrine Disruptors, Intersex Frogs, and the Logics of Environmental Science” by Logan Natalie O’Laughlin
- “Toxic Soldiers, Flickering Knowledges, and Enlisted Care: Dispossession and Environmental Injustice” by Alli Morgan and Kim Fortun
- “Compost and Menstrual Blood: Women Wastepickers and the Work of Waste Futurity” by Rachel Vaughn
- “Purity is Not the Point: Chemical Toxicity, Childbearing, and Consumer Politics as Care” by Andrea Lilly Ford

A critical commentary:

- “Carpet Bombings: A Drama of Chemical Injury in Three Acts” by Liza Grandia
And two critical perspectives:

- “Paean to Bicillin L-A® and the end of Harry Harlow's Rhesus Monkey Experiments” by Peggy Munson
- “Chemical Kinship: Interdisciplinary Experiments with Pollution” by Angeliki Balayannis and Emma Garnett

D. Assessing the Prevalence of Chemical Sensitivities to Fragranced Products Among Undergraduate Students & Its Impact on Educational Experiences

As reported in the 2017-2018 Annual Report, the previous iteration of the Undergraduate Student Group developed surveys designed to gauge the need for fragrance-free spaces and student sentiment towards fragrance-free policy at UCLA. The survey was officially launched in April 2018 and received 700+ responses.

Poster Presentation at the American Public Health Association Annual Meeting

Key findings of the surveys of fragranced products were presented in a poster session at the American Public Health Association’s (APHA) Annual Meeting in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on November 5, 2019. Principal Investigator Rachel C. Lee represented the research team and was accompanied by former Undergraduate Student Researcher Hannah Bullock, who was integral in creating the initial survey. Public Administration Analyst Drew Westmoreland, who led the survey project, also oversaw the completion of the poster, titled “Assessing the Prevalence of Chemical Sensitivities to Fragranced Products Among Undergraduate Students & Its Impact on Educational Experiences.”

INTRODUCTION

There has been movement towards inclusionary practices in the education system by reducing barriers to learning. One such barrier is students’ sensitivities to chemicals from fragranced products. The lack of regulation of chemicals emitted from fragranced products exclude those with chemical sensitivities. Research regarding the impact of chemical sensitivity on college students and their educational experiences is sparse. UCLA’s Center for the Study of Women disseminated a survey in 2018 to undergraduates to evaluate the need for fragrance-free policies on campus. Approximately 665 students were surveyed and ranged in age from 18-29 years. The analysis relied on a mixed-methods approach to gauge the prevalence of symptoms after chemical exposure to fragranced products and ascertain students’ narratives on the impact of fragranced products on their educational experiences. The results indicate 60 percent of participants had a physical reaction including headaches, shortness of breath, or a rash after being exposed to fragranced products. Additionally, 41 percent noted their reactions to fragranced products impacted their ability to concentrate on studying and taking exams. Respondents indicated they were willing to change their use of fragranced products (49 percent of commenters). However, many comments demonstrated participant concern for the accessibility of fragrance-free products due to cost and the inevitability of encountering fragranced products. Our results indicate college students are differentially... impacted by chemical sensitivities and thus present an avenue to establish equity for school health and further reduce barriers to learning.”

E. 4S Conference Presentation: “Feminist, Decolonial, Indigenous STS: An Authors Meets Critics Panel”

Innovating STS was a digital and physical exhibit convened in conjunction with the 2019 Annual Meeting of the Society for the Social Studies of Science (4S), which took place in New Orleans, Louisiana from September 4-7, 2019. As part of the conference topic “Innovations, Interruptions, Regenerations,” the exhibit showcased innovations in science and technology studies (STS) as well as ways that “innovation” has been studied, conceptualized, practiced, and critiqued. CSW contributed a digital and physical exhibit on Chemical Entanglements. Rachel C. Lee attended the conference to present CSW research at the physical exhibit. She also participated in a panel titled "Feminist, Decolonial, Indigenous STS: An Authors Meets Critics Panel."

CSW Director and Principal Investigator for the Chemical Entanglements research stream at the Innovating STS exhibit in New Orleans, Louisiana, September 2019.
F. Catalogue of The Female Struggle: An Exhibition
Undergraduate student Brian Shirazi asked CSW to contribute artwork from the Chemical Entanglements research stream to be displayed at the UCLA campus Northern Lights coffee shop as part of a project for his Communications class. The class project sought to “bring community awareness to the female struggle, which has been underrepresented in our society for centuries, through powerful and moving works,” according to the exhibition catalogue. CSW provided a series of three posters on the toxic impact of chemicals and cosmetics on our bodies that had been commissioned by poet, novelist, artist, and activist Peggy Munson. For the full catalogue and photos of the exhibit, see Appendix 4.

IV. SEXUAL VIOLENCE AND INTERSECTIONALITY

A. What is Sexual Violence and Intersectionality?
Led by CSW Associate Director Grace Hong, this research stream seeks to bring insights from gender studies scholarship to bear on sexual assault policy on campus and beyond. A key intervention of CSW’s work on this issue is advocacy for anti-carceral approaches to sexual violence; that is, approaches that understand sexual violence as a feature of policing and the carceral state, and propose ways of achieving justice that look to non-punitive and anti-carceral alternatives. Doing so means understanding sexual violence as a function of race, nationalism, and empire, as well as gender and sexual inequity. Moreover, this stream seeks to harness the wealth of expertise on sexual power and politics generated by feminist scholars who are rarely consulted in the establishment and implementation of policies to address sexual misconduct on university campuses.

The major initiative to emerge from the Sexual Violence and Intersectionality research stream this year was the 2020 Thinking Gender Graduate Student Research Conference, which explored the theme of “Sexual Violence as Structural Violence: Feminist Visions of Transformative Justice.” Now in its 30th year, Thinking Gender showcases the best research by emerging scholars of gender and sexuality. The event took place on March 6, 2020 at UCLA Carnesale Commons, with a pre-conference workshop on March 5, 2020.

Thinking Gender is coordinated by a UCLA graduate student researcher, and our 2020 Thinking Gender Coordinator was Bri-Ann Hernandez, Master’s Student in Public Health. Hernandez collaborated closely with Grace Hong in refining the conference theme and planning the program. For the conference program, see student awa5.

The keynote panel featured renowned abolitionist and transformative justice activist Mariame Kaba (Founder and Director of Project NIA; Co-founder of Survived & Punished) in conversation with scholar-activists Mimi Kim and Emily Thuma. Conference organizers deliberately emphasized transformative justice as an approach for addressing sexual violence so as to intervene in mainstream anti-sexual violence efforts. Often, institutional and activist approaches to sexual violence are deeply carceral, focusing on punishing, prosecuting, and/or incarcerating perpetrators. This has been the main focus of the #MeToo movement and is the typical approach to sexual violence that universities take via their Title IX processes. Restorative justice measures differ from punitive approaches by seeking to collectively address harms done within a community by putting right what has been violated. Transformative justice seeks to go beyond individuated responses altogether, to change the systems and structures that create the conditions for harm in the first place. Thinking about sexual violence in relationship to race, gender, and sexuality is integral to a transformative justice approach, as the systems that need to be transformed are ones that disproportionately adversely affect communities of color, women, non-binary and non-gender conforming people, transgender individuals, and LGBTQ communities.

Thinking Gender 2020 was a resounding success. It attracted the largest audience and received the most co-sponsorships in the history of the conference. For attendance numbers, see Appendix 6. Comments from attendees and presenters were overwhelmingly positive.

Attendee comments included:

- “The speakers were all earth-shatteringly phenomenal. The people I hope to be.”
- “I was blown away by the collection of radical, transformative thinkers who participated in the panels, roundtables, and the keynote session. I felt like I engaged more deeply and took more away from this conference than most other conferences I have attended. Thank you for organizing such a rich and diverse space!”
- “I found the research and discussions to be very dynamic and inspirational—particularly that research was impacting policy, structures, and advancing action around the issues.”
- “This was the most impactful conference I’ve ever attended. The space for discussion between graduate students, faculty, and community attendees was so respectful, supportive, and educational to all. I will continue returning to this conference after I have moved on from graduate studies.”
- ”My only complaint was that I couldn’t attend everything.”

Presenter comments included:

- “Amazing dialogue on accountability, carceral feminisms, and structural violence.”
- “The roundtable discussion was incredibly fruitful and warm. I’ve never had such a generous and affirming presentation experience.”
- “I heard this from attendees as well—this was one of the most affirming and supportive conferences I’ve been to. Even though we were discussing critical and challenging topics, I think most people were really invested in the work and cared about challenging and supporting presenters. It felt like a really constructive and affirming space to get new ideas, think critically about my work, and receive affirmation. I also loved the opportunity to meet new [people] and connect with former colleagues.”

Pre-Conference Workshop
On March 5, 2020, CSW offered a by-invitation-only pre-conference workshop for UCLA faculty, staff, and students. Mariame Kaba and Xhercis Méndez (Associate Professor and Vice-Chair of Women and Gender Studies at California State University, Fullerton) co-facilitated a discussion of how anti-carceral, feminist interventions can be brought to bear on sexual violence at the UCLA campus. Kaba and Méndez specifically focused on how to organize around alternative modes of confronting and preventing sexual violence in the UCLA community. In addition to the two facilitators, six faculty members, five staff members, and four graduate students participated in the workshop.

The date of the workshop coincided with a multi-campus UC graduate student strike demanding a cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) from the UC administration (for more information on CSW's support of this strike, see section X.A.). CSW supported “UCLA 4 COLA” by exempting graduate students employed by CSW from work that day without loss of compensation.

Panel and Roundtable Sessions
The centerpiece of Thinking Gender 2020 was the paper panel and roundtable sessions, which featured graduate student presenters and distinguished faculty serving as moderators and respondents. These sessions provided presenters with a unique opportunity to receive expert feedback on their work. Paper panels featured 12-minute paper presentations, while roundtables featured shorter five-minute presentations to allow additional time for moderator and audience feedback and discussion. Continuing the policy initiated at last year's Thinking Gender, CSW offered an honorarium to moderators, compensating them for their expertise, time, and contributions to student mentorship and the conference as a whole. Moderators came from UCLA and UC Riverside.

Members of the paper, poster, and roundtable selection committee were as follows:

- Gillian Gower, Interim Program and Research Developer, CSW
- Bri-Ann Hernandez, Thinking Gender 2020 Conference Coordinator
- Grace Hong, Associate Director, CSW
- Rachel C. Lee, Director, CSW
- Magally Miranda, Graduate Student, Chicana/o Studies

Poster Sessions
Thinking Gender 2020 also offered undergraduates the opportunity to present their research during two poster sessions in the conference lobby. Ten undergraduates from across the country presented their research at one or both of the poster sessions.

Survived & Punished Exhibit
Throughout the conference, attendees had the opportunity to view an exhibit built around the work of prison abolitionist organization Survived & Punished (S&P). Two of the keynote panelists, Mariame Kaba and Emily Thuma, are founding members of S&P, which challenges the punishment and incarceration of domestic violence survivors who defend themselves against their abusers. The exhibit featured a letter-writing and petitioning station, where attendees could sign letters, postcards, and petitions urging California Governor Gavin Newsom to reduce the sentences of incarcerated survivors of sexual violence, several of whom had been sentenced to Life Without Parole (LWOP). A large monitor displayed a playlist of educational videos, conceived by Kaba, that detailed the stories of various criminalized survivors as well as a slideshow of compiled photos and art from their release campaigns, rallies, and meetings organized by S&P and other affiliated non-profit groups. Videos and images were selected by CSW Program Coordinator Arielle Bagood, with the help of CSW undergraduate student employees Rachel Forrest, Joycelyn Liu, and Aye Pyae. Sources for the letters, videos, and photo collections included the Barnard Center for Research on Women, the California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP), and S&P.

Book Sales
The UCLA Bookstore sold books authored by Mariame Kaba (Missing Daddy) and Emily Thuma (All Our Trials), as well as a book illustrated by keynote opener Weshoyot Alvitre (Sovereign Traces), before and after the keynote panel.

Accessibility and Financial Grants
CSW is dedicated to creating a safe and accessible space for everyone who participates in our events and programs. As a result, this year, our events were fragrance-free, and we offered interpreters, live captioning, and printed material in enlarged print and braille upon request. For Thinking Gender 2020, we also provided all-gender restrooms and a lactation room.

To allow for greater participation from students, we provided Financial Grants to cover registration and travel expenses for presenters who would otherwise not have been able to present due to financial constraints. The grant recipients were as follows:

- Melanie Brazzell, UC Santa Barbara
- Catherine Brist, University of Michigan
- Guadalupe Arellanes Castro, UC Riverside
- Meelissa Tapia Cortez, UCLA
- Kaity Matrassi, Columbia University
- Soukayna Mniai, Université Paris Nanterre
• Talia Gomez Quintana, UCLA
• Marina de Oliveira Reis, UCLA
• Rosie Stockton, UCLA

Keynote Opener and Panel
The keynote event started with an opening presentation, followed by a keynote address and panel.

The keynote opening, “Toypurina: Bloodlines of Resistance,” was presented by:

• Weshoyot Alvitre, Tongva artist

The keynote panel, “Transformational Justice: Refusing Criminalization and Sexual Violence,” consisted of a main address by Mariame Kaba, followed by a discussion between distinguished activist-scholars on their experiences of transformative justice organizing in the past and present.

The keynote panelists were as follows:

• Mariame Kaba, Project NIA, Barnard Center for Research on Women
• Mimi Kim, Social Work, CSU Long Beach
• Emily Thuma, American Politics and Public Law, University of Washington Tacoma
• Moderator: Sarah Haley, Professor of Gender Studies and African American Studies, UCLA

Publications
Thinking Gender resulted in a number of publications:

• 22 videocasts, including videos of the keynote opener, the keynote address, the keynote panel, the exhibit, and 18 graduate student paper and roundtable presentations. For a list of videos and links, see Appendix 14.
• 7 blog posts on the CSW website. For a list of CSW blog posts and links, see Appendix 13.
• 5 posters and 3 papers published via CSW’s eScholarship portal: https://escholarship.org/uc/csw_thinkinggender.

C. Future Goals
Grace Hong will convene a CSW working group comprised of faculty, staff, students, and members of the larger UCLA community to build on the insights and strategic plan developed at the Thinking Gender 2020 pre-conference workshop. This working group will identify and implement structures for sexual violence prevention and response alternatives to the Title IX office. These structures will prioritize survivor-centered, restorative, and transformative justice approaches.

V. BLACK FEMINISM INITIATIVE

A. What is the Black Feminism Initiative?
The CSW Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) was established in Fall 2019 to honor and encourage Black feminist thought and visions for political transformation. Led by BFI Director and CSW Advisory Committee Chair Sarah Haley (Professor, Gender Studies and African American Studies), BFI supports interdisciplinary research and social engagements that are grounded in Black feminist and Black queer frameworks of analysis. It highlights Black feminist work in a myriad of forms, with a particular focus on projects that challenge state and interpersonal violence, consider intramural forms of relation and refusal, and engage Black feminist assembly, and collective organizing practice. BFI is also especially invested in questions of social reproduction and reproductive justice, contemporary and historical regimes of captivity and carcerality, and Black feminist art and expressive culture.

BFI supports a Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group, graduate research, and public talks and events on subjects of pressing political and social concerns. BFI also co-sponsors thematically related campus events, provides funding for graduate students as resources permit, and actively promotes a university and society where all Black lives flourish.

B. Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group
BFI organizes a monthly workshop for faculty and graduate students to discuss Black feminism. These meetings provide the opportunity for participants to workshop in-progress writing and ideas. The 2019-2020 Faculty/Graduate Workshop in Black Feminism Coordinator was Jaimie Crumley, a PhD student in Gender Studies.

The 2019-2020 BFI graduate cohort included:

- Alea Adigweme, Interdisciplinary Studio Art
- Akua Agyen, Anthropology
- Blair Black, Ethnomusicology
- Jaimie Crumley, Gender Studies
- Lynnette Dixon, Gender Studies
- Zama Dube, Cinema and Media Studies
- Kearra Amaya Gopee, Interdisciplinary Studio Art
- Ariel Hart, Charles R. Drew/UCLA Medical Education Program and UCLA Medical Scientist Training Program (MSTP)
- Sera Kwon, Sociology
- Taryn Marcelino, Gender Studies
- Brittnee Meitzenheimer, African American Studies
- Antwann Simpkins, Sociology
- Ariel Stevenson, Cinema and Media Studies
- Rosie Stockton, Gender Studies
- Kali Tambreé, Sociology
- Jennifer Uribe, Sociology
- Sa Whitley, Gender Studies
- Wei Si Nicole (Nic) Yiu, Gender Studies

Faculty participants included:

- Shelleen Greene, Theater, Film, and Television
- Sarah Haley, Gender Studies and African American Studies
- Grace Hong, Gender Studies and Asian American Studies
- Uri McMillan, English, Gender Studies, and Asian American Studies
- Ellen Scott, Theater, Film, and Television
- Jasmin Young, African American Studies

Meetings were held on the following dates:

- November 11, 2019 (attendance: 10)
December 2, 2019 (attendance: 17)
February 24, 2020 (attendance: 17)
April 27, 2020 (attendance: 10)
May 22, 2020 (attendance: 12)

C. Black Feminism Initiative Graduate Research Fellowships

Open to current UCLA graduate students, BFI established two fellowships to support intellectual work that centers Black feminist frameworks of analysis. In the tradition of abolitionist feminist activism and labor, BFI Graduate Fellowships seek to advance Black feminist work on any topic with a focus on scholarship that interrogates historical and ongoing regimes of violence, enclosure, and captivity and offers original insights for conceiving of freedom, redress, abolition, and refusal. Each $1,000 fellowship supports graduate research, conference travel, or the acquisition of necessary materials for in-progress dissertation or thesis projects.

Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research

This fellowship honors and continues the work of Alisa Bierria, whose writing explores race, intentionality, intimate organizing, anti-Black racism, carceral culture, gendered violence, and anti-carceral approaches to justice. At UC Berkeley, she founded the Feminist Anti-Carceral Policy and Research Initiative. With organizations such as Communities Against Rape and Abuse (CARA), the Free Marissa Now Mobilization Campaign, and Incite! Women of Color Against Violence, Bierria has meaningfully challenged sexual violence and the carceral state. Her activism has been instrumental in securing the freedom of criminalized survivors of gender violence.

The 2019-2020 Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research recipients were as follows:

- Jaimie Crumley, Gender Studies
- Brittnee Meitzenheimer, African American Studies

Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research

This fellowship honors and continues the work of Mariame Kaba, whose writing examines policing, abolition, gendered state violence, youth activism, organizing and leadership, interpersonal violence, and anti-carceral approaches to justice. She has been at the helm of numerous grassroots organizations that have educated the public, mobilized against racial terror, and challenged gender violence: Project NIA, the Chicago Freedom School, the Chicago Alliance to Free Marissa Alexander, Incite! Women of Color Against Violence, and We Charge Genocide, to name a few. She runs the social media account Prison Culture, which has reshaped public understandings of the carceral state and abolition.

Along with Ayanna Banks Harris, Sumayya Coleman, Colby Lenz, Hyejin Shim, and Stacy Suh, Bierria and Kaba co-founded Survived & Punished (S&P), a national project that develops policy and research strategies to challenge the criminalization of survivors of domestic and sexual violence. S&P organizes defense campaigns on behalf of criminalized survivors of gender violence, advocates for commutations, and produces training materials. Among the leading activists and thinkers working in abolitionist feminism, their respective lectures, scholarly and popular essays, books, educational curricula, institutional leadership, curatorial projects, and organizing have had an expansive and profound impact on scholars, public audiences, and community organizers alike.

The 2019-2020 Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research recipients were as follows:

- Bianca Beauchemin, Gender Studies
- Zama Dube, Cinema and Media Studies
- Ariel Hart, Charles R. Drew/UCLA Medical Education Program and UCLA Medical Scientist Training Program (MSTP)

D. “Black Feminism, Care, and Reproductive Justice in Urgent Times” by Kimberly Durdin

On February 10, 2020, BFI hosted a talk and dialogue with Kimberly Durdin, a birth worker and advocate for reproductive justice for women of color. She is the co-founder of Kindred Space LA, a hub for midwifery care, doula support, lactation consulting, education, support groups, enrichment, meditation, and movement. During the event, Durdin was in dialogue with PhD student Ariel Hart. The talk was attended by approximately 60 students, faculty, and community members.

E. Workshops and Co-sponsored Events

BFI invited scholars from other universities to host workshops for the Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group. These invited scholars were already planning to visit UCLA to give talks for other departments and graciously agreed to engage in dialogue with our faculty and students.

- Kevin Quashie (Professor, English, Brown University) hosted a workshop on February 13, 2020, titled “To Be a One: Black Feminist Living” with 14 attendees. This workshop coincided with a panel Quashie participated in titled “Everything Man: Author Meets Critic,” responding to the recent publication of Shana Redmond’s (Professor, Musicology and African American Studies, UCLA) book, Everything Man: The Form and Function of Paul Robeson. That event was organized by the UCLA Herb Alpert School of Music.

- Hazel V. Carby (Professor Emeritus, African American Studies and American Studies, Yale University) hosted a workshop on March 3, 2020, titled “Black Feminism as a Refusal of Empire,” with 14 attendees. This workshop coincided with a talk Carby gave, titled “Imperial Intimacies: A Tale of Two Cities,” organized by English and co-sponsored by BFI.
Emily Thuma (Assistant Professor; Politics, Philosophy and Public Affairs; University of Washington Tacoma) hosted a workshop on March 5, 2020, titled “Anti-carceral/Radical Feminist History and Theory” with 14 attendees. Thuma was also a keynote panelist at Thinking Gender 2020.

F. CSW and Campus Support of the Black Feminism Initiative
Along with providing administrative support, CSW is committed to providing financial support to BFI programming and students. With graduate students in dire need of financial support to continue their graduate studies, CSW provided $35,750 in mutual aid to support the graduate fellowships, the Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group Coordinator, and students in need, particularly those whose social justice work is in the area of Black feminism. Of those funds, $30,000 will be used at the discretion of the BFI Director and Working Group until the funds are expended.

Financial Support
BFI Director Sarah Haley contributes $15,000 per year from research funds she received from the Social Sciences Division to support BFI, and the funds are housed at CSW. BFI also receives donor and co-sponsor support. The following UCLA organizations and donors provided financial support for BFI’s programs, graduate student fellowships, and events.

Letter to the UCLA Administration to Support Black Feminist Studies at UCLA
In light of the large-scale national protests against anti-Black racism and police violence throughout Spring 2020, Sarah Haley requested a long-term commitment from UCLA Chancellor Gene Block and Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Emily Carter to support Black feminist studies on campus, recognizing the unique and vital contribution Black feminists offer to the project of dismantling white supremacist patriarchal structures everywhere. The letter asked for divestment from campus policing and requested various forms of support for BFI and other units on campus that directly advocate for Black lives.

G. Future Goals

“The Sound of Self-Regard: A Reunion Celebration in Honor of Toni Morrison”
In Spring 2020, BFI was set to organize an event, with co-sponsorship from Musicology, African American Studies, the Ralph J. Bunche Center for African American Studies, the Humanities Discretionary Fund, and the UC Humanities Research Institute, honoring the legacy of Toni Morrison. The event, a mixer with the Faculty/Graduate Student Working Group, was to take place at the Los Angeles-based Underground Museum and to center Morrison’s influence on Black feminist art and world-making by thinking about her work as a composition that encompasses a range of artistic forms. The event was to feature a curated Morrison visual archive, readings, and musical guest Alice Smith; DJ scholar Lynnée Denise planned to curate a Toni Morrison-themed playlist. Due to COVID-19, this event was postponed to the 2020-2021 academic year.

Conversations in Black Feminism Virtual Salon
During the 2020-2021 academic year, BFI will invite groundbreaking scholar-activists to give salon conversations to members of the UCLA community working in Black feminism. If conditions permit, we will host an in-person salon in Spring 2021.

The Black Feminism Common Book Project
In September 2020, BFI will host a national virtual discussion of a “common book” that centers Black feminist thinking. We plan to collaborate with the Free Black Women’s Library of Los Angeles for this project.

Black Feminism Initiative Summer Mutual Aid
During Summer 2020, BFI will distribute small mutual aid funding grants to its members to address emergencies related to COVID-19.

Black Feminism Graduate-Undergraduate Collaborative
In the 2020-2021 academic year, BFI will begin a graduate-undergraduate student collaborative in which graduate members of BFI will be paired with undergraduate students generally interested in Black feminist intellectual, political, and professional mentorship and company.

VI. FEMINIST ANTI-CARCERAL STUDIES

A. What is Feminist Anti-Carceral Studies?
Led by Black Feminism Initiative Director and CSW Advisory Committee Chair Sarah Haley and CSW Associate Director Grace Hong, this research stream combines research, dissemination of scholarship, engagement with social justice feminist organizations, and institution-building through an anti-carceral feminist framework of analysis. Anti-carceral feminism contests the use of gender as a justification for prison expansion and works against the increasing incarceration of women, queer, and transgender people. This is especially critical in California, where legislators have employed the language of gender-responsiveness to fund prison expansion. This project attends to specific forms of gendered and racial violence in prisons and jails, including sexual violence and retaliation, and to the disproportionate impact of prisons on LGBTQ communities. The project also examines the relationship of incarceration to reproductive and economic justice, and highlights movements to oppose the carceral state as critical to social justice feminism.
B. Policy Brief: Rethinking Policy on Gender, Sexuality, and Women’s Issues

For the 2019-2020 Policy Brief Prize competition, CSW released a call on the theme “Confronting the Carceral State, Reimagining Justice.” The call invited policy briefs that boldly re-imagine justice in the United States, placing the needs of LGBTQ communities, communities of color, and survivors of violence at the fore. In addition to soliciting UC graduate student submissions, CSW collaborated with the California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP) to solicit submissions from community activists and system-impacted individuals. The policy brief will be published in August 2020.

CSW awarded six prizes, three to UC graduate students and three to system-impacted authors.

📣 UC Graduate Students

- June Kuoch, UCLA, Asian American Studies
  “Stop ‘Crimmigration!’ Stop Southeast Asian Refugee Deportations!”

- Boké Saisi, UC San Diego, Ethnic Studies
  “Incarceration and Mental Wellness are Incommensurable – A Call to Decarcerate”

- Rosie Stockton, UCLA, Gender Studies
  “Ensuring Access to Rehabilitative Programs and Ending Discrimination Against People Serving Life Without Parole”

📣 System-Impacted Authors

- Jane Dorotik, Member of CCWP and founder of Compassionate Companions, an organization within the California Institution for Women (CIW) that provides care for terminally ill incarcerated people
  “Release Elderly Lifers to Reduce Mass Incarceration”

- Romarilyn Ralston (with Ginny Oshiro and Fidelia Santos-Aminy), Program Director of Project Rebound at California State University, Fullerton, and organizer with CCWP
  “Long-Term Incarcerated People Need Retirement Benefits”

- Joanne Scheer, Founder of the Felony Murder Elimination Project “Unequal Punishment: Repealing Felony Murder Special Circumstances”

C. UC Sentencing Commission Project

Grace Hong received a faculty seed grant from the Institute on Inequality and Democracy at UCLA Luskin and a Faculty Research Grant from the UCLA Council on Research in support of the UC Sentencing Commission Project. The funds were used to gather, analyze, and disseminate data on long-term prison sentences in California’s communities, focusing on Los Angeles in particular. The data allows community members and policymakers to understand how long-term incarceration affects Los Angeles and other California communities. Working with community partner organization California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP), the project tracked how gender, race, socioeconomic status, region/county, and other factors influence the length of sentences and parole decisions.

Focus Groups and Peer Interviews

Data was collected through focus groups and peer interviews held at UCLA on December 7-8, 2019. A total of 22 formerly incarcerated participants, all of whom identify as women, transgender, or non-binary, took part in the focus groups and peer interviews, which were facilitated by Hong and other members of CCWP. We brought in 11 participants for each day. For the first half of the day, we trained the participants in interview techniques, paired the participants, and had them interview each other following a set of questions we had developed in advance with the guidance of formerly incarcerated organizers. In the second half of the day, we gathered the participants in a focus group so that they could share their thoughts in a more conversational setting. Topics included circumstances and conditions of arrest and pre-trial detainment; experiences with court, trial, prosecution, and defense; the lack of information throughout the process; factors influencing sentencing including the use of enhancements, the political leanings of judges and prosecutors; differences based on date of sentencing and county of conviction; and the effects of gender, sexuality, and race in sentencing and parole. The facilitator and participants were compensated with honoraria and complementary parking permits, and reimbursed for gas mileage, airfare, and/or ride-share costs. Refreshments and lunch were served during the focus group meetings.

We generated over 30 hours of recorded data, which a team of graduate and undergraduate researchers transcribed and coded. Based on this data, we are preparing a report which we will disseminate to legislators, community-based organizations, and scholarly publications.

D. Future Goals

Archival Project: Gender and Everyday Carceral Labor

To understand the full character of policing and the lives of those impacted, this project will build a documentary and oral history archive of the gendered work of negotiating mass incarceration. This work entails engaging with police; caring for children during the course of police action; cleaning homes following searches; repairing the damage to objects and to the home itself from these searches; and attending to the needs of elderly, infirm, and disabled residents during and after police encounters. This project emphasizes the daily labor and cultural experiences of family members performing the work of carceral negotiation and care. This labor is disproportionately performed by women of color: wives, sisters, girlfriends, mothers, grandmothers, aunts, and friends of women and men who have been interrogated, arrested, and incarcerated.

While existing research has determined how much the city has spent to imprison members of the heavily policed communities of South Los Angeles, this archival and oral history project will investigate how much residents have spent—in the form of money, labor, and emotional expenditures—to manage policing. In addition to documenting the financial toll and work of carceral confrontation, practices of resistance, collective and individual resilience and repair, and valuable perspectives on policing and incarceration will be explored.

VII. GENDER AND EVERYDAY WATER USE IN LOS ANGELES HOUSEHOLDS

A. What is Gender and Water?

The Gender and Everyday Water Use in Los Angeles Households research stream (referred to as Gender and Water), led by CSW Senior Faculty Research Associate and Associate Professor of Anthropology Jessica Cattelino, is now in its fourth year. Funded by a grant from UCLA’s Sustainable Los Angeles Grand Challenge Program in 2016, this research stream is primarily focused on a study that investigates the important but understudied role of gender—as it intersects with race and class—in residential water use in Los Angeles. Many much-needed Los Angeles water conservation efforts take place within households, where research has shown that divisions of labor and decision-making often are gendered. The Gender and Water research team incorporates mixed methods—particularly ethnographic interviewing and water diaries—to identify patterns in water perceptions and practices that are vital to efforts of change.

During the 2019-2020 academic year, Cattelino and a research team of PhD students, MA students, and undergraduates continued their work with 38 households in four neighborhoods: Inglewood, Koreatown, MacArthur Park, and Beverly Hills. In previous years, researchers had visited participants’ homes and completed observations, conducted interviews about home water use, and collected participant-completed water-use diaries. In 2018-2019, the research team focused on analyzing and interpreting interview transcripts and other data. This year, we reviewed recent literature, synthesized data analysis, and began writing articles for publication. The team’s major accomplishment was the publication of five working papers (see below).

The 2019-2020 research team members were as follows:

- Megan Baker, Graduate Student, Anthropology
- Jessica Cattelino, Principal Investigator, Anthropology and CSW
- Courtney Cecale, Graduate Student, Anthropology
- Kelsey Kim, Graduate Student, Anthropology
- PwintPhyu Nandar, Undergraduate Student, Environmental Science
• Dalila Ozier, Graduate Student, Anthropology

B. Gender and Water Working Papers
A set of five working papers by Gender and Water student researchers were published on CSW’s eScholarship site (hosted by the California Digital Library) in Fall 2019: https://escholarship.org/uc/ucla_genderandwater. The working papers present preliminary results from the Gender and Water study and address a variety of topics that center on the everyday lives of Angelenos. The student researchers’ work connects everyday life to the large-scale questions of water scarcity and management that face our world in the twenty-first century.

The authors and titles of the papers are as follows:

• Megan Baker, “Myths of Fifty-Fifty: Household Water Use and Gendered Divisions of Labor in Los Angeles”
• Kelsey Kim, “Conservation, Division of Labor, and the Low-Hanging Fruit of Chores: Tracking Los Angeles Household Water Usage Through Diary Keeping”
• PwintPhyu Nandar, “Overlooked and Underrepresented: How Immigrant Households in Los Angeles Conserve Water”
• Dalila Ozier, “Portrait of a City at the End of the World: Los Angeles’s Discourses of Disaster”

C. Future Goals
Future goals include a policy brief, peer-reviewed journal articles, and other forms of public outreach.

VIII. FOSTERING TRANSFORMATIVE OPPORTUNITIES FOR SCHOLARS

A. CSW Advisory Committee (CSWAC) and Executive Board
In order to maintain an environment where scholars can explore new frontiers of knowledge on women, sexuality, and gender, the CSW Director and Associate Director draw on the expertise of the Advisory Committee, all distinguished scholars in their own fields, to develop, refine, and advise on our mission. CSWAC members also serve on award selection committees. CSWAC is led by Chair Sarah Haley, who also chaired the search committee for the next CSW Director.

CSWAC consists of 80 members, six of whom are members of the Executive Board and three of whom are ex-officio members. The Executive Board, established in 2016, meets once a quarter, and/or based on need, to handle quarterly governance and discuss current issues.
In keeping with our mission to build intellectual community across fields and disciplines, CSWAC meets once a quarter and features research presentations and/or interactive discussions of relevant feminist topics.

Fall 2019 (November 18, 2019; 26 attendees)
- In preparation for the Director search, no faculty presentations were made. Agenda items included the CSW Director transition, potential UCLA funding changes for centers, and plans for CSW’s 35th Anniversary Campaign.

Winter 2020 (March 16, 2020; 25 attendees; offered via Zoom)
- Kimberly Narain, Assistant Professor-in-Residence, David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA
  “Economic and Social Factors in Women’s Health”

Spring 2020 (June 3, 2020; 30 attendees; offered via Zoom)
- Due to the Director search and transition, no faculty presentations were made. Agenda items included the CSW Director search, updates on the CSW research streams, and a special surprise farewell for Director Rachel C. Lee.

The 2019-2020 CSWAC members are as follows:

CSW Advisory Committee Executive Board
- Jessica Cattelino
  Associate Professor, Anthropology; Senior Faculty Research Associate, CSW
- Susan Ettner
  Professor, General Internal Medicine and Health Services Research
- Sarah Haley
  Associate Professor, Gender Studies and African American Studies; Advisory Committee Chair, CSW

B. Research Excellence Awards for UCLA Associate Professors

Now in its fourth year, the Research Excellence Award for UCLA Associate Professors was offered once again by CSW and the Institute of American Cultures (IAC). This award consists of a monograph manuscript (or equivalent) workshop to promote continuing excellence in scholarship that addresses questions important to the fields of critical race and postcolonial studies and/or gender, sexuality, and ethnic studies by UCLA professors at the associate level. Award recipients are nominated by a fellow faculty member, from inside or outside of UCLA. If selected, the recipient’s nominator also co-organizes the workshop. Each workshop organizer invites a distinguished external reader from the recipient’s field, as well as a select group of local colleagues and intellectual interlocutors to read the manuscript and provide detailed feedback. The workshop’s goal is to provide awardees an extended and detailed discussion of their manuscript to develop a pragmatic plan of action for revisions.

CSW Associate Director Grace Hong served as the chair of the award committee, reviewing applications and overseeing the organizational process for the workshops.

2018-2019 Award Recipients
Due to COVID-19, Lieba Faier (Geography) postponed her workshop to Summer 2020. Also due to COVID-19, recipients Gaye Theresa Johnson (African American Studies and Chicana/o Studies) and Jemima Pierre (African American Studies and Anthropology) were unable to hold their workshops and returned the funds to CSW.

2019-2020 Award Recipient
Due to COVID-19, Erin Debenport (Anthropology) postponed her workshop to the 2020-2021 academic year.

2020-2021 Award Recipient
CSW and IAC received and awarded one application for next year's cycle, which will fund one workshop for the following recipient:

- Jessica Schwartz, Musicology
  Misfit Musicology
Co-sponsorship
In addition to funds and staffing support provided by CSW, the Institute of American Cultures co-sponsored the Research Excellence Award for UCLA Associate Professors.

C. Faculty Research Grants
Every year, CSW offers grants to UCLA faculty for research development, new project development that may lead to external funding opportunities, and project completion that could be considered for CSW publications (policy briefs, research reports).

2018-2019 Recipients Update
The following grant recipients received extensions for their grants and provided updates on their progress.

Molly Fox, Assistant Professor, Anthropology
“Discrepancies between origin and host environments among pregnant Mexican-American women: Implications for transgenerational health in a minority population”

The overarching goal of this project is to examine how degree of contrast between a woman’s life and environment before versus after migration may relate to her health and well-being. A primary goal of this project is to develop novel methods for measuring degree of contrast between a woman’s life and environment before versus after migration. This project focuses on pregnant women because any aspect of the mother’s life that affects her physiology during pregnancy has the potential to transmit differential signals to the developing fetus and thereby play a role in shaping offspring traits. I posit that this construct could represent an independent stressor or moderator of stress effects that has been otherwise overlooked in studies of intergenerational transmission of stress among minority populations. This project utilizes participants from my ongoing Mothers’ Cultural Experiences (MCE) study, which involves self-identified Hispanic pregnant women recruited from prenatal clinics in Southern California.

This grant supported the following research aims: recruited graduate and undergraduate research assistants, completed a literature review, conducted questionnaire design and administration, and conducted data cleaning and analyses (ongoing).

Thus far, the analyses have yielded one manuscript, “Discrimination as a moderator of the effects of acculturation and cultural values on mental health among pregnant and postpartum Latina women,” submitted to American Anthropologist for

I am currently advising a new Master's student in a project building off my CSW project, exploring how changes in neighborhood and household environments affect maternal mental and physical health among pregnant Latinas. I am also working with two PhD students to draft a manuscript that grows out of my CSW project entitled, “The role of perceived individual versus neighborhood cultural identity on maternal mental health in a pregnant Latina population.”

To read the full report, see Appendix 12.

Felicia Hodge, Professor, Nursing
“An Exploration and Feasibility Assessment for the Study of the Health and Environment of Homeless Women”

This grant benefited our research in several ways. First, it allowed us to collect pilot data on the lived environment of homeless women in Los Angeles County. We collected data on homeless women’s reports on the circumstances that moved them into homelessness (such as financial problems and violence), length of homelessness, and what it would take to help them move out of homelessness. This data provided rich data that will assist in the development of our next proposal, conducting an in-depth analysis of issues facing homeless women.

A concrete deliverable obtained so far is a report on health status by race and length of homelessness. This will give us a snapshot on the two cohorts of interest: those women newly homeless and those who have been homeless for some time now.

We plan on expanding our study to report on the response to COVID-19 among the homeless shelter staff, to more closely report on data provided by American Indian/Alaska Native homeless women, and to publish a manuscript on violence faced by homeless women.

2019-2020 Recipients
The following faculty were chosen for this year’s Faculty Research Grants.

Lorrie Frasure-Yokley, Associate Professor, Political Science
“Intersecting Identities Project (IIP)”

The Graduate Student Research (GSR) support from the CSW Faculty Research Grant helped to advance several research projects on race, gender, and political behavior. I completed a book chapter titled, “Not in ‘Mixed-Company’?: Dialogues about Women and the Race Gap in American Politics” published in The Hillary Effect: Perspectives on Clinton’s Legacy, edited by Ivy Cargile, Denise Davis, Jennifer Merolla, and Rachel VanSickle-Ward, Bloomsbury Press (July 2020). I have also received a 'revise and resubmit' from the National Review of Black Politics for the article “Destined to Run?: The Role of Civic Engagement on Black Women's Decision to Run for Elected Office” with Jamil Scott, Nadia Brown, and Dianne M. Pinderhughes. This article examines the extent to which Black women's level of civic engagement influences their likelihood of considering political office as compared to other groups of women. We theorize that running for office is a form of political participation and that previous political activity can act as a predictor for political ambition. We explore the likelihood that civic engagement matters for Black women being asked to run and considering running for office on their own. Using data from the 2016 Collaborative Multiracial Post-Election Survey (CMPS), a unique dataset that provides a large and generalizable sample of racial and ethnic groups in the United States, we examine political ambition beyond the groups, which have traditionally run for political office. In sum, our data indicate that political participation significantly predicts being asked to run and thinking about running for office. These results reveal the importance of thinking beyond the traditional candidacy pool and how socio-political factors matter for key determinants of seeking political office (being asked and having considered running). We are revising this article for resubmission. I am currently working on my book-length project on race, gender, geographic identity, and political behavior between women of color and white women in the United States.

Due to COVID-19, the following 2019-2020 Faculty Research Grant recipients were granted extensions to 2020-2021:

- Kian Goh, Assistant Professor, Urban Planning
  “Resilience from Below: Community Visions of Just Urban Futures in Post-Hurricane Sandy New York City”

- Liz Koslov, Assistant Professor, Urban Planning “Retreat: Moving to Higher Ground in a Climate-Changed City”

- Norma Mendoza-Denton, Professor, Anthropology
  “Norteñas: Developing a graphic ethnography format for stories of Latina girls involved in gangs”

2020-2021 Recipients
CSW awarded 2020-2021 Faculty Research Grants to seven faculty recipients:

- Cesar Favila, Assistant Professor, Musicology
  “Immaculate Sounds: The Musical Lives of Nuns in New Spain”

- Jana Gallus, Assistant Professor, Management
  “Addressing the gender gap in STEM: How to mitigate self-stereotyping with recognition incentives”
Kevan Harris, Assistant Professor, Sociology
“Assessing Informal Economic Activities among Women with the Iran Social Survey”

Roya Ijadi-Maghsoodi, Assistant Professor In Residence, Psychiatry
“Improving Outcomes for Homeless-Experienced Mothers with Histories of Substance Use and Trauma”

Katherine Marino, Associate Professor, History
“Felicia Santizo, Anti-Imperialist Feminism and the US Military in Panama”

Lauren Ng, Assistant Professor, Psychology
“Health service disparities among youth who have experienced sexual violence: The role of intersectional identities”

Hyun Suk Park, Assistant Professor, Asian Languages and Cultures
“The Government Courtesan: Status, Gender, and Performance in Chosŏn Korea, 1392-1910”

D. Research Affiliates Program
The Research Affiliates Program, which was established in 2015 and replaced the Research Scholars Program, continues to support selected engaged independent scholars, local to the Los Angeles area, who conduct research on women, sexuality, and/or gender and have limited access to a research community. Affiliates must have an active research project in progress and neither a tenure-track position nor a permanent, full-time academic affiliation with a college or university. CSW encourages affiliation from a diverse group of scholars from across academic disciplines. The goal of this program is to build an intimate community of independent researchers whose work may enrich and be enriched by congress with UCLA campus faculty.

Affiliates receive various support for their projects, including access to CSW computer resources, grants, and UCLA parking passes. CSW also continues to work with the UCLA Library in order to provide special book borrowing privileges to Research Affiliates. This arrangement has been in place since December 15, 2016, when CSW and the UCLA Library signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU), which allows Affiliates to borrow up to 50 books at a time, renewable remotely with no limit on renewals.

This year, we were proud to support and offer services to 12 Research Affiliates. For a complete list of Research Affiliates as well as their accomplishments and publications from the 2019-2020 academic year, see Appendix 8.
Tillie Olsen Grants for Research Affiliates

Affiliates are also eligible to apply for research funding through the Tillie Olsen Grants for Research Affiliates program, established by Research Affiliate Pat Zukow-Goldring, to support work by independent scholars.

In 2020, CSW awarded three Tillie Olsen Grants to support the work of the Affiliates below:

- Becky Nicolaides

- Lara Schubert
  “Retheorizing Women’s Empowerment with Insights from Cambodian Women”

- Kathleen Sheldon
  “African Women’s History”

Research Affiliates Brown Bags

On October 29, 2019, Kathleen Sheldon presented “Down with Bridewealth! The Organization of Mozambican Women Debates Women’s Issues,” which drew on her research on African women’s history and Mozambique. Seven individuals attended, including Research Affiliates and community members.

A Brown Bag had been scheduled for May 8, 2020, but was canceled due to COVID-19.

IX. CELEBRATING 35 YEARS OF RESEARCH THAT RETHINKS: COMMEMORATING CSW’S HISTORY

A. Celebrating 35 Years as the Leading Center on Women, Gender, and Sexuality

For 35 years, CSW has been UCLA’s feminist nucleus as the first gender studies research unit in the University of California system. To commemorate CSW’s 35 years of accomplishments, CSW launched its 35th Anniversary campaign in the 2019-2020 academic year. We set a fundraising goal of $350,000 and revamped our Giving Page to highlight CSW’s achievements and research initiatives since its inception. On December 3, 2019, CSW participated in #GivingTuesday, creating a call for donations to help support our foundational research and maintain free public programming.
Members of the CSW community were encouraged to share the call using the hashtag #CSW35.

Other goals during the 2019-2020 academic year included creating a retrospective of CSW's history through spotlight interviews with CSW Directors, a comprehensive visual timeline, and exhibits. Most excitedly, we planned to feature powerhouse activist of #BlackLivesMatter and Supermajority Alicia Garza as the Keynote Speaker and recipient of the 2020 CSW Distinguished Leader in Feminism Award at the 2020 Awards and Benefit Reception. Staff transitions, shifting priorities on important social justice causes, and COVID-19 unfortunately delayed progress on our 35th Anniversary Celebration and postponed the Reception, but we are thrilled to feature Garza and the 2020 CSW award recipients at a rescheduled virtual event in October 2020.

B. A Retrospective of CSW’s History
To underscore CSW’s history, we conducted oral history interviews with Founding Director Karen Rowe (1984-1988) and Director Sandra Harding (1996-1999). Interviews with other former directors, including Carrie Menkel-Meadow (1988-1990), Kathryn Norberg (1992-1995), and Kathleen McHugh (2005-2012, 2013-2014), were also planned but unfortunately delayed as a result of COVID-19. Despite these roadblocks, CSW will publish narrative histories of former directors to honor their legacies. These histories will be incorporated into a visual timeline that commemorates major events and key figures in CSW's history. The footage from the Rowe and Harding interviews will be used in new sizzle reels for the 35th Anniversary video series. Both the timeline and the sizzle reels will premiere at the 2020 Awards and Benefit Reception.

X. SOCIAL JUSTICE FEMINISM IN ACTION

A. Supporting Social Justice Activism on Campus
While a much-needed call for action and change was made on the nationwide level to end racial profiling and police brutality, a similar impact was felt on the campus level with CSW supporting multiple social justice causes.

On March 5, 2020, UCLA graduate students went on a one-day strike in response to the firing of 82 graduate students who went on a wildcat strike for higher wages at UC Santa Cruz in December 2019. Under the moniker “UCLA 4 COLA” (COLA is an acronym for “cost-of-living adjustment”), organizers advocated for wage increases adjusted to the cost of living and affordable housing for all graduate students in the UC system. CSW stood in solidarity of the cause by writing a letter of support of “UC 4 COLA” and giving our graduate student researchers the option to participate in the strike without retaliation or negative impact to their wages. CSW Associate Director Grace Hong, CSW Advisory Committee (CSWAC) Chair Sarah Haley, and CSWAC Member Mishuana Goeman attended and spoke at the “UCLA 4 COLA” rally that took place on March 5 at Janss Steps. Because we had two events scheduled on that day, at the request of the “UCLA 4 COLA” organizers and as opposed to cancelling the event, we moved the Black Feminism Initiative Faculty/Graduate Working Group meeting with Professor Emily Thuma to Janss Steps. Relocating the event near the rally site showcased a collaborative form of support of the cause and allowed more people to be exposed to the important discussion on abolitionist feminism and feminist social movement organizing in the 1970s and 1980s.

On May 1, 2020, “UCLA 4 COLA” and COLA organizers statewide planned a May Day strike, in overlap with International Worker’s Day, requesting all faculty, students, staff, and administrators cease work for the day. CSW once again supported this strike by closing the office for the day.

As described in section V.F., CSW supported the Black Feminism Initiative’s open letter to ask that campus administration permanently support BFI through institutional resources. CSW also co-signed a “Statement for Justice” alongside other academic units to “affirm the solidarity among Black, Indigenous, Latinx, Asian and allied peoples in our research communities to abolish obvious examples of state violence.”

For a full list of letters of support written by CSW, see Appendix 9.

B. Lending a Financial Hand to Gender Studies

Amidst a global pandemic and UC-wide budgetary constraints, students continue to struggle to receive adequate funding and compensation in order to maintain a reasonable standard of living during their academic studies. With our commitment to social justice and equity, CSW provided financial support to graduate students across campus whose research focuses on gender, women, and/or social justice.

CSW maintains a long-standing and collaborative relationship with the Department of Gender Studies. In order to support their high-achieving students, CSW Director Rachel C. Lee established an annual graduate student emergency fund in the amount of $5,000 per year to be in effect for three years, with an option for renewal at the end of the term, and to be used at Gender Studies’ discretion. In early April 2020, Gender Studies provided $1,000 stipends to support the following graduate students:

- Lynette Dixon
- Jessica Fremland
- Sarah Montoya
- Talia Gomez Quintana
- Mary Robbins

CSW also increased the financial commitment for the Irving & Jean Stone Recruitment Fellowship by awarding three years of nonresident supplemental tuition (NRST) to recipient Yurim Lee, who will enter the PhD program in Gender Studies in 2020-2021. The Fellowship, awarded annually to a Gender Studies PhD student during their first year in the program, normally consists of a $25,000 stipend and standard in-state fees. Since nonresident and international students must pay an additional $15,102 on top of in-state fees, providing multiple years of NRST funding allows the students to... focus on their research and not be forced to work multiple positions in order to cover the additional tuition.

In addition to providing summer stipends to graduate students working with the Black Feminism Initiative, CSW provided summer stipends to 10 Gender Studies graduate students (see section V). The Graduate Division initially promised summer stipends of $7,500 to graduate students who did not have other opportunities for summer funding with the use of UCLA Centennial Campaign funds. Upon further discussion, the Graduate Division found that they did not have access to funds to properly provide the stipends. Therefore, CSW utilized our Irving & Jean Stone endowment funds, earmarked specifically for graduate student research focused on women, gender, and/or sexuality, to provide or supplement summer support to students in need.

C. Gender Research Center Conference

On March 9, 2020, CSW Associate Director Grace Hong attended the Gender Research Center Conference, held at the Newcomb Institute at Tulane University in New Orleans, Louisiana. The conference was attended by representatives from gender studies research units across the country and provided an opportunity to share innovations and address the pressing challenges that all gender studies research centers share. The conference organizers hosted a series of skill-building workshops and presentations on topics such as “Sexual Harassment Policy Reform on Campus,” “Strategic Planning and Marketing,” and “Digital Humanities.” This meeting was a continuation of the previous gathering hosted in April 2018 at the University of Michigan’s Institute for Research on Women and Gender, attended by CSW Director Rachel C. Lee and former CSW Program and Research Developer Alexandra Apolloni.

D. Gender and Caretaking during COVID-19

UCLA Professor Louise Hornby (English) first raised this issue at a research roundtable with UCLA Vice Chancellor for Research Roger Wakimoto: that female employees appeared to be bearing the brunt of additional caretaking duties ensuing from the closures of various child- and elder-care programs and schools as a consequence of COVID-19. In June/July 2020, CSW (immediate past) Director Rachel C. Lee, along with half a dozen colleagues from English, wrote an “Open Letter on Research Productivity and Childcare” to Chancellor Gene Block and Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Emily Carter, urging six concrete actions to proactively support faculty, staff, and student caretakers and thereby protect recent gains toward gender equity. Inspired by women of color professor-organizers at other campuses (Michelle McKinley’s “Campaign for Caregivers” at the University of Oregon), CSW made it possible to publicize quickly and garner broad local support for these concrete steps. A caretaking taskforce has approved implementation of select action items. Through sharing this letter at the UC systemwide Committee on the Status of Women, CSW has inspired other UC campuses to propose similar solutions for their faculty.

B. CSW Faculty and Staff Accomplishments

Faculty Leader Accomplishments

In addition to their research and administrative roles with CSW, the four faculty who comprise the CSW Faculty Leadership team also serve the UC mission in their professorial roles through research, teaching, and service. Each faculty leader is prominent in, and contributes significant research to, their respective fields. The following is only a snapshot of the many accomplishments our faculty leaders have achieved over the past year.

Rachel C. Lee, CSW Director and Professor of English, Gender Studies, and Institute for Society and Genetics

- Awards
  - UCLA Chancellor’s Award for Community-Engaged Research (2020).

- Presentations:
  - “UCLA Center for the Study of Women's Chemical Entanglements as Innovative STS Infrastructure” (poster presentation, Innovating STS Exhibit, Annual Meeting of the Society for the Social Study of Science, New Orleans, LA, September 2019).
• Publications
  ▪ Edited a collection of fourteen original essays, interviews, and artworks for the Special Section “Chemical Entanglements: Gender & Exposure,” Catalyst: Feminism, Theory Technoscience 6, no. 1 (Spring 2020).

Grace Hong, CSW Associate Director and Professor of Asian American Studies and Gender Studies

• Awards
  ▪ UCLA Undergraduate Research Week Faculty Mentor Award (2020).

• Conferences

• Publications

• Speaking Engagements
  ▪ “Militarized Trauma and the Failures of Verisimilitude” (Phebe Spalding Lecture, Pomona College, Pomona, CA, April 24, 2020, cancelled due to COVID-19).
  ▪ Center for the Study of Genders and Sexualities (roundtable panelist, California State University Los Angeles, Los Angeles, CA, March 12, 2020, cancelled due to COVID-19).
  ▪ “Trauma, Memory, and the Vicissitudes of Virtuality” (American Studies Bud Shaw Lecture, Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA, February 3, 2020).
  ▪ “Virtual Violence: Trauma and Memory in Gina Kim's 'Bloodless/Dongducheon’” (presentation, Center for the Study of Race, Indigeneity, and Transnational Migration, Yale University, New Haven, CT, October 3, 2019).
Sarah Haley, CSW Advisory Committee Chair; Black Feminism Initiative Director; Associate Professor of Gender Studies and African American Studies

- Projects
  - Launched CSW's Black Feminism Initiative, which included organizing the faculty-graduate workshop, curating guest speaker salons, co-organizing a public lecture by Hazel V. Carby, and organizing a public event on Black feminism and reproductive justice.

- Publications

Jessica Cattelino, CSW Senior Faculty Research Associate and Associate Professor of Anthropology

- Conferences

- Grants
  - National Science Foundation RAISE grant for “Bringing Together Diverse Perspectives on Water” (2019, #1936715, $1,000,000), co-PI with Aradhna Tripati (PI) and Shannon Speed (co-PI).

- Publications

Speaking Engagements
- “Passions for Interests: Water and Rural Political Belonging” (speaker, Fluid Ecologies Conference, Stanford University, Stanford, CA, February 21, 2019).
- “Watershed: Rural Political Belonging and Ecosystem Restoration in the Contemporary United States” (speaker, Tod Spieker Colloquium Series, Department of Geography, UCLA, Los Angeles, CA, May 13, 2019).

Staff Accomplishments

CSW prides itself on creating a positive working environment, which includes promoting and encouraging staff development. The CSW staff excelled in personal and professional development opportunities inside and outside of their job duties over the past year.

- Katja Antoine: Antoine has started the 10-course UCLA Campus Human Resources Supervisory Certificate Series, which is designed to broaden mastery of employment policies and practices necessary to succeed in the supervision of others.

- Arielle Bagood: Bagood expanded her role by overseeing all branding, outreach, design, social media, and website for CSW. Additionally, she directed two films that were featured at the Asian American Studies Festival in March 2020, an event that CSW co-sponsored: 1) Hiya: Queer Filipino Americans and Mental Health (shown on March 8, 2020), which first premiered at CSW’s Thinking Gender 2018 Conference and 2) Lights Up: Asian American Theater at UCLA (postponed due to COVID-19).

- Melissa Jamero: Jamero completed her participation in the 2018-2019 UCLA Staff Enrichment Program (SEP), which fosters career development and provides skill-building opportunities for staff in administrative support positions, at a Graduation Ceremony on November 19, 2019. On October 16, 2019, she presented her SEP capstone project, which consisted of a comprehensive manual for her position as CSW Administrative Specialist. Jamero also received a UCLA Staff Assembly staff scholarship in the amount of $500 to support her career enhancement and professional growth, and was promoted to Senior Administrative Analyst with the UCLA Rolfe-Campbell Humanities Group.

• Kristina Magpayo Nyden: In addition to being on maternity leave during Fall 2019, Magpayo Nyden was promoted to Chief Administrative Officer with the UCLA Rolfe-Campbell Humanities Group.

C. Faculty and Staff Retreat

On July 11, 2019, CSW faculty leadership, CSW Advisory Committee Executive Board members, and staff held a one-day, off-site retreat at a local faculty residence to discuss the current state of CSW and prepare for the next academic year. Facilitated by Campus Human Resources Training & Development Lead Manager Rejeana Mathis, faculty and staff discussed the progress and vision for the CSW research streams, exchanged ideas on applying for specific grants for each stream, and brainstormed ideas for leveraging the impact of our upcoming 35th Anniversary Celebration. In addition, we discussed key components to prepare for the Director transition. The collaboration between faculty and staff, including inviting Executive Board members Susan Ettner and Sean Metzger for the first time, has proven to be successful in focusing the mission and objectives for the next year as well as enhancing teambuilding and engagement.

D. Faculty Affiliates

CSW fosters collaboration and is enriched by the breadth of knowledge provided by faculty connections across the UCLA campus. Since its inception, CSW has curated various faculty affiliations to maintain the network of collaboration, including the CSW Advisory Committee (CSWAC), Faculty Affiliates, and a comprehensive Faculty Database of faculty who are women and/or whose work aligns with CSW’s mission. Affiliated faculty come from all colleges and professional schools, creating a network of UCLA faculty committed to supporting and advancing research on women, gender, and sexuality. Because CSWAC, in the past, was kept relatively small, the Faculty Affiliates program included 175-200 faculty. Inclusion in the Faculty Affiliates program requires that CSW write letters for faculty in review for merits and promotions. However, since not all faculty are regularly involved in CSW activities, letters have often become cumbersome to compose.

In 2016, several changes were made to CSWAC’s structure that called for changes to the Faculty Affiliates program. The CSWAC Chair position was separated from the Associate Director’s duties and became its own role. We expanded the size of CSWAC from an average of 20-30 members to an average of 60-80 members, and created a smaller Executive Board, consisting of 5-6 faculty, within CSWAC to fulfill advisory roles to the Director and Associate Director. Due to the increase in CSWAC membership, the Faculty Affiliates program became redundant and no longer necessary. Therefore, CSW decided to end the Faculty Affiliates program as of June 30, 2020, to be officially replaced by CSWAC, where faculty can carry an official role with CSW and participate regularly in the CSW community.
For a complete list of the 2019-2020 Faculty Affiliates, see Appendix 7. Those on the list will be invited to join CSWAC and/or added to the Faculty Database, if they are not already included.

XII. STATISTICS

A. CSW Fiscal Overview

CSW receives an annual budget of $75,000 from the Division of Social Sciences to fund operations, research, and programs. In addition, the Division provides course releases and stipends for faculty leadership, and salaries and benefits for three full-time staff members, full-time and part-time limited and contract staff employees, multiple part-time graduate student researchers, and undergraduate student researchers and employees. CSW’s other sources of funding include gift funds, cosponsorships from UCLA partners, and contracts and grants.

B. Events

CSW showcases cutting-edge, interdisciplinary research through diverse events throughout the year, including lectures, fairs, roundtables, meetings, panels, workshops, and conferences. Additionally, CSW sets aside a portion of our annual budget to financially support events of UCLA partners through co-sponsorships. Due to COVID-19, many of our events and co-sponsored events were converted to virtual platforms or postponed. Our annual Awards Reception will be postponed to next year and will feature activist leader Alicia Garza as the keynote speaker.

CSW Co-sponsored Events

During 2019-2020, CSW disbursed $3,950 in co-sponsorship funds to foster innovative scholarship and build an intellectual community with other UCLA entities. Recipients of funds are determined via an application process and on a first-come, first-serve basis. The event must be hosted or initiated by another UCLA unit and have a clear relevance to CSW’s mission of cultivating a community of scholars studying women, sexuality, and gender across disciplines. In order to be considered for a co-sponsorship, the event must include a research component. Due to COVID-19, some co-sponsored events were held virtually or postponed. CSW allowed units to carry forward their co-sponsorship funds if the events were rescheduled to next academic year.

C. Co-sponsorships

CSW is invested in building collaborative and interdisciplinary partnerships throughout campus, particularly by seeking co-sponsorships to support CSW-organized events and awarding co-sponsorships to other UCLA entities whose events and projects support CSW’s mission. Below are breakdowns of the financial co-sponsorships CSW received and distributed over the year.

D. Publications

During 2019-2020, CSW’s publications included eScholarship publications, blog posts, videocasts, and a weekly electronic newsletter.

eScholarship Publications
CSW publishes a select number of working papers, policy briefs, and conference papers and posters on the UC system's open-access publication website, eScholarship. In 2019-2020, CSW published five Gender and Water working papers (see section VII.B. for authors and titles), three Thinking Gender papers, and five Thinking Gender poster presentations. All can be accessed at https://escholarship.org/uc/csw.

Blog Posts
Our Chemical Entanglements blog continued in 2019-2020 with the publication of two blog posts by members of the Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Group. In addition to the Chemical Entanglements blog, CSW published blog posts by UCLA faculty and students, spotlighting ongoing research in our mission areas and showcasing the work of our award recipients. These include six blog posts reporting on research by faculty and student award winners. We also published blog posts announcing CSW news, upcoming events, and the research of visiting... speakers, including seven posts regarding Thinking Gender 2020. For a list of blog posts, see Appendix 13.

Videocasts

2019-2020 videocasts include the Thinking Gender 2020 keynote opener, keynote address, keynote panel, keynote exhibit, and 18 presentations delivered by graduate students at Thinking Gender 2020. In addition, three of CSW’s promotional videos (aka “sizzle reels”) spotlighting CSW research streams, were updated. All videos are available on the CSW YouTube channel. For a list of videocasts with links, see Appendix 14.

Weekly Electronic Newsletter

CSW publishes the Weekly Update, an electronic newsletter featuring announcements of upcoming CSW, campus, and community events; announcements of new publications, awards, and other CSW news; and other related material. Members of our community are invited to submit items for inclusion in the Weekly Update, and we view the newsletter as an important information-sharing service. Between July 1, 2019, and June 30, 2020, CSW published 42 issues of the Weekly Update (including a year-in-review compilation at the end of the academic year).

E. Outreach and Community Building

---

Social Media

CSW maintains an active social media presence on Facebook and Twitter. We use these platforms to publicize our events, programs, publications, and award opportunities, and to engage with members of our community both on- and off-campus.

In addition to posting announcements about CSW events and programs, we also share news of UCLA faculty and student achievements, campus and community events, and other items related to our mission areas. In doing so, we aim to provide a service to members of our community.

At time of writing, CSW has 1762 followers on Facebook, which is a 13 percent increase from this time last year.

Between July 1, 2019, and June 30, 2020, we published 122 Facebook posts, which our followers have engaged with a total of 966 times. These engagements include 76 shares, 778 likes, and 112 comments.

On Twitter, CSW is active under the handle @UCLA_CSW and has 724 followers, which is a 13 percent increase from this time last year. We posted 117 tweets between July 1, 2019, and June 30, 2020. Tweets have been liked, responded to, or retweeted 532 times.
In June 2020, CSW created an Instagram profile under the handle @UCLACSW and has amassed 26 followers at time of writing.

E-mail List Circulation Numbers
CSW regularly sends updates and publications to the following e-mail lists:

- General Outreach List: 3259 subscribers
- UCLA Faculty, Staff, and Students: 2219 subscribers
- California Contacts (faculty, researchers, and university departments in California; used for major announcements only): 1754 subscribers
- Non-California Contacts (faculty, researchers, and university departments outside of California; used for major announcements only): 1050 subscribers
- CSW Affiliated Faculty: 188 subscribers
- CSWAC Members: 83 subscribers
- Research Affiliates: 15 subscribers

Class Visits
In-person visits to UCLA classes have become one of CSW’s most effective modes of conducting program outreach. This practice also raises awareness of our work among UCLA students, increasing our impact and reach throughout the UCLA community. During the 2019-2020 academic year, in addition to conducting e-mail outreach, we visited classes and invited students to attend CSW events.

- Thinking Gender 2020: Call for Proposals Outreach
- 13 undergraduate classes in African American Studies, Anthropology, Asian American Studies, Gender Studies, English, Health Policy and Management, History, International Development Studies, and Nursing
- 14 graduate classes in African American Studies, Anthropology, Asian American Studies, Chicana/o Studies, Community Health Sciences, Gender Studies, History, Law, Public Policy, and World Arts and Cultures/Dance

As a land grant institution, the Department of Gender Studies and Center for the Study of Women at UCLA acknowledge the Gabriélino/Tongva peoples as the traditional land caretakers of Tovaangar (Los Angeles basin, So. Channel Islands).
In the early 1980s, Mozambique was in its first decade of independence under a socialist government that supported women’s issues. This talk will report on a single provincial-level meeting of the women’s organization in 1983 that included extended discussion about policy issues that affected women. The official approach of Frelimo, the ruling party, called for an end to "traditional" practices such as polygyny and bridewealth, while local women activists continued to see value in such practices and pushed back against the government perspective.
Kimberly Durdin is a leading figure in the reproductive justice movement. A lactation consultant, childbirth educator, doula, and midwife, in 2018 she and business partner Allegra Hill, opened Kindred Space LA, a birth, lactation and education space. They are co-founders of the Birthing People Foundation, a non-profit established to train birth workers of color. Durdin holds a master's degree in public health and is currently a graduate student in the joint MD/Sociology doctoral program at UCLA. Her areas of expertise include medical Sociology; race and ethnicity; social movements; critical race theory; gender and sexuality; and Black Feminist Thought.

The UCLA Black Feminism Initiative Presents:

BLACK FEMINISM, CARE, + REPRODUCTIVE JUSTICE IN URGENT TIMES:
A PUBLIC TALK BY KIMBERLY DURDIN

This event focuses on the innovative historical and ongoing care practices and visions for justice that Black women have developed to confront institutionalized reproductive racial violence that has rendered Black women and children gravely precarious in the medical system. Kimberly Durdin will be joined in discussion by UCLA doctoral student Ariel Hart. Q&A to follow.

In this groundbreaking history, Pamela Nadell asks what does it mean to be a Jewish woman in America? Weaving together stories from the colonial era’s matriarch Grace Nathan and her great-granddaughter poet Emma Lazarus to union organizer Bessie Hillman and the great justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Nadell shows two threads binding the nation’s Jewish women: a strong sense of self and a resolute commitment to making the world a better place. Informed by the shared values of America’s founding and Jewish identity, America’s Jewish women – the well-known and the scores of activists, workers, wives, and mothers whose names linger on among their communities and families—left deep footprints in the history of the nation they call home.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Pamela Nadell holds the Patrick Clendenen Chair in Women’s and Gender History at American University where she received the university’s highest award, Scholar/Teacher of the Year. Her books include Women Who Would Be Rabbis: A History of Women’s Ordination, 1889-1985, which was a finalist for a National Jewish Book Award. A past president of the Association for Jewish Studies and the recipient of the American Jewish Historical Society’s Lee Max Friedman Award for distinguished service, her consulting work for museums includes the National Museum of American Jewish History and the Library of Congress.

Chemical Entanglements

UCLA Center for the Study of Women

Fall 2019 Work Plan

Objective:

Chemical Entanglements examines how exposure to environmental toxicants and chemicals disproportionately impacts the health, lives, and well-being of women, people of color, and those of lower socioeconomic status. Students taking this course will receive hands-on experience doing collaborative social science research; they will learn ethnographic methods such as interviewing and conducting oral histories, transcribing interviews, analyzing data, as well as outreach and implementation of their work. By the end of the quarter, students will have a better understanding of the process of conducting feminist research, and will have made significant contributions to an ongoing research project.

Work Goals:

• As a group, code the existing transcripts, analyzing for common themes.
• Complete transcriptions and accompanying material (time logs, table of contents, names list), time permitting.
• Conduct 1 oral history interview, time permitting.
• Final presentation on analysis.

Center for Accessible Education (CAE):

Students needing academic accommodations based on a disability should contact the Center for Accessible Education (CAE) at (310) 825-1501 or in-person at Murphy Hall A255. When possible, students should contact the CAE within the first two weeks of the term as reasonable notice is needed to coordinate accommodations. For more information visit www.caee.ucla.edu.

Academic Honesty:

Cheating and plagiarism of any kind will not be tolerated. Infractions of the student conduct code will be reported to the Dean of Students. Plagiarism is treated very seriously at UCLA. Any suspicion of plagiarism may result in severe repercussions, including academic probation and expulsion.

“Plagiarism includes, but is not limited to, the use of another's words or ideas as if they were one's own; including, but not limited to representing, either with the intent to deceive or by the omission of the true source, part of or an entire work produced by someone other than the student, obtained by purchase or otherwise, as the student's original work; or, representing the identifiable but altered ideas, data or writing of another person as if those ideas, data or writing were the student's original work.”

Citation rule of thumb: Always cite any idea that isn’t your own – this includes ANY website or internet source. Remember: Even if you change something so that it is in your own words, you still need to cite your source! When in doubt, ask your project advisors for help. We are always happier to answer questions and address concerns than we are to discover academic dishonesty.

Schedule

Week 1: Introduction

During Week 1, we will introduce the course and outline the aims and deliverables.

- Group introduction
- Discuss what Chemical Entanglements is:
  - CSW chemical entanglements web page: https://csw.ucla.edu/cswresearch/chemical-entanglements/
  - Using Rann’s (2017) blog post, choose a household product OR a part of your everyday routine (i.e. showering). Consider how we expose ourselves to toxicants, how ingrained they are in our lifestyle.
- Assignment:
  - Read interview questions, and the following transcripts on Box: Rowena Illagan, Lise Melhorn-Boe, and Sossity Chiricuzio. While reading the transcripts, think about which interview(s) went well, and what makes a good interview.

Week 2: Oral Histories

- Discuss the Illagan, Melhorn-Boe, and Chiricuzio transcripts. What makes a good interview?
- Introduce oral histories as a method. What are oral histories? Why would we choose to utilize oral histories, and how are they different from other types of ethnographic interviewing?
- Activity: Practice interviewing with a partner. Things to consider include: How to ask follow-up questions; how to draw people into conversation (e.g., if they don’t speak very much); being careful not to ask leading questions. Afterwards, ask students to reflect on the activity and share tips.
- Assignments:
Appendix 3: Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Research Group Work Plans

  http://www.cla.csulb.edu/departments/history/oral-history-program/an-oral-history-primer/
- Think about the three transcripts we’ve read: What did we find interesting? Are there any common themes we’ve noticed so far?

Week 3: Copyright Presentation

- Oral historian Teresa Barnett will be coming in to discuss copyright.
- Assignment:
  - Read Annie Carvalho transcripts in the order below. While reading, consider the work involved in creating an accurate and coherent transcription. What are some steps we can take if we’re unsure of something said in the interview audio before asking the interviewee?
    - 190930 Carvalho Annie Transcript Final
    - Carvalho Annie Transcript Final WITH EDITS
    - Carvalho Annie Transcript Final CLEAN COPY
  - Read Donald A. Ritchie, Doing Oral History, Chapter 3.

Week 4: Transcription I

- Any questions on Teresa Barnett’s presentation, or the readings?
- Discuss the Carvalho transcripts and the transcribing process.
- Assignments:
  - Re-read Illagan and Melhorn-Boe transcripts and mark interesting themes on Box.

Week 5: Thematic Coding I

- Discuss Illagan and Melhorn-Boe transcripts as a group, go over themes.
- Introduce thematic coding.
- Assignment:
  - Re-read Chiricuzio transcript and mark interesting themes.

Week 6: Thematic Coding II

- Discuss Chiricuzio transcript and add codes to our code list.
- Assignments
  - Read raw Sherrie Truitt transcript.
  - Think about what codes interest you for a final project.

Week 7: Transcription II

- Activity: Practice transcribing with a partner. Conduct a 5-minute interview, then have another person transcribe it.
- Discuss Truitt transcript. With a partner, listen to the audio and discuss how you would edit the transcript.
- Assignment:
Appendix 3: Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Research Group Work Plans

- Continue transcribing Truitt.

Week 8: Intersectionality/Work on Final Project

- Watch: Kimberle Crenshaw, What is Intersectionality:
  https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ViDtnfQ9FHe
- Discuss intersectionality.
- Final project: What codes are the most interesting to you? What would you be interested in exploring for a final project?
- Assignment:
  - Continue working on Truitt transcript, Name List, TOC, and time log.
  - Brainstorm ideas for final project and come in with something to show me for Week 10.
  - Optional: Read Kimberle Crenshaw’s interview with Vox:

Week 9: Thanksgiving Week—no meeting

Week 10: Reflection

- Work on final project and have something to show me.
- Switch Truitt assignments and edit.
- Assignment:
  - Prepare for presentation.
  - Continue to edit Truitt.

Finals Week: Presentations

- Present final project on data analysis, consider how they want their work to impact larger conversations on chemicals, safety, gender, race, etc.

Chemical Entanglements Undergraduate Group
Spring 2020 Work Plan
Wednesdays, 9:30-10:30am

Instructors:
Kelsey Kim, CSW Graduate Student Researcher, kelsey@women.ucla.edu
Katja Antoine, CSW Program and Research Developer, kantoine@women.ucla.edu
Rachel C. Lee, Professor and Director, rlee@women.ucla.edu

Objective:

Chemical Entanglements examines how exposure to environmental toxicants and chemicals disproportionately impacts the health, lives, and well-being of women, people of color, and other marginalized groups. Students taking this Independent Study course will receive hands-on experience doing collaborative social science research with a primary focus on transcription and copyediting. Assignments may also include conducting oral history interviews, analyzing data, and outreach. By the end of the quarter, students will have a better understanding of the process of conducting feminist research and will have made significant contributions to an ongoing research project.

We will meet through Zoom on a weekly or bi-weekly basis depending on the group’s needs. In weeks when we do not meet, you will send a brief update of your work progress to Kelsey and Katja by Wednesday at 9:30am (e.g., “In the past week, I have worked on a first draft of Jane Smith’s transcript. I have completed X pages out of a total of Y pages, and I have spent a total of Z number of hours”). Please remember that 1 unit equals 3-5 hours of work (including the class meeting), so sign up for units accordingly. If you would like to sign up for more than two units, please discuss with Katja first.

Possible Assignments:

- Work on transcriptions and accompanying material
- Conduct interviews and create raw transcripts
- Translate interview material
- Final project: Write a blog post for CSW’s Chemical Entanglements website

Requirements

Students enrolled in 2 units (i.e., 6-10 hours/week for 10 weeks) are required to:

Transcribe 2 one-hour interviews OR 1 two-hour interview from raw draft to first draft, plus create a Table of Contents (TOC), timeline, and names list for the interview [estimated time: 8

1 Assignments may change due to time constraints and the needs for the research project. They may also differ for each student depending on your role in the project and enrolled number of units.

February 18th, 2020 - February 21st, 2020
Catalogue of The Female Struggle: An Exhibition

The female struggle has been a challenge humankind has experienced for centuries. The modern feminist movements have been critical in promoting equal rights and freedoms for women; however, goals have not nearly been reached. Thus, we decided to collaborate and curate an exhibition which embodies the female struggle. We are proud to have gained the support of Mariano Barkus, a world-renowned artist, who has been featured internationally as well as in numerous books. Our exhibition has also been supported by the UCLA Center for the Study of Women. We will be featuring three pieces which were commissioned by the Center for their Chemical Entanglements research initiative which were completed by Peggy Munson who personally struggled with chemical sensitivity issues herself. We hope to bring community awareness to the female struggle which has been underrepresented in our society for centuries through powerful and moving works.

"Seeing Fat" By: Mariona Barkus
In the Untitled print by Peggy Munson, the author portrays a woman who is wearing a gas mask while hugging a man. The lady seems to be wearing a gas mask due to the amount of perfume that the woman is wearing. Additionally, the man was also sent to the hospital due to the amount of perfume that the woman was wearing. When discussing this work in our group, we felt that this print was very reflective of our society as a whole. The women are under constant pressure to be perfect which is the main reason that women wear so much makeup and perfume. Although the woman tries to attract the man, she ends up harming him as she was the cause of him going to the hospital. Although the perfume of the women may smell good it has very harmful effects. We felt that Munson was trying to tell women that there are consequences for trying to be perfect, as women should not change themselves to attract men. Each woman should feel beautiful and perfect in their own way and not conform to social ideals.

Untitled By: Peggy Munson

In Peggy Munson’s other work, she displays the social message of the struggle that women have to deal with. The lady is sitting on a box titled “Access Denied!” as she is being scrutinized for being herself. This artwork also displays to us the message that women who are trying to better themselves, are not able to live up to their potential and work in a lab. Also, while discussing this in our group we felt that Peggy Munson was trying to use the idea of deodorant as a way to mask who a person truly is. We felt that the perfume was a metaphor for women trying to cover who they really are as women mask themselves in her perfume. Similarly to her other work, Munson is trying to express that women should be proud of who they are and not feel that they need to constantly change themselves.
In the third work by Peggy Munson there is a mobile home which has “SAFE” written on it while the woman and dog both are wearing masks. This also displays the message of women being not being able to feel beautiful in their own way as society has socially constructed norms. Nowadays, there are more products out there for women to use that harm the environment. Women should feel beautiful the way they are without the media promoting and pushing unnecessary products upon women. While discussing this artwork in our group, we felt that Peggy Munson was trying to display the message of how all these hair products that women are putting into their hair are harming the environment. Peggy Munson was trying to express that the environment was suffering due to these hair products. This led us to believe that it was a sign from the universe that it was time for women to get rid of their hair products and recognize their true beauty.

In conclusion, our exhibition aims to encompass numerous perspectives on the struggles many women face on a daily basis. Menstruation, body image, domestic abuse, and harsh chemical exposures are just a few of the several categories of obstacles women face. Although we try to expose our audience and community to a wide variety of exemplary artworks which depict the feminine struggle, hundreds of thousands of other works could have been included in our exhibition. As three male curators, we found this to be an extremely unique opportunity to take a different perspective on female obstacles through powerful and influential art.

KEYNOTE PANELISTS

WESHOYOT ALVITRE is a female illustrator and comic book artist. She has a BA in Fine Art and studied illustration and animation. She is Tongva and Scottish. Alvitre has contributed to many award-winning books, including the Eisner award-winning Umbrella Academy (Darkhorse Comics) and Little Nemo: Dream Another Dream (Locust Moon Press). Her most recent projects include art for the graphic novel GHOST RIVER (Native Realities Press/Library Company of Philadelphia/Pew Arts & Heritage) based on the Paxton Massacre of the Conestoga people in Philadelphia, At The Mountains Base (Kokila), and art direction on the educational video game When Rivers Were Trails, which gives a Native perspective on westward expansion of the 1890s. She is currently writing and drawing Toypurina: Our Lady of Sorrow.

MARIAME KABA is an organizer, educator, and curator who is active in movements for racial, gender, and transformative justice. She is the founder and director of Project NIA, a grassroots organization with a vision to end youth incarceration. She has co-founded multiple organizations and projects over the years, including We Charge Genocide, the Chicago Freedom School, the Chicago Taskforce on Violence against Girls and Young Women, Love & Protect, and most recently, Survived & Punished.

As a Researcher in Residence at the Barnard Center for Research on Women, Kaba works with Andrea J. Ritchie, fellow Researcher in Residence, on a new Social Justice Institute (SJI) initiative, Interrupting Criminalization: Research in Action.

Kaba is on the advisory boards of the Chicago Torture Justice Memorials, Critical Resistance, and the Chicago Community Bond Fund. Her writing has appeared in numerous publications, including The Nation Magazine, The Guardian, The Washington Post, In These Times, Teen Vogue, The New Inquiry, and more. She runs the Prison Culture blog. Kaba’s work has been recognized with several honors and awards.

MIMI KIM is a long-time advocate and activist working on issues of gender-based violence in communities of color. She is a co-founder of Incite!: Women, Transgender and Gender Non-Conforming People of Color Against Violence. In 2004, she established Creative Interventions, which helped to develop collective, liberatory, and non-criminalizing approaches to address and end domestic and sexual violence, and has worked actively to develop feminist community accountability and transformative justice political frameworks and practices. Kim’s research on the historical development of carceral feminism and the contemporary transformative justice movement includes The Carceral Creep: Gender-Based Violence, Race, and the Expansion of the Punitive State, 1973-1983 (2019). Kim is an Assistant Professor of Social Work at California State University, Long Beach.

EMILY THUMA is an Assistant Professor of U.S. Politics and Law at the University of Washington Tacoma, and formerly an Assistant Professor of Gender and Sexuality Studies at the University of California, Irvine. She researches and teaches at the intersections of 20th-century U.S. history and politics, feminist and queer studies, critical race and ethnic studies, legal studies, and carceral studies. Her book, All Our Trials: Prisons, Policing, and the Feminist Fight to End Violence, was published by the University of Illinois Press in 2019. A long-time participant in movements for racial and gender justice, Thuma is a member of the California Coalition for Women Prisoners and a co-coordinator, with Alisa Bierria, of the Feminist Decarceral Research Initiative.

SARAH HALEY (Moderator) is an Associate Professor of Gender Studies and African American Studies at UCLA. She has research and teaching investments in black feminism, gender history, carceral studies, labor, and black radicalism. She is the author of No Mercy Here: Gender, Punishment, and the Making of Jim Crow Modernity (UNC Press, 2016), which examines the lives of imprisoned women in the U.S. South from the 1870s to the 1930s and the role of carcerality in shaping cultural logics of race and gender under Jim Crow. She is currently working on a black feminist history of the rise of the contemporary carceral state that interrogates the role of state intrusion and violation of black domestic space. Her research has been supported by the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition, the Ford Foundation, and the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. She has also worked as a paralegal for the New York Office of the Federal Public Defender and as a labor organizer with UNITE-HERE.

Thinking Gender 2020: Sexual Violence as Structural Violence: Feminist Visions of Transformative Justice would not have been possible without the valuable input and contributions of our generous co-sponsors, keynote participants, faculty moderators, participating scholars and students, and the Thinking Gender 2020 Planning Committee.

First and foremost, the Center for the Study of Women would like to thank two leaders on campus who provide constant and substantial support of the conference and CSW as a whole: Dean of Social Sciences Darnell Hunt and Vice Chancellor of Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion Jerry Kang.

This year, we offered engaging components to enhance the conference experience, particularly Roundtable Sessions and an interactive Exhibit. The Roundtable Sessions stray from the traditional paper format by featuring the work of students with papers in development, allowing for more participation from scholars across the field. The Survived & Punished (S&P) Exhibit centers around a postcard-writing and petition-signing station as well as displays and digital media of short videos provided by S&P and the California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP), offering participants the opportunity to watch educational short videos about survivors of sexual and domestic violence imprisoned for self-defense, send postcards urging California Governor Newsom to decriminalize survivors and drop life without parole sentences of all survivors of domestic and sexual violence, and sign online petitions to free survivors in California prisons.

We also wish to acknowledge the members of the Thinking Gender 2020 Selection Committee: Rachel C. Lee, CSW Director; Grace Hong, CSW Associate Director and Thinking Gender 2020 Curator; Bri-Ann Hernandez, Thinking Gender 2020 Coordinator; Gillian Gower, CSW Interim Program and Research Developer; and Magally Miranda, UCLA Chicana/o Studies Graduate Student.

We thank UCLA Carnesale Commons, particularly Catering Sales Manager Jane Kim, for providing space and services.

Finally, we are fortunate to have a creative and hardworking Planning Committee for the Conference. We thank Grace Hong; Bri-Ann Hernandez; Kristina Magpayo Nyden, Management Services Officer; Melissa Jamero, Administrative Specialist; and Arielle Bagood, Program Coordinator. We are grateful for the contributions of our CSW student assistants and researchers: Rachel Forrest, Kelsey Kim, Joycelyn Liu, Aye Pyae, and Nic Yiu.
Thinking Gender is proud to be backed by UCLA Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion.

Renata Redford received her PhD in Italian from UCLA in 2016. Her dissertation, titled “Cartographies of Estrangement: Transnational Female Identity and Literary Narratives between Italy and Eastern Europe,” investigates a vital body of women’s writing in Italian about the estranging effects of migration in order to emphasize the articulation of a literary discourse that undermines conventional depictions of the Eastern European female migrant. She specializes in twentieth and twenty-first century Italian literature and culture with an emphasis on the intersection between fascism and communism. Her current research interests include an interdisciplinary approach to the relationship between race, gender, and memory in Italian literature as they pertain to women writers, transnationalism, cosmopolitanism, and the Mediterranean.

Lara K. Schubert received her PhD in Religion in 2016 from Claremont Graduate University. Her areas of interest are two-fold: (1) exploring theories of subjectivity and empowerment in the context of Cambodia, and the friction between Cambodian women who are leaders in their religious communities and Cambodian women in local NGOs, and (2) documenting and analyzing the culture of structural engineering as part of a gender-in-science trajectory.

March 4, 2020

Janet Napolitano, President, University of California
Gene Block, Chancellor, UCLA
Emily Carter, Executive Vice Chancellor, UCLA

Dear President Napolitano, Chancellor Block, and EVC Carter:

We, the undersigned faculty leadership of UCLA’s Center for the Study of Women (CSW), write in support of UC 4 COLA organizers and in recognition of their longstanding efforts to negotiate a livable wage and benefits. We urge in the strongest possible terms that UCLA and UC leadership take swift action to increase graduate student funding and salaries, in accordance with the demands of UC 4 COLA organizers. We also ask that President Napolitano work to restore jobs and financial support to the graduate students at UC Santa Cruz who were dismissed from their teaching fellowships in retaliation for their organizing efforts.

From the beginning, CSW has worked to highlight and mobilize against our profession’s tendency to rely on, without adequately supporting, the labor of graduate students. While we are not a teaching unit, the intellectual labor and expertise of graduate students are vital to CSW operations. We simply could not exist without the contributions of our graduate student researchers who organize conferences, workshops, and lectures; design and conduct original research; and write and edit reports, grants, papers, and policy briefs, among countless other tasks. Our annual field-leading “Thinking Gender” conference centers graduate student research.

Graduate students are at the leading edge of their fields and represent the present and future of our profession. We note that our graduate student population is significantly more diverse in terms of gender and race than the professoriate, and so it is especially important to smooth the path for today’s graduate students to be tomorrow’s professors. What the UCSC and UCOP have done takes us in the opposite and wrong direction. Graduate students deserve a living wage that compensates them for their indispensable contributions to the UC’s research and teaching mission.
We stand in solidarity with graduate students and urge you to set a bold and positive example within our profession by doing everything possible to compensate them fairly.

Sincerely,

Rachel Lee, Director and Professor of English, Gender Studies, and the Institute of Society and Genetics

Sarah Haley, Associate Director and Associate Professor of Gender Studies and African American Studies

Grace Hong, Chair, Faculty Advisory Committee and Professor of Asian American Studies and Gender Studies

As leaders of academic units at UCLA dedicated to social justice, we stand in solidarity with those in Los Angeles and throughout the country fighting to end state violence against African Americans, Indigenous peoples, Latinx, Asian, and other communities of color. The murder of George Floyd at the hands of the Minneapolis Police Department as well as the recent killings of Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery, and Robert Avitia are the latest manifestations of a structure of white supremacy that has taken the forms of genocide, slavery, colonialism, incarceration, and exclusion, and extended beyond U.S. borders through imperialism.

In this historic moment, the coronavirus pandemic is laying bare the dramatic inequalities that characterize U.S. society, disproportionately affecting communities of color both through illness and economic effects. Millions of people, without work, witnessed a staggering lack of leadership and callousness from all levels of government. That basic public health principles did not guide the nation’s response has placed millions of people at risk, led to tens of thousands of needless deaths, required essential workers - many Black, Brown, and Indigenous - to engage in hazardous work with little protection, and exacerbated risk of infection and death among unhoused, detained and incarcerated populations and those living in other congregate settings. Despite the disproportionate impact of the pandemic on these communities and people living in poverty, more than 70% of the economic stimulus package went to corporations while many sat at home watching their businesses fail, their children go without schooling, their tables go empty of food and their rents come due. The righteous rage being expressed by protestors is not just about the on-going brutal murder of Black people, but also about long standing injustices at the core of U.S. society.

We affirm the solidarity among Black, Indigenous, Latinx, Asian and allied peoples in our research communities to abolish obvious examples of state violence–militarized security forces, the expansion of prisons and border detainment. We also actively oppose the mass disenfranchisement of people of color through voter suppression, the erosion of social and economic support systems for the poor, the underfunding of and limited access to public education, mass evictions and banishment from neighborhoods and cities, and structural inequities in access to healthcare and psychological support.

Our campus units have long been engaged in research and teaching about these dehumanizing and unjust systems. Our staff and faculty members work closely with students of color, allies, and our community partners and movement teachers in the struggle against oppressive ideas and structures. We reclaim and tell our stories through the arts and produce knowledge across many fields of study. We provide compelling data about the costs of human caging, health inequities (including COVID-19), and hate crimes. For many years, we have fought alongside Indigenous people, laborers, the undocumented, the imprisoned, and those seeking gender equity. We help shape policies and the enactment of legislation. And yet, there is much more to do.

We recognize that higher education remains implicated in such structures of violence and dispossession. To that end, we renew our commitment to enacting principles of abolitionism so that our endeavors of research, teaching, and service are not complicit with the expansion of the police state. We offer spaces to discuss not only the past and the present, but to also work toward a just future. We remember those who have come before us and seek to continue the unfinished work of liberation.

Chancellor Gene Block
Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Emily A. Carter

Dear Chancellor Block and Executive Vice Chancellor/Provost Carter,

As you are likely aware, Breonna Taylor was slain by police in her home on March 13th, inaugurating nationwide protests in her name. On June 15, 2020, thousands across the country rallied to demonstrate that Black trans lives matter. In this watershed moment in the history of Black organizing, public intellectuals, activists, and scholars have insisted that anti-black violence is gendered, and that Black feminism and Black queer study are crucial intellectual and political resources for imagining a transformed future anchored in racial justice. Many of the most vocal, public, paradigm-shifting and inspiring challenges to police and carceral violence have emerged from Black feminist and Black queer scholars (Kimberlé Crenshaw, Mariame Kaba, Ruth Wilson Gilmore, CeCe McDonald, and Angela Y. Davis to name a few).

Black life is multitudinous; therefore valuing it, as UCLA pledged to do in its May 30th letter, requires a commitment of resources that is both deep and broad. Some of these resources might be acquired by divesting from policing, as UCLA faculty, staff, students, alumni, and community members have demanded.

This letter urges UCLA to renew and expand its support of ongoing research and programming that advances Black study and cultural life in ways that both acknowledge and center the experiences of women and queer people and ensures that Black feminism as a central framework for the study of racial violence and racial justice be permanently supported.

One arena of such study and cultural life at UCLA is the Center for the Study of Women/Social Science Division Black Feminism Initiative (BFI). Launched only this past fall (2019) with initial support from the Center for the Study of Women and Social Sciences Dean Darnell Hunt, the BFI has promoted research on anti-blackness, gender, and state violence, and gender and racial justice by establishing the Alisa Bierría Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research and the Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research, both of which support the development of research that furthers the anti-carcelar feminist work of the public intellectuals for whom they are named. The BFI has supported emerging research through the Black feminism faculty-graduate workshop, a working group that focuses on the development of research in Black feminism by graduate students and faculty from an array of units in the arts and sciences, social sciences and humanities. This workshop has, by the accounts of its graduate student members, not only been a space of scholarly development but also a site of support in the face of institutionalized racism as constituted by gender and sexual oppression. The Initiative has also hosted programming on Black life, resistance, and institutionalized violence, with public events and workshops on topics including Black maternal and infant mortality, the history of national defense campaigns in support of criminalized survivors of domestic violence, as well as gender and empire. This summer, we are also launching a Black feminist mutual aid project, which is being led by graduate students.

The Initiative has also hosted programming on Black life, resistance, and institutionalized violence, with public events and workshops on topics including Black maternal and infant mortality, the history of national defense campaigns in support of criminalized survivors of domestic violence, as well as gender and empire.

All of this work has provided a volume of insight and direction for those invested in the intersection of gender and racial justice, yet in order to continue providing this resource to the UCLA community it must be permanently institutionally resourced. As it stands now, it is precarious and temporary.

The following are requests for the fostering and promotion of Black study and life at UCLA that makes gender and sexuality central to the endeavor.

- If, as members of the Combahee River Collective argued, “we cannot live without our lives,” we certainly cannot research, study, produce art, or contribute to the public good as UCLA asks us to do, without our lives, which depend upon safety from police violence. We therefore reiterate the demand of faculty, staff, and students for a thorough divestment from policing.

- Although we have not heard of such a commitment thus far, we certainly hope that UCLA has agreed to substantially increase funding for the critical race studies program, and specifically for Kimberlé Crenshaw’s pioneering policy work on police violence inflicted upon Black women. Professor Crenshaw’s work has quite demonstrably altered American politics for the better. Moreover, we join in the calls to devote substantially greater resources to institutions devoted to Black study at UCLA, such as the Ralph J. Bunche Center and the Department of African American Studies.
We also urge UCLA to demonstrate its expansive investment in Black life and study by:

1. Endowing the Black Feminism Initiative, including its programming fund to continue events anchored by activists, practitioners, and scholars that inform and inspire UCLA’s community on the gendered character of racial violence and racial justice movements; and its Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research and the Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research thereby ensuring the longevity of these awards to advance research on gender and race.

2. Funding a BFI visiting fellow in each of two years, which would support the development of in-progress work by scholars, artists, and/or community activists at the nexus of Black feminism/Black queer/trans studies research and the carceral state.

3. Providing a Triple-match of financial support granted in 2019 to the CSW gender and long-term sentencing project by the Luskin Institute on Inequality and Democracy.

4. Establishing an FTE for a hire suitable to the BFI and the Center for the Study of Racism, Social Justice, and Health (Dir. By Chandra Ford), a priority during twin crises of public health crisis and state violence.

5. Providing Substantial Funding for faculty and graduate research and programming in the field of Black trans/queer studies to be distributed across units primarily dedicated to the study of gender and sexuality at UCLA.

As optimists, we expect that UCLA will demonstrate its investment in the value of Black life at this pivotal moment by reflecting upon this request during the Juneteenth weekend of organizing and education, and reply expeditiously committing to these requests on Monday, June 22nd or sooner.

(by email)

Dear Chancellor Block and EVC Carter:

On March 10, 2020, UCLA suspended all in-person classes, as well as all on-campus meetings and events, in response to the novel coronavirus pandemic. The university, however, was declared an essential service, and some of its employees were declared essential workers. As instructors and members of academic departments, we were informed that all of our work--teaching, advising, committee, and other service work--would continue remotely, and that the university expected to proceed with business as usual, even in these disrupted circumstances.

At the same time, both public and private schools as well as childcare facilities, including UCLA’s own, shuttered. Private childcare and other forms of dependent care became unavailable, as the circumstances of quarantine dictated that individual households would need to remain isolated from one another.

Academic personnel with dependents are thus left in an impossible situation: we are working full-time for UCLA, and we are also providing full-time care to our dependents.

Every day, newspaper headlines declare a “childcare crisis” and, by extension, a career crisis for those workers who have been statistically shown to bear a much larger percentage of the burden of caregiving: women, people of color, and those who earn a lower wage in their household (see, for just one example, “Pandemic Could Scar a Generation of Working Mothers,” New York Times, June 3, 2020). Although the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Academic Personnel (in an email sent to faculty on May 13, 2020) has encouraged “deans and departments to keep in mind, as they appraise faculty performance in the coming years, the disparate burdens caused by COVID-19,” especially given that “there is good reason to believe that women bear more household burdens than men in terms of [dependent care],” and although adjustments have been made to the structure of fourth-year appraisals and other types of review, these measures are insufficient for the following reasons:
1. They do not compensate academic personnel for their role in keeping the university running while they were--and are--also providing full-time care to their dependents;
2. They do not make provisions for academic personnel should childcare, schooling, and other forms of dependent care remain unavailable;
3. They eschew real policy, instead asking academic personnel to rely on the good will of their department chairs and deans, in a way that leaves individual faculty members and instructors vulnerable to implicit bias, including sexism, racism, ableism, and class-based prejudice.

The undersigned express concern that there remains no coherent policy with regard to remediating the above. Conventionally, faculty are tasked with individually approaching their Chairs and Deans with their particular situations, hoping for a sympathetic ear, and negotiating an individualized solution. While in some cases this approach is helpful, it also can lead to intensifying disparities and greatly depends on there being no unconscious biases on the part of Chairs and Deans.

We urge the ramping up of a UCLA COVID childcare support program, the mission of which is to address, through a variety of creative and diverse solutions, the array of work-related impacts to caregiving faculty, graduate students, and staff as a result of closures of care facilities due to public health (COVID) directives. The target group whom the UCLA COVID childcare support program would serve are faculty, graduate students, and staff who, as a result of reductions in caregiver support as a function of COVID-related closures and safety concerns, have an increased and at least 50% caretaking responsibility1 for ○ one or more children under the age of 12
   ○ children of any age with a disability or illness
   ○ an adult dependent with impairment and/or illness.

Oversight of the support program would be delegated to a nimble task force comprised of 3-5 people drawn from the Academic Senate Committee on Childcare/Faculty Welfare, a representative (with caregiving experience) from a staff assembly body, such as the Staff Assembly or Administrative Management Group, and/or representatives from other gender-equity focused bodies on campus. We further urge that the following actions take place immediately, so as to mitigate the tangible ways in which unmet childcare needs have already impacted research productivity and teaching capacity of caregiving faculty, students, and staff on campus.

I. That a minimum of $1 million of funds raised in the Centennial Campaign be made available as current-use monies to provide ○ Direct reimbursement to faculty for out-of-pocket support for TAs and readers already expended (Spring 2020) or needed across AY 2020-21 to support teaching duties impacted by COVID-related caregiving demands;

1 Since the program’s aim is to enhance research and teaching obligations of university employees and to mitigate historical inequities, the qualification of at least 50% caretaking might be modified to include this additional caveat: where there is not another spousal partner in the home whose career is that of a stay-at-home caretaker.
Appendix 9: CSW Letters of Support and Advocacy

- Partial offset of newly increased, temporary childcare fees consequent upon social distancing requirements in university-sponsored or other private and public childcare;
- Technological equipment and support for a staff or GSR coordinator to facilitate the establishment of privately sited childcare pods\(^2\) among UCLA faculty, staff, and students;
- Other unanticipated expenses approved by the oversight task force in relation to the implementing of child- and elder-care solutions for faculty, students, and staff, as conditions change on the ground;
- After the above expenses are tallied for the period running from March 2020 until the reopening of regular child- and elder-care hours, a reimbursement of departments for expenses related to hiring substitute lecturers to replace faculty assigned Active Service Modified Duties (ASDM) (see item III below)

II. A buy-out equivalent of 50% temporary staff or GSR time for AY 2020-21 to support survey coordination and other task force needs in order to set up privately sited childcare pods; fielding of unanticipated and unique child- and elder-care needs due to the pandemic; mediating communications among impacted caregiving parties on campus, Senate oversight body, and upper administration; scheduling time-sensitive meetings and/or town halls to proactively support and buffer caregivers in these times of continuous policy changes; and tracking budgetary outlay for quarterly auditing by the oversight body

III. A Directive sent to Department Chairs and Deans by VC Levine that if an affected faculty member fails to secure alternative child- and/or elder-care arrangements, they be granted one to two quarters of ASMD\(^3\) for AY 2021-22, be offered the option to extend for up to a year the timing of their next personnel review, and have a waiver on all non-essential service (such as curriculum reform, attendance at non-essential faculty meetings) until child- and elder-care issues can be resolved

IV. A Directive sent from Graduate` Division to Department Chairs offering caregiving graduate students an extension of an additional one year on any time-to-degree

\(^2\) Childcare pods refer to privately contracted (sometimes informal) ‘babysitting’ arrangements that help households share expenses and pool resources of space, money, and time to have several children watched over safely. Entering into a pod means essentially sharing a quarantine bubble with the family members of the children in the pod. These pods will likely be small—three to five children—depending on numbers of siblings in these groups. Standard medical forms and waivers of liability (used for arranging carpools, e.g.) can be modified to assist in these arrangements.

\(^3\) The form of leave described by active service modified duties exists to acknowledge that it is impossible to be a full-time faculty member and a full-time caregiver. This is the situation in which many faculty now find themselves. We are therefore asking the university to expand the policy covered by ASMD leave or to introduce and implement a comparable leave policy that would materially counterbalance the inequities that have been exacerbated not just by COVID-19, but also by the university’s decision to maintain business continuity throughout the pandemic.
criteria in eligibility for housing, awards, grants, TA/GSR assignments, and the like; priority consideration for awarding of ongoing GSR appointments; and an extra year on the guarantees of funding and tuition waivers indicated in their acceptance letters

V. An allowance for asynchronous teaching modes or work-from-home policies relating to childcare and caregiving responsibilities of any sort. This should include a broad policy that would allow these choices to be made without fear of repercussion in terms of promotion and eligibility for GSR or TA assignments and graduate fellowships.

VI. A continued effort across AY 2020-21 and beyond to identify essential strategies of caring. This includes support systems within departments but also across the university for parents, children, and volunteer or paid childcare workers. It could include a sick-day bank for staff to donate sick days to other staff who need them to stay home and care for children and elders.

In drawing up these concrete suggestions, we have consulted research on gender and labor in higher education compiled by the Center for the Study of Women in Society at the University of Oregon (https://csws.uoregon.edu/labor-inequities-covid-19/) and the Women’s and Gender Studies Consortium of the University of Wisconsin System (https://uwosh.edu/was/), and expanded upon their forward-thinking requests. We would note that the latter organization places the childcare crisis in academia in the context of recently won diversification aims in STEM fields.

Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) Graduate Fellowships

The CSW Black Feminism Initiative (BFI) has established two fellowships to support intellectual work that centers Black feminist frameworks of analysis: The Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research and the Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research. In the tradition of abolitionist feminist activism and labor, the BFI Graduate Fellowships seek to advance Black feminist work on any topic with a focus on scholarship that interrogates historical and ongoing regimes of violence, enclosure, and captivity and offers original insights for conceiving of freedom, redress, abolition, and refusal. This is the inaugural year of the BFI Fellowships.

Alisa Bierria Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research Recipients:

Jaimie Crumley is a PhD student in Gender Studies. She earned her Master of Divinity and Master of Sacred Theology degrees at Yale Divinity School, and her Bachelor of Arts degree at Wellesley College. Her work explores the history of the free African American in the nineteenth-century United States through the lens of the Black Christian women who preached, taught, wrote, and lectured in Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, DC, and England.

Britnee Meitzenheimer is an MA student in African American Studies. Grounded in Black Feminist Studies, her thesis examines anti-Blackness as a structure that shapes discourses of migration and the precariousness of belonging and home for “UndocuBlack” Students. Through storytelling, this project seeks to grapple with questions about political agency and citizenship, embodiment and ways of knowing, racialization and gendering, deviance and normalcy. She holds a Master of Education from UC Riverside, focusing on Education, Administration, and Policy.

Mariame Kaba Graduate Fellowship in Black Feminist Research Recipients:

Bianca Beauchemin is a PhD candidate in Gender Studies. She obtained her bachelor’s degree with honors at York University with a Summa Cum Laude distinction. Her dissertation research explores the interplay of the unintelligibility of Black female sexuality and Black feminist possibilities through the spatial-temporal landscape of the Haitian Revolution. Some of her key sites of research interests also include Black diasporic studies, Black queer studies, Black feminist theory, postcolonial literature, feminist geography, queer of color critique, Caribbean history, and histories of slavery.

Zama Dube is a PhD student in Cinema and Media Studies. Her research is often preoccupied with the gnawing responsibility of trying to articulate what she has observed as the “precarity of Black creativity.” This is informed by years of experience as a South African radio broadcaster, voice-over artist, and television content researcher and producer. Her research interests explore the ccontributions of Black women media makers in envisioning decolonial visual representations of Black womanhood, the aestheticization and representation of Africa in the Hollywood imagination, and the liberatory aesthetics of Black cinema.

Ariel Hart is a joint MD/PhD student in the Charles R. Drew/UCLA Medical Education Program and UCLA Medical Scientist Training Program (MSTP). Prior to starting medical school, Hart received an MPH in Community Oriented Public Health Practice from the University of Washington. They have taught structural racism and public health practice courses, and worked as a child development researcher and anti-racist community organizer. Hart’s research interests lie at the intersection of Black feminist thought, social movements, and medical sociology. Their current project examines historical and modern-day Black birth-workers as creators of Black social life and futurity.

Constance Coiner Award

These awards honor the life and help continue the work of Constance Coiner, PhD 1987, who perished, along with her daughter Ana Duarte-Coiner, on TWA Flight 800, June 1996.

Graduate Award Recipient

Jenna Tamimi is a PhD candidate in Theater and Performance Studies. She received her master's in Performance Studies from New York University and her bachelor's in Theater and Feminist Studies from UC Santa Cruz. She will be starting a postdoc at Lewis and Clark College this Fall. Her research works at the intersections of performance studies, gender studies, queer studies, and historiography. Tamimi’s dissertation explores minoritarian subjects’ engagements with the past through different embodied practices.

Undergraduate Award Recipient

Samar Saif is a healer-in-progress; community organizer; multi-medium “artist”; and creator through shapeshifting means, modalities, and mediums; born and based in Los Angeles. Saif is an undergraduate honors student in Sociology and Gender Studies with a minor in LGBT Studies. Saif has worked in prison abolition, QTPOC organizing and programming, sexual violence advocacy, founded multi-media art collectives, and continues to host discussion spaces and workshops surrounding issues such as mental health in communities of color, racial fetishism, Indian fascism, and sharing healing modalities.

Elizabeth Blackwell, MD, Awards

This award recognizes an outstanding research report, master’s thesis, dissertation, or published article related to women and health or women in health-related endeavors.
Appendix 11: Student Award Recipients

Named for Elizabeth Blackwell, MD, the first woman to graduate from medical school, it is made possible by the generosity of Dr. Barbara “Penny” Kanner.

Graduate Award Recipients

Carrieanne Leschak is a PhD candidate in Social Psychology. She received her bachelor’s degree in Psychology, Sociology, and Criminology from the University of North Carolina Wilmington, and a master’s degree in Psychology from UCLA. Her research aims to understand the bidirectional relationship between social interactions and physical health. Her master’s thesis explored how olfactory dysfunction in females predicts mortality via reduced physical contact with others. Her ongoing research includes investigating links between social support and immune factors in female breast cancer survivors, as well as neural mechanisms of this link.

Jessica Shropshire is a PhD candidate in Social Psychology. She received a BS in Psychology and a BA in Global Health from Arizona State University. She also received an MA in Social Psychology from UCLA. Even before engaging with someone, people make a number of judgments about them from a brief glance. As such, visual cues, while informative, bias interpersonal judgments about other people. Shropshire's research investigates the role of visual cues in influencing a host of consequential judgments about individuals who vary along the dimensions of gender and race.

Undergraduate Award Recipient

Aneri Suthar is an undergraduate senior studying Human Biology and Society, International Development Studies, and Entrepreneurship. Her current campus involvements include USAC, UC Womxn’s Leadership Conference, Bruin Mental Health Advisory Committee, and Fellowship for International Service and Health (FISH). This summer, you can find her interning with the Profitable Good Group and The Giving Spirit before serving as a California Judicial Fellow next year. Suthar’s research and advocacy focuses on reproductive justice, which she hopes to study further in law school through a dual JD/MPH program.

Jean Stone Dissertation Research Fellowship

Made possible through the generosity of Mrs. Jean Stone, this fellowship funds an exceptional graduate student dissertation research project focusing on women or gender.

Fellowship Recipients

Amy Elizabeth Alterman (MPH) is a PhD candidate in Culture and Performance. Working at the nexus of performance studies, gender studies, anthropology, and public health, she applies feminist and performance theory to current sexual and reproductive health problems. Based on two years of ethnographic research, her dissertation analyzes the obstacles, resiliencies, and support networks associated with independent abortion clinics in the United States—spotlighting the Abortion Access Front comedy show as an arts-based public health intervention. Her work has been published in Contraception, The Journal of Adolescent Health, and other publications.

Megan Baker (Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma) is a PhD candidate in Anthropology and Research Associate for Choctaw Nation Historic Preservation. Her dissertation examines the gendering and racializing work of instituting private property in Choctaw treaty lands and its effects on contemporary Choctaw economic development in Oklahoma. She holds an MA in American Indian Studies from UCLA and a BA in Race and Ethnicity Studies from Columbia University.

Marta Bornstein is a PhD candidate at the Fielding School of Public Health in Community Health Sciences. Within public health, Bornstein is committed to scholarship that embodies the true vision of reproductive rights: helping people achieve their reproductive goals, whatever they may be. Her dissertation explores the interrelatedness and health impacts of a spectrum of reproductive experiences, including both unintended pregnancy and infertility, in Malawi. Prior to UCLA, she worked on issues ranging from HIV/STD prevention to maternal health infrastructure. She earned her MPH from Tulane University and BA from Beloit College.

Hannah Carlan is a PhD candidate in Anthropology. Her work broadly addresses the gendered politics of multilingualism in contemporary India, with particular emphasis on how everyday linguistic practices shape rural development efforts in the Himalayas. Previously, she has conducted research on the linguistic politics of gendered violence in digitally-mediated contexts, and on the relationship between language, class, and joking practices in the South Asian diaspora. Hannah holds an MPhil in Social Anthropology from the University of Cambridge and a BA in Anthropology and Linguistics from New York University.

Fellowship Recipients*

Estefanía Castañeda Pérez is a PhD candidate in Political Science. Her research interests include state violence, discrimination, and gender at the Mexico-US border. She is a National Science Foundation Graduate Research Fellowship Program Fellow and Ford Predoctoral Fellow. Castañeda Pérez’s research projects have been motivated by her experience commuting daily from Tijuana to San Diego for a transborder pursuit of education. Her dissertation examines the impacts of state violence at the Mexico-US border on transborder commuters’ mental health, sense of belonging, and legal consciousness.

Lucía León is a PhD candidate in Chicana/o Studies. She grew up in Orange County, where she began organizing with undocumented youth and their families in the mid-2000s. Her research interests include immigration law, legalization process, immigrant families, undocumented young adults, race/ethnicity, gender, and sexuality. Her dissertation is an intersectional examination of the consequences of immigration law for undocumented young adults navigating the marriage-based legalization process.

*Due to an available balance in funds, additional awards were given this academic year.

Penny Kanner Dissertation Research Fellowship

Made possible through the generosity of Dr. Barbara “Penny” Kanner, the Penny Kanner Dissertation Research Fellowship funds an exceptional dissertation research project that pertains to women or gender that uses historical materials and methods.

Fellowship Recipients*

Jessica Horvath Williams is a PhD candidate in English. She is affiliated with Gender, Women, and Sexuality Studies at the University of Minnesota and co-chairs the Critical Disability Studies Collective. She teaches and researches at the crossroads of nineteenth-century US literature and feminist disability studies, with emphasis on questions of women’s writing, domestic labor, and literary form. She is a disability activist in the Twin Cities, educating healthcare professionals on disability, intersectionality, and health equity.

Kali Tambreé is a PhD student in Sociology. Her work largely considers historiographic and archival accounts of living and dying in the Middle Passage of the transatlantic slave trade. She is from Baltimore.

Madina Thiam is a PhD candidate in History, working on the social and intellectual histories of the Sahel in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Her dissertation investigates the mobilities and freedom strategies of itinerant Muslim figures from present-day Mali. It draws on archival and oral research conducted in Mali, Senegal, France, England, Ireland, and Jamaica. She also

Policy Brief Prize

CSW’s Policy Brief Prize was created to support and promote applied feminist scholarship by graduate students at UCLA. For the 2019-2020 Policy Brief Series, we accepted submissions UC-wide as well as from system-impacted authors, including formerly incarcerated authors, for the first time.

UC Graduate Student Prize Recipients

June Kuoch is a master’s student in Asian American Studies at UCLA. They have a background in community organizing on immigration/refugee rights, police violence, and LGBTQ+ issues. They have been involved with grassroots formations such as ReleaseMN8, Freedom Inc., and the Southeast Asian Freedom Network (SEAFN).

Boké Saisi is a PhD Candidate in Ethnic Studies with a graduate specialization in Critical Gender Studies at UC San Diego (UCSD). She previously graduated with an MA in Ethnic Studies from UCSD and an MA in Communication and Culture from York University in Toronto, Canada. Her research interests include Black feminist thought, Indigenous and decolonial feminisms, critical gender studies, mad studies, critical disability studies, carceral studies, media studies, and political economy. Her dissertation, “Barred By the Maddening State: Black and Indigenous incarceration in women’s prisons in the US and Canada,” examines the intersections of anti-Black racism, settler colonialism, heteropatriarchy, and sanism in contemporary practices of incarceration.

Rosie Stockton is a graduate student in Gender Studies at UCLA. Their research focuses on the role of cultural and educational programming in anti-carceral movement building. They are a member of the California Coalition of Women Prisoners (CCWP) and are currently working on the DROP LWOP (Life Without Parole) Campaign. Before moving to Los Angeles, they facilitated the Writers’ Bloc poetry workshop at the Women’s Huron Correctional Facility in Michigan.

System-Impacted Prize Recipients

Jane Dorotik is a Registered Nurse and healthcare professional who worked for many years in community mental health administration. She had been incarcerated for almost 20 years on a wrongful conviction that she relentlessly works to overturn. She was recently released pending COVID-19 concerns and is fighting her case from the outside. She is a member of the California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP), a current member of the Board of Directors of Californians United for a Responsible Budget (CURB), and a former board member of Justice Now. She also founded Compassionate Companions, an organization within the California Institution for Women (CIW) that provides care and companionship for terminally ill incarcerated people, and founded and published the CIW newsletter Strive High for eight years. She advocates for prison abolition as well as dignity and compassion for her fellow prisoners, especially those who are terminally ill.

Romarilyn Ralston is the Program Director of Project Rebound at the California State University, Fullerton (CSUF), which provides formerly incarcerated students with tools and opportunities to help them thrive as scholars. She is also an organizer with the California Coalition for Women Prisoners (CCWP) and an alumna of California’s Women’s Policy Institute. Ralston holds a BA with honors in Gender and Feminist Studies from Pitzer College and an MA in Liberal Arts from Washington University.

Joanne Scheer is the founder of the Felony Murder Elimination Project, a growing group of concerned citizens whose goal is the elimination of the felony murder rule from California law. When her only child was convicted under the felony murder rule and sentenced to the death sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole, she began the work of bringing an end to one of the most heinous of California’s laws. Striving not only to eliminate the felony murder rule, the Felony Murder Elimination Project endeavors to bring relief to those who are serving harsh and disproportionate sentences imposed by the rule’s application. With nothing but the resolve to eliminate a law that so easily and unjustly sentences youth to death, she sponsored Assembly Bill 2195 in 2016, co-sponsored Senate Concurrent Resolution 48 in 2017, and co-sponsored Senate Bill 1437 in 2018, which virtually eliminated second-degree felony murder and the natural and probable consequences doctrine. She continues to fight for the elimination of first-degree felony murder and special circumstances.

Renaissance Award

This scholarship, made possible through the generous donation of Dr. Myrna Hant, rewards the rebirth of academic aspirations among women whose college careers were interrupted or delayed by family and/or career obligations and encourages achievement in the pursuit of a bachelor’s degree at UCLA.

Award Recipient

Rebecca Redmond is an undergraduate honors student in Sociology and African American Studies. She returned to UCLA as a non-traditional transfer student after a 12-year absence from academia spent working and raising her three children, Isaiah, KT, and Kingston. She is an Alfrey Blue and Gold Scholar, Bernard Osher Scholar, UCOP Black Staff and Faculty Scholar, and a Graduate Opportunity Fellowship recipient. Following graduation in June, Redmond will pursue a Master of Social Welfare at the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs.

Project title: Discrepancies between origin and host environments among pregnant Mexican-American women: implications for transgenerational health in a minority population

PI: Molly Fox, PhD, Assistant Professor, Anthropology

Introduction

The overarching goal of this project is to examine how degree of contrast between a woman’s life and environment before versus after migration may relate to her health and well-being. A primary goal of this project is to develop novel methods for measuring degree of contrast between a woman’s life and environment before versus after migration. This project focuses on pregnant women because any aspect of the mother’s life that affects her physiology during pregnancy has the potential to transmit differential signals to the developing fetus and thereby play a role in shaping offspring traits. I posit that this construct could represent an independent stressor or moderator of stress effects that has been otherwise overlooked in studies of intergenerational transmission of stress among minority populations.

This project utilizes participants from my ongoing Mothers’ Cultural Experiences (MCE) study, which involves self-identified Hispanic pregnant women recruited from prenatal clinics in Southern California. MCE is a 2-wave, multi-site study designed to evaluate how the socio-cultural changes that occur among Hispanic immigrants may become ‘biologically embedded,’ and in the case of pregnant women, could affect certain biological pathways that influence fetal developmental programming of offspring chronic disease risk. Wave 1 is a cross-sectional survey examining how women’s experiences of immigration, acculturation, national politics, and family relationships influence psychological states. Then, Wave 2 began in late 2018, and is a prospective, longitudinal study of a new cohort with 3 sessions across pregnancy and postpartum comprising questionnaires, saliva, urine, and blood sample collection.

1. How has this grant benefited your research?

Aim 1: Recruit graduate and undergraduate research assistants - COMPLETED

I conduct this project alongside a graduate-undergraduate research team who work under my close supervision. At the start of the project period, I advertised a graduate research position and interviewed the top three candidates. I hired Valeria Vasquez, a Masters student in the School of Public health studying Health Policy and Management. I identified a team of four undergraduates who were already volunteering in my MCE project: Waania Beg, Celeste Castro, Cynthia Zarate, and Alexis Tenorio. In April 2019 (three months before the planned end of CSW project period), Vasquez had to quit earlier than expected because of a full-time job opportunity. This was the reason for the no-cost extension—the project was paused while I recruited a new graduate student research assistant. I hired another student quickly in April 2019, but by July 2019, it was clear this new student was not able to fulfill the duties of the position, so I had to end their role with the project. On July 30, 2019, I hired a new graduate student research assistant, Sarah Barney, a Masters student in the School of Public Health studying Environmental Health. She fulfilled the position until the CSW grant period ended.

Aim 2: Literature reviews - COMPLETED
Appendix 12: Faculty Research Grant Progress Report, Molly Fox

I familiarized this graduate-undergraduate team with the CSW project and research questions through directed readings and weekly discussions throughout the entire project period. Each undergraduate was assigned to select one of the assigned readings and give a PowerPoint presentation on the topic to my lab group. Additionally, Vasquez coordinated with me to oversee an annotated bibliography project. Each of the four undergraduate students was taught about the concept and style of annotated bibliographies and wrote an annotated bibliography on a sub-topic related to the CSW project goals. They handed in their annotated bibliographies on March 17, 2019.

Aim 3: Questionnaire design - COMPLETED

Based on literature reviews, group discussions, and preliminary analyses from MCE Wave 1, I designed a series of questionnaires to implement in MCE Wave 2. The CSW project graduate-undergraduate student team assisted with English to Spanish translations. The students who participated more in question design were two PhD students in my lab group who were not previously part of the CSW project. Questions covered the topics of descriptions of the social, demographic, and physical environments of where you were born and where you lived longest before you moved to the United States; interactions and visits to the United States prior to moving; subjective assessment of how different between pre/post move places you find daily life, people and community, family structure, value systems, religiosity (adapted from the Mexican American Cultural Values Scale, Knight et al. 2010); reasons for moving; frequency of relocations; who you knew in the United States; where family and friends live now; plans for others to join. We take two approaches for comparing the environments by asking participants to separately characterize each place with the same set of questions, and also asking for direct subjective comparisons.

Aim 4: Questionnaire administration – COMPLETED

I began administering the new questionnaire designed for my CSW project in December 2019 with the start of MCE Wave 2. Upon completion of the CSW grant period, the complete cohort of N=100 women was reached.

Aim 5: Data cleaning - COMPLETED

I aimed to examine already-collected data from MCE Wave 1 (2016-2018) to see if we could answer any aspects of our CSW research questions using these data, even though the new questionnaires were not implemented. These data derived from paper handwritten forms and had been physically entered into an electronic database by research assistants. Data was entered in duplicate, and many errors existed, as is typical for hand-entered data. I hired (using non-CSW funds) another graduate research assistant, Kotrina Kajokaite, to oversee a team of 20 undergraduate research assistants conducting data cleaning. Kajokaite wrote code to compare data entries and flag discrepancies. Students compared discrepant data with handwritten paper forms. In weekly meetings plus as-needed, my team and I discussed ambiguous cases and resolved issues. Kajokaite also worked with me to resolve out of range and impossible values. In April 2019, data cleaning was completed and Kajokaite’s appointment with me ended.

Aim 6: Data analyses – SOME COMPLETED, SOME ONGOING

In May 2019, I began data analyses for MCE Wave 1 data in order to address the questions in my CSW project. Methods include exploratory and confirmatory factor analysis, multiple linear regression, and structural equation modeling. Predictor variables reflect participants’ immigration history, ethnic identity, acculturation, perceived discrimination, cultural values, neighborhood safety, neighborhood cultural orientation of people and the built environment, cultural compatibility with participant’s mother, mother-in-law, and the baby’s biological father. Outcome variables reflect depression, state anxiety, pregnancy specific anxiety, perceived stress, and happiness.

2. Concrete deliverables
Appendix 12: Faculty Research Grant Progress Report, Molly Fox

Submitted manuscript
Thus far, the analyses have yielded one manuscript, “Discrimination as a moderator of the effects of acculturation and cultural values on mental health among pregnant and postpartum Latina women,” submitted to American Anthropologist [on February 17, 2020]. The paper explores the relationships between cultural orientation, traditional gender roles values, familism obligation and familism referent values discrimination, and mental health. These observations help elucidate the dynamic interplay between individual and community-level factors in etiology of minority health disparities, and emphasize the essential role of women's mental health in this process.

Undergraduate Research Week 2020
A group of four undergraduates presented a poster entitled “Testing environmental mismatch and cultural identity: Its role on mental health in an immigrant pregnant Latina populations” based on preliminary analyses of my CSW project, implementing statistical data analysis and interpretation.

3. What else do you plan to accomplish?

Masters student project
I am advising a new Masters student in a project building off my CSW project, exploring how changes in neighborhood and household environments affect maternal mental and physical health among pregnant Latinas.

Manuscript co-authored with PhD students
I am working with two PhD students to draft a manuscript that grows out of my CSW project, entitled “The role of perceived individual versus neighborhood cultural identity on maternal mental health in a pregnant Latina population.” We have drafted the pre-registration and are currently editing it. Our plan is to submit to Social Science & Medicine within the next couple of months.
